Hot Pursuit for Valverde

Mexican Rebel Leader Fled to Relatives Across the Border, Belief

Prisoners Taken in Battle Saturday to be Tried at Chihuahua

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Oct. 1.—Federal authorities on both sides of the border tonight are searching for Feliciano Valverde, leader of the revolt of the Forty-third battalion in Juarez Saturday, which was smashed by Gen. J. J. Ruiz, garrison commander.

Belief that he had escaped to El Paso, where it was said he has friends and relatives, was strengthened when three horses were taken from a regimental stable by Capt. Valdez were found this morning. One of the horses was identified as that ridden by the captain during the fight.

Fifty-nine soldier prisoners will be taken to Chihuahua City for trial by a military court, Gen. Eugenio Martinez, northern military commander, announced.

While the general would not commit a statement as to what the finding probably would be, court-martial of rebel forces often results in execution.

CASUALTIES LISTED

Juarez was restored to its old "joie de vivre" tonight. Streets were crowded, while cafes and saloons did a rushing business. Save for gossip on the street, there was no indication that a portion of the garrison had revolted Saturday morning and had been defeated in battle.

AMERICA AS PEACEMAKER?

Secretary Hughes Keeping Close Vigil on Near East Situation; May Offer to Mediate

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The State Department obviously regards the situation in the Near East as extremely grave. Secretary of State Hughes is now giving his entire time to the reports that are coming in from Constantinople, Rome, Venice, Paris and London. The government, it was said today, does not contemplate any additional steps at this time beyond those already taken last week.

Thus far the government has found it sufficient to let the world know that it approves the demand of the Allies in Europe that the Dardanelles be internationalized and it has ordered dispatched to Constantinople twelve additional destroyers, which are to be used for the benefit of American citizens and American property.

NEW WORLD WAR MENACE

Dispatches today from Admiral Bristol at Constantinople indicate that the representatives of this government have been active in relief work and that still much of that sort of work remains to be done. According to these dispatches the need for supplies of all kinds is great.

The possibility exists, it was said in official quarters, of President Harding issuing an appeal to the people of the United States to know their offerings of help. Whether this will be done will be determined by the advices the government hopes to receive from Constantinople within the next two or three days.

The great concern of President Harding and Secretary Hughes, it appears to be seen today, is over the possibility of Great Britain and the Turkish Nationalist government failing to come to an agreement. It is seen how the torch that has been lighted might easily lead to another world war, which in its horror would, in all probability, overshadow the recent war.

RESPONSIBILITY GREAT

Men high in the councils of the government here admit today that it is almost unthinkable that another general war is possible and yet this government's information on this subject is most disquieting.

The responsibility that rests on Secretary Hughes at the moment is great. He realizes, of course, that many people in this country believe the United States would serve as a peacemaker at this time and should so serve.

For the present, the Secretary will not discuss the situation. His attitude is that it is a good time for the United States not to do too much talking. Some of the best informed men here believe that if the situation does not show improvement within the next few days this government will undertake to exercise its good offices with a view to preventing an armed conflict.

TRICKERY SEEN IN TURK AGREEMENT ON PARLEY

"Kemal Still Playing Game," is British Cabinet View; Islam Troops Still Massing

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Oct. 1.—With the virtual acceptance by Mustapha Kemal Pasha of a conference at Mudania on Tuesday, or as soon as possible thereafter, the whole Near Eastern situation is considered temporarily easier. However, the fact that Turkish troops are still concentrating in the Ismid zone, notwithstanding that they have retired slightly in the Chanak zone, would indicate, according to remarks made after the British Cabinet's second meeting today, that "Kemal is still playing a game."

While the Cabinet members appear to be much gratified at the happy conclusion for the moment of a difficulty which might have necessitated the use of force in the Chanak zone, there are other bridges to cross. Up to the present there is no information from Gen. Harington, the British commander at Constantinople, that Kemal will attend the Mudania conference, although Gen. Harington's dispatches indicate that he might.

OBJECT OF MEETING

The Mudania meeting will be a purely military affair, to arrange according to the original Allied note to Kemal Pasha, that the neutral zone shall be respected and also to agree upon lines behind which the Greeks are to withdraw pending the peace conference. There will be present military representatives of the three Allied powers, as well as of Greece and Turkey.

It is pointed out that the very basis of this conference is respect for the neutral zone, and before it begins the Turks will be expected to evacuate the Chanak area entirely. On this point there has been quibbling until the British

ARMS TOO GRACELESS FOR GOWNS

King Alphonso Declares Open Sleeves Blow to Women's Beauty

(Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.)

PARIS, Oct. 1.—"Very few women have arms sufficiently beautiful for them to wear with grace sleeveless gowns," said King Alphonso recently at Deauville. "The arms of the American women are too fat and those of the English women are too thin. The Spanish ladies' arms are too short. The French women have small but most perfect arms, and the Italian women possess the most perfect types of Juno."

Sculptors agree that it is impossible to find arms which make a gracious union with the shoulders. Modern women, therefore, are very daring to show bare arms, especially remembering the fact that artificial light renders their defects more shocking.

POKER STAKES MAKE RICH HAUL FOR BANDITS AT CHICAGO CLUB

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—"All I have here are aces up," said a player in a poker game at the Malvern Athletic Club at dawn this morning.

"You win," said the other players, tossing their cards to the center of the table.

"Not so fast," came a strange voice, "I figure you lose." And the speaker, with three other two-gun bandits, came briskly through the door. Levelling their pistols at the players, and cautioning them to sit still and remain silent, three stood guard while the fourth scooped in the "pot," after which they "frisked" all the players, collecting $1200 in currency and jewelry worth $1000.

"Curses," shouted the players after the bandits had departed. "We sit here all night trying to rob each other and a rank amateur comes along and cleans the gang."

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE SEEKS TO EXTEND SERVICE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace conferred yesterday with Senator McNary relative to the extension of the market news service to certain western cities. The department now maintains this valuable service throughout the Eastern States, the Central States and as far west only as Omaha. In the new agricultural bill which will come before Congress in December and which will be in charge of Senator McNary as chairman of the joint committee on agriculture and appropriations, the Secretary desired that a sum approximating $500,000 be provided to carry the service into and throughout the Far West.

This branch of work has proven very profitable to the farmers in the sections of the country served, as it brings to them daily crop news throughout the world, informs them of the congested points in the country and the prices for their products in the various communities throughout the States, and the markets in the Eastern States are advised concerning all forms of crop statistics, the condition of agricultural products, and the probable quality and quantity.

The Secretary stated that if Congress made available the necessary funds, the department would establish a branch in Los Angeles and the service would be provided for other important cities in the State.

Senator McNary assured the Secretary that he appreciated the great value of the service to the farmers of the West and that he would call the attention of the committee to the matter and do everything he could to have the annual appropriation bill carry funds sufficient to have the service inaugurated in 1923.

Ex-Convict and Senator Are Chief Actors in Move to Free Jailbirds

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—At a mass meeting during which 5000 persons packed the Auditorium Theater and cheered wildly for several minutes, when the name of Eugene V. Debs was mentioned, William E. Borah, Senator from Idaho, this afternoon opened a campaign for a general amnesty for all political prisoners and the recognition by the United States of the de facto government of Russia.

At the close of the meeting, of which Col Raymond Robbins was chairman, resolutions which "resolved that we demand that President Warren G. Harding immediately release all political prisoners," were unanimously adopted and copies sent to the President.

The meeting was the first move in concerted and persistent campaign by pro-German sympathizers, to force the President through public demand to grant the amnesty to the seventy-five men "most of them members of the I.W.W." still in prison as political offenders; and to bring about a foreign policy which will include the recognition to soviet Russa.

OTHER MEETINGS

It is to be followed by meetings in every important seat in the country.

In his speech the Senator propounded two leading propositions: first, that the continued incarceration of the political prisoners involves not merely sentiment and justice, but the fundamental principles upon which the United States government is founded; and second, that the recognition of Russia involves the first step for permanent peace in Europe.

"We are denying to our citizens the fundamental principles upon which this government can alone exist," Mr. Borah said. "We must establish by peradventure the principles which have been violated through the incarceration of these men.

"The imprisonment of these men, brought about in the heat of war, through an—in my humble opinion—unconstitutional act of Congress, was fundamentally an attack upon free speech.

OLD-TIME STUFF

"There can be no just law, no free government, without free speech. You know, it is said of the speech that you may take all the other rights of freedom away from a people and leave speech free, and free speech will unchain all the rest."

He then read from the Constitution the clause which states that "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of the speech or press."

"Mind you," he continued, "the fathers who wrote that document did not say that Congress might not prohibit or deny anything, they stated Congress might not even 'abridge.'"

The Senator then made reference to Eugene V. Debs and the famous Socialist's recent release from the Federal prison at Atlanta. He had to stop for several minutes following this while the audience continued to cheer.

QUOTES HISTORY

In demanding the recognition of Russia, Senator Borah pointed out that Washington and his Cabinet recognized the Republican government of France, while it was still in the throes of revolution in 1793.

"And in the Cabinet that did that wise thing," said the Senator, "were Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Jefferson and—well taking it all in all, it was perhaps excepting the present Cabinet—the greatest and most illustrious which ever sat."

BAR ISADORA AND GROOM

Dancer Now Red Sympathizer

Long-Haired Poet Husband Also Caused Her to Lose Citizenship

Authorities Declare Sinuous Mystic Will Have to Go Back to Soviets

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Isadora Duncan, noted dancer, returned today on the steamship Paris of the French Line, accompanied by her new husband, Serge Yessenin, and, on advice from Washington, the immigration authorities told her she would not be permitted to land.

The officials of the steamship Paris have gone security for her and she will stay on the vessel tonight, going to Ellis Island tomorrow.

By the marriage to the young Russian "imaginative" poet, she loses her American citizenship. During the last year she organized and conducted a dancing school in Moscow under the direction of the soviet government.

SECRETLY MARRIED

After her marriage to Yessenin, which took place secretly, the couple flew to Germany. An attempt to enter France succeeded only after a number of high officials had interceded in her behalf. The school in Russia, during her absence, is being conducted by her daughter, Irma Duncan.

Asked about her romance, Mrs. Yessenin said:

"You know I'm a mystic. While I slept my soul left my body and ascended into the world where souls meet and there I met the soul of Serge. We fell in love immediately, as souls, and when we met in the flesh we again loved and were married. Not only was ours a love marriage, but it is also a marriage that united America and Russia.

NO EXPLANATION OFFERED

The immigration officials would not say just why they were holding the dancer and when she retired to the most expensive suite on the ship, after receiving the detaining orders, she began to cry.

With the young couple was W. Wetlugnine, a Russian writer. He speaks English, French, German and Russian and he acted as cupid interpreter in the romance for Yessenin, who speaks no English, while his wife speaks no Russian.

The dancer has changed little since she left the United States, in 1917, to gain European honors, and her husband is described as a mere youth with blonde hair that is startling, and it is said, he powders it in the same manner wigs were powdered in the early seventeenth century. None of his poems has been translated into English although several have been published in Russian.

While the inquiry may revolve to some extent around her loss of citizenship by her marriage to an alien, the principal facts delved into are expected to deal with her alleged adoption of sovietism.

OFFICIALS RETICENT

Ellis Island officials declined to inform her why they refused to let her disembark from the steamer Paris, and neither would they inform newspapermen of the real reason behind her detention, but it was said that the State Department had taken a hand in the travels of Isadora, and objected to her coming back to America. The government of France, some months ago also objected to Isadora returning to France from Russia, alleging that she had made remarks smacking of soviet propaganda. She finally was admitted to France on a Russian passport along with her Russian husband. She used this same passport in sailing for America.

Miss Duncan talked freely of her predictment. She said she failed to understand upon what grounds she could be denied admittance.

SHE TALKS FREELY

"If," she said, "the government does not want me here because I have a Russian husband and if the government claims that I can be barred and seeks to bar me on the grounds that I lost my citizenship through marriage to an alien, I will appeal to Washington under the law recently enacted by Congress restoring citizenship to Amer-

BOMB SUSPECT ARRESTED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 1.—The first arrest for the bombing outrages which have occurred here recently was made this afternoon when deputy sheriffs arrested A. J. Wilson, striking railroad shopman. Wilson is being held for violation of the Mann Act, and an effort is being made to establish his complicity with the bombing outrages.

When arrested Wilson was in the company of Mrs. Corrine Crawford, aged 27 years, who came here at the request of Wilson, she says. When she arrived in San Bernardino September 23 she says that Wilson showed her a number of sticks of dynamite in a bureau drawer in his apartment. These, she declares he told her, were to be used in dynamiting railroad buildings.

Wilson attempted to get Mrs. Crawford to organize a squad of women bombers, she says. She became frightened and told the deputy sheriffs a week ago. They planned to wait until Wilson returned to the city though they have been searching for him.

When arrested Wilson said that he had been working in the Southern Pacific shops in Los Angeles since September 23 under an assumed name. He returned this afternoon to address a mass meeting of strikers which was held tonight. He said that he had been sent out by his union to investigate conditions among strike breakers in the Los Angeles shops. He denied any knowledge of the dynamite which Mrs. Crawford had told the officers of.

Wilson went with Mrs. Crawford to a local cafe after arriving here. She excused herself from his company temporarily for the purpose of going to the Sheriff's office. When she returned with the officers Wilson attempted to escape

NEW YORK REPUBLICANS GAIN STIFF ADVANTAGE

Democrats Admit Opposition's Ticket Better Satisfies Party Voters Than Their Own

BY LOUIS SEIBOLD
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ALBANY (N. Y.) Oct. 1.—As the smoke lifts above the Republican and Democratic conventions held last week the advantage in the pending struggle for the State Senatorial and Congressional nominees appears to be with those named by the former.

The ticket headed by Gov. Miller is admitted by Democratic critics to more nearly represent the unanimous view of Republican men and women voters than the one produced by the Democrats at Syracuse.

The Republican ticket is not menaced by the same uncertainties as that headed by Al Smith, the idol of Tammany, although the decision of Mr. Hearst to forget and forgive is admitted by Republicans to improve the chances of the Democratic candidates.

DEMOCRATS NOW CONFIDENT

Democrats who expected a continuatio of the dogfight whechiresulted in the triumph of Smith now assert confidence. They believe that with the Hearst support Smith can win, because they think the decision will be dictated by a question of personal fitness.

In some respects the rival gubernatorial nominees are much alike. Both have courage, which is at extremely rare quality in modern politics. Both have actually undertaken to accomplish the things that most political candidates talk about but rarely transmute into action.

Mr. Miller was nominated by the Republicans solely because the machine leaders appreciated the fact that he was their only asset. Mr. Smith won the Democratic nomination through the assertion of courage and the exercise of vision which ultimately carried conviction to cowardly leaders of his party.

EARNED VICTORY

Few men have won so distinctive a political triumph as Mr. Smith gained at Syracuse after seventy-two hours of the most vigorous fighting at which he stuck bravely by his guns and completely routed the enemy.

The old saying that "chickens come home to roost" was never more clearly established. The origin of Mr. Hearst's feud with the Tammany element of which Al Smith is the exemplar and symbol dates back to a contest over the job of Sheriff in New York county eight years ago. Tammany had nominated the veteran leader Tom Foley, whose bailiwick lurks under the shadow of the Brooklyn Bridge and other ancient landmarks of lower New York.

Mr. Hearst, cutting his eyeteeth in New York politics, entered one of his employees against Mr. Foley. He threw the full power of his newspapers behind his man. Tammany, accustomed to direct and practical methods of campaigning, was swept off its feet by the campaign conducted by Mr. Hearst in the interest of his employee, now dead. He leveled his attacks against Mr. Foley, a rugged type of the companionable district leader of the old class.

Explorer and Pilot to Hop Off Latter Part of May from Wainwright

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, Oct. 1.—Word direct from Capt. Roald Amundsen that he and his pilot, Lieut. O. Omdahl, will hop off from Wainwright, Alaska, the latter part of May or the first of June to fly across the North Pole to Spitzbergen was brought to Seattle today by E. J. Ward, government school teacher at Wainwright.

Ward, en route to Washington, D. C., left Wainwright for Nome on August 3 on the cutter Bear and came to Seattle as a passenger on the steamship Victoria, which arrived here today.

Amundsen plans, Ward said, to make the flight of approximately 1700 miles across the polar solitudes in one jump, carrying for subsistence only a thermos bottle of hot tea and a sandwich. When he left Wainwright, Ward said, Amundsen and Omdahl were building their winter quarters—a cabin on the beach—near the schoolhouse. They are well supplied with food and fuel for the winter having killed two whales, some walrus and seal, and having a reindeer herd of 4000 animals and a coal mine near by.

By the middle of May, the days are so long in Wainwright that it is practical to take photographs at midnight. In the first day that the sun shines Amundsen plans to hop off.

The schooner Maud, Amundsen's exploration ship, according to Ward, is drifting northward in the ice floe at such speed that the explorer was of opinion that it might cross the pole and reach Spitzbergen in a year, though it may take longer. It is provisioned for seven years.

Minister Said to be Linked in Herrin Riot

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MARION (Ill.) Oct. 1. — When the special grand jury which investigated the Herrin massacre reconvenes October 23, it may return an indictment against a Williamson county preacher. Toward the closing of the investigation an anonymous letter told about a certain preacher and coal miner who was present at the scene of the massacre and was said to be giving directions to the mob. On the last day of the investigation some evidence was introduced concerning this preacher, and it is understood that more evidence is being gathered. The man in question is a coal miner and also a regularly ordained minister, acting as a substitute minister for country churches.

"AUTOMOBILE FOOT" NEWEST AFFLICTION

BAY CITY DOCTOR DISCOVERS BRAND NEW AILMENT FOR CAR DRIVERS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—As if not enough human ills had flown out of Pandora's box, when the lid was opened, Dr. Charles Cross of San Francisco, United States physician during the war, is in Chicago today attending the fifth annual convention of Physical Therapeutists, announcing a brand new affliction—"automobile foot."

Automobile foot is caused, declared Dr. Cross, by the driver holding the foot for prolonged periods on the accelerator button. The lesion thus formed is usually located at the second toe. The motorist may feel distress in his foot long before he knows what is the matter with him. Sensations of pain occur across the ball of the foot, alternately increasing and decreasing until it attracts alarm.

"Wearing pointed shoes," declared the physician, "causes the bones in the foot to fold over each other. In this weakened condition a sudden, forceful pushing of the clutch pedal with the left or a similar application o the right to the foot brake may be the first cause of "automobile foot."

FINANCIERS GATHERING

Despite Foreign Situation Outlook is for Two More Prosperous Years

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — On the eve of what promises to be the largest and most important — the forty-eighth annual — convention of the American Bankers' Association, which opens tomorrow, independent bankers, representing all sections of the country and billions of dollars in business enterprises, met in preliminary session today and planned a campaign to put the gathering on record against the establishment of branch banks by the larger national banking houses.

Today's preliminary session assumed proportion of a mass meeting, with bankers' delegations present from Chicago, K-okuk, Iowa; Topeka, Kan.; Covington, Ky.; Cleveland, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minnapolis, Baltimore, Portland, Or., and other cities. Antibranch bank headquarters have been established in Biltmore Hotel by the Chicago and Cook County Bankers' Association.

DOMINATION FEARED

The bankers at today's meeting decided to attempt to force through the convention a resolution placing the organization on record as against the branch-bank plan, by which national banks in the larger cities may maintain establishments in other cities and towns. They will also seek to have the body disapprove by resolution the asserted support of this plan by D. R. Crissinger, Comptroller of the treasury.

The branch-bank plan, they contend, threatens absorption, if not destruction, of State and independent banks and trust companies in smaller communities, with the result that the metropolitan banks will ultimately dominate the financial conditions in these terriories.

Bankers of the larger cities, particularly New York, are expected to urge a stiff fight to prevent adoption of the proposed resolution.

PROSPERITY AHEAD

A poll of financiers gathering for the convention indicates unanimous satisfaction with the nation's progress upward from the valley of post-war depression and a belief that at least two years of good business lie ahead. The prosperous era has not reached the proportions of a "boom," was the conviction of the bankers, speaking on conditions in Federal reserve districts of the East, South and Middle West.

Almost without exception they expressed a belief that the United States, for its own welfare, must concern itself more industriously with the rejuvenation of Europe.

LIGHTNING FIRES OIL TANKS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—Lightning early tonight struck two 55,000-barrel tanks at the Union Oil Company's tank farm at Oleum, fifteen miles from here, on San Pablo Bay, and set them afire. One contained crude oil and the other a refined product. The damage, several hours later, was estimated at $250,000.

The bolt, which came during the first thunderstorm in this region in many months, was said by witnesses to have turned at right angles in its path from cloud to earth to strike the tanks. One section of the roof of one tank, a piece of heavy metal about 20x30 feet, was thrown more than fifty feet.

The fire soon melted one tank and the burning oil spread into a circle around the steel container, being confined by an earthwork levee.

The fire, it was said, might burn many hours. Employees at the tank farm devoted themselves solely to keeping other tanks from taking fire. They were assisted by a west wind, which blew the flames away from the main plant at the farm, distant some 400 feet from the burning tanks.

Traffic on the highway which runs through the farm was halted; trains which pass below the tanks were allowed to proceed only with extreme caution and the Rodeo-Vallejo Ferry Company, whose slip is only about 300 yards from the tanks, diverted its traffic to a slip of another concern.

Another bolt of the same storm struck a high-tension electric wire near Vallejo and that town was in darkness for a time as a result.

JURISTS ARE TO CONVENE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

(Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The first meeting of the commission of jurists authorized by the Washington Arms Conference to consider changes in the rules of warfare, particularly with reference to new agencies of warfare, will open at The Hague on December 10, next, the State Department has announced.

In addition to John Bassett Moore, the eminent international lawyer, who has been named as the American commissioner to this conference, the department announced that Admiral W. L. Rodgers has been selected by the Navy Department to proceed to The Hague at the time of the meeting to act in the capacity of a technical naval adviser to Judge Moore.

While the agreements of the Arms Conference prevent any action on the part of this conference calculated to emasculate the provisions of the Arms Conference treaties respecting the use of submarines against merchant vessels, or the use of poison gases in warfare, there still remains a vast amount of work for the commission at The Hague to accomplish.

It is expected that the commission will go over the whole body of international law with respect to warfare, making recommendations as they may see fit, for modification of international practice concerning such questions as conduct on the battlefield, conduct of armed forces with respect to civilian populations, treatment to be accorded to persons in uniform as contrasted with that to be accorded those not in uniform, treatment of spies, etc.

In addition to these questions there remains much new work to be done as a result of the developments of the science of warfare during the World War.

On the day after Prince Hohenlohe's farewell, the man summoned by me as his successor—Count Bulow, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—arrived. His choice for the post was eminently fitting, because he was thoroughly cognizant of our foreign policy and especially of our relations with England—which policy was becoming constantly livelier and more complicated—and because he had already proved himself a skillful orator and ready debater in the Reichstag.

The fact that the second of these qualities was lacking in his predecessor had often been painfully noticeable. When Prince Hohenlohe's intention to retire became known in the Imperial Council, the Bavarian Ambassador at Berlin, Count Lerchenfeld, very pointedly remarked to me that for heaven's sake I was not to choose another South German, since South Germans were not fitted for the leading post at Berlin; North Germans were naturally better able to fill it and, therefore, it would be better for the empire to select a North German.

I had been acquainted personally with Bulow for a long time, ever since the period of his ambassadorship at Rome and his work as Secretary of State. Then I had often visited him at his home in his garden. He came into closer relationship with me when he accompanied me on my journey to the Far East, where, in co-operation with the Ambassador, Freiherr Marschall, he assisted me in getting into personal touch with the leading men of the Turkish government. Hence, the relations of the new Chancellor with me were already begun and to a certain extent, established, since we had for years discussed all political problems and spheres. Moreover, he stood much nearer to me in age than his predecessors, most of whom could have been my grandfather. He was the first "young chancellor" of Germany. And this made our common task easier for both of us.

When I was in Berlin, scarcely a day went by without my taking a long morning walk with the Chancellor in the garden of the Imperial Chancellor's palace, during which outstanding business was cleared up and problems of actuality discussed. I often had a meal with him and always found at his table, where I was most hospitably received by the Count, his amiable wife and a group of the most interesting men, in choosing whom the Count was a master. He was likewise unsurpassed in skillfully conducting of conversation and the witty handling of the various topics that arose. To me it was always a pleasure to be in the company of the Chancellor and enjoy his bubbling it, to exchange views at his table with many professors, savants and artists, as well as government officials of all sorts, in informal, unofficial intercourse and stimulating exchange of ideas.

The Count was an excellent narrator of anecdotes, drawn both from books and his own personal experience, which he told in several languages. He liked to tell stories of the days when he was a diplomat, especially about his stay at St. Petersburg.

The Count's father was an intimate friend of Prince Bismarck and had been one of his closest coworkers. Young Bulow also had begun his career under the great Chancellor; he had been brought up on Bismarckian ideas and traditions and strongly influenced by them, but, nevertheless, had not adhered to them to such an extent as to lose his independence.

In the course of one of the first talks which I had with Bulow as Imperial Chancellor he informed himself concerning my ideas of how best to handle the English and have dealings with them. I told him that I considered absolute frankness the most important thing in dealing with England and Englishmen; that the Englishman, in presenting his point of view and working for his interests, was inconsiderate to the point of brutality, for which reason he thoroughly understood anybody who acted similarly toward him; that there must be no playing the diplomatic game, or "finessing," with an Englishman, because it made him distrust those with whom he was dealing and suspect that they were not honest and wished secretly to cheat him; that such devious methods could be successful only in dealing with Latin and Slavic nations; that, once the Englishman had become suspicious, there was nothing more to be done with him, despite the most honeyed words and most obliging concessions; that the only advice, therefore, which I could give the Chancellor was that he confine himself entirely to straightforwardness in his English policy. I said this with particular emphasis, since "finessing" was especially dear to the diplomatic character of Count Bulow and had become second nature to him.

I also took occasion, during this talk, to warn the Chancellor against Holstein. In spite of my warning—which was merely a repetition of that given me before by Bismarck—Bulow worked a great deal, or was obliged to work, with Holstein. This remarkable man had been able gradually, especially since the time that the Foreign Office had been, so to speak, orphaned by Bismarck's retirement, to create for himself a position that became steadily more influential and to maintain it under three Chancellors with such skill that he was considered indispensable.

Holstein was unquestionably possessed of great shrewdness, seconded by a phenomenal memory and a certain talent for political combinations, which, to be sure, often became a hobby in his case. His position was also based largely on the fact that he was looked upon in many quarters, especially among the older officials, as the "bearer of the Bismarckian traditions," the man who upheld these in the teeth of "the young master." His importance rested, above all, on his wide personal knowledge in the entire domain of the foreign service. Since he wielded, on account of this, an authoritative influence on all proposals relative to the appointment of officials and hence, also, on the careers of the younger officials, it may be easily understood why he, little by little, had obtained for himself a dominating position at the Foreign Office. But he sought more and more to obtain, at the same time, a decisive influence upon the conduct of foreign policy; he had in fact, become the guiding spirit both of the Foreign Office and of German foreign policy.

HOLSTEIN'S SECRET POWER

The serious thing about this was that he exerted his far-reaching influence entirely from under cover and avoided all official responsibility as an adviser. He preferred to remain in the dark and exert his influence from there. He refused every responsible post—many stood open to him—every honorary title, every promotion. He lived in complete seclusion. For a long time I tried in vain to become personally acquainted with him, for which purpose I used to invite him to meals, but Holstein declined every time. Only once, in the course of many years, did he consent to dine with me at the Foreign Office, and it was characteristic of him that, whereas on this occasion all the other gentlemen present wore full evening dress, he appeared in a frock coat and excused himself on the plea that he had no dress coat.

The secrecy with which he surrounded himself in his work, so as not to be held responsible for it, became apparent also at times in the character of the memorials draw up by him; they were unquestionably ingenious and attractive, but often as involved and ambiguous as the oracle of Delphi; there were occasions when, after a decision had been made based on the contents of one of these documents, Herr Von Holstein would prove to a nicety that he meant exactly the opposite of what had been thought.

I considered it a serious matter that an irresponsible counselor should bring to bear such powerful influence, especially as he did so from under cover, and, hence in doing it, eluded the officials who were in duty bound to exert influence, and who were the responsible parties. Often, especially in the Von Richthofen era, it happened that I would advise a foreign ambassador to discuss some political question, which he had taken up with me, with the Secretary of State, and he would reply: "J'en parlerai avec mon ami Holstein." ("I shall speak about it with my friend Holstein.") The fact alone that an official of the Foreign Office dealt with foreign ambassadors, going over the head of his superior, did not seem right to be; but that he should be dubbed by these foreigners "friend" seemed to me to go beyond what I deemed advisable.

Matters had, in fact, developed gradually to such a stage that Holstein conducted a good part of our foreign affairs. To be sure, he still listened to the Chancellor in connection with them, but what the Emperor thought or said about foreign affairs was rather unimportant. If things turned out successfully, the Foreign Office reaped the reward; if things went wrong, then it was the fault of the "impulsive young master."

In spite of all this, Bulow, too, apparently thought Herr von Holstein indispensable at first; he worked together with him for a long time, until at last he, too, found unbearable the pressure which this strange man exerted on everybody. To Herr Von Tschirschky, during his tenure of office as Secretary of State, belongs the merit of finally bringing the unendurable situation to a head. On being questioned by me, he declared that he considered it impossible that Herr Von Holstein remain at his post any longer, since he was embroiling the whole Foreign Office, seeking to eliminate him, the Secretary of State, entirely, and creating all kinds of obstacles, likewise, for the Chancellor.

DISMISSAL—AND AN ENEMY

Thereupon I ordered Herr Von Tschirschky to prepare the way for the dismissal of Herr Von Holstein, which afterward took place, with the approval of the Chancellor, after the latter had recovered from the serious breakdown in health which he had suffered meanwhile. Herr Von Holstein himself showed what manner of man he was by going at once after his dismissal to Herr Harden and placing himself at the latter's disposal for the campaign against the Emperor.

The year 1901 gave Count Bulow plentiful opportunities to show and assert himself in dealings with England. Count Bulow still believed strongly in the Bismarckian theory of having "two irons in the fire"—i. e., in making friendly agreements with another country while always remaining on good terms with Russia—in which he received support from the many pretended adherents of Bismarck.

From the midst of the jubilee celebration of the two hundredth coronation anniversary I was called to the deathbed of my grandmother, Queen Victoria, by a dispatch announcing to me the serious condition of the Queen. I hurriedly made the journey with my uncle, the Duke of Connaught, who was at Berlin as the Queen's representative at the festivities—he was the favorite son of the Queen and my particular friend, and a son-in-law of Prince Frederick Charles—and I was cordially received in London by the then Prince of Wales and the royal family. As my carriage drove out at a trot from the railway station a plainly dressed man stepped forward from the closely packed crowd standing there in absolute silence, to the side of the carriage, bared his head and said: "Thank you, Kaiser." The Prince of Wales, later Edward VII, added: "That is what they all think, and they will never forget this coming of yours." Nevertheless, they did forget it, and quickly.

"QUEEN DIED IN MY ARMS"

After the Queen had quietly breathed her last in my arms, the curtain fell for me upon many memories of childhood. Her death signified the close of an epoch in English history and in Germany's relations with England. I now got in touch, as far as possible, with prominent personages, and noted everywhere a thoroughly sympathetic, friendly spirit, which made no secret of the wish for good relations with Germany.

At the farewell banquet impromptu speeches were made by King Edward VII and myself, which were cordial in tone and content, and did not fail to make an impression on their hearers. After the meal the English Ambassador at Berlin clasped my hand and said that my speech had touched all his fellow-countrymen's hearts, because what I said was sincere and simple, as was fitting for Englishmen; that the speech must at once be made public, since it would have an effect throughout the country, which was grateful for my coming, and that this would be useful to the relations between the two countries. I answered that it was a matter for the British government and the King to decide, that personally I had no objections to having the speech made public.

Nevertheless, it was not made public and the British people never learned of my words, which were the sincere expression of my sentiments and thoughts. In another talk later on with me at Berlin the same Ambassador deeply regretted this, but was unable to say what the reason was for this omission.

In concluding my remarks on my stay in England I cannot pass over the fact that a portion of the German press was unfortunately lacking both in tactful appreciation of the grief of the English royal family and people, as well as of the obligations which my family relationship and political considerations imposed upon me.

PROTEST STATUE TO SINGING WARRIORS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The great pains taken by the French government to prevent the erection of freakish or inartistic war monuments throughout France has resulted in the majority of cases in simple stone columns in honor of the soldier dead, but there are some notable exceptions. A violent protest now is raised by the appearance of a grotesque monument in a village near Paris where there is an opera singer's charity home. It depicts the death agony of the hero of Pagliacci wearing a soldier's cartridge belt and straps over a pierrot dressed and armed with a broken saber. It is intended as a tribute dead lyric artists.

CAT SAVES TOTS FROM RATTLER

Children's Pet Dispatches Snake After Fierce Combat

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BALLINGER (Tex.) Oct. 1.—A house cat, the pet of the children of Judge A. K. Doss, saved them from being bitten by a rattlesnake yesterday, according to the judge. The cat attacked the snake and after a few minutes' combat, killed it.

The Doss children were playing in the yard when the snake appeared. The cat immediately attacked. It would spring at the snake, strike with its claws on the snake's head, and jump away before the reptile could strike. Repeating this method of attack the feline soon dispatched the snake, according to Judge Doss, who witnessed the last few minutes of the battle.

The snake had five rattles.

ANALYSIS OF THE MEMOIRS

Secret Ambition of Kaiser Was to Weld England and Germany

BY S. FRED HOGUE

Running like a scarlet thread through the woof of the Kaiser's Memoirs is a veiled, adroit flattery of English diplomats, customs and institutions. The Kaiser finds various pretexts to remind the reader that he is half English, the eldest and favorite grandson of Queen Victoria.

He admires the English statesmen, the British navy, the physical development of her soldiers, due to English sports. One senses that half-expressed thought, "If fate had but made me the eldest son, in place of the grandson of Queen Victoria, my dream of world empire would not have proved a mirage. If these German squareheads, in the Foreign Office and elsewhere, had listened to me more and not stirred the Reichstag up against me whenever I sought a rapprochemen with my royal relatives in England I could have effected an alliance which would have enabled us jointly to dictate the foreign policy of all nations."

This quotation is not wholly conjectural. It is the essence of a conversation reported to me by a Swiss journalist while I was in Europe last summer. This journalist followed the German armies during the great 1918 western offensive. He visited the Kaiser at Doorn in 1920, and again last June. He said he found the fallen ruler much more bitter against his former associates in the German government than against the English.

This journalist quoted the Kaiser as saying in 1920: "England needed Germany and Germany needed England. Russia was hopeless. If I had been an absolute ruler, like my cousin, the Czar, instead of merely a constitutional one, able to speak and act only through the Chancellor, I would have welded the two peoples so tight during Victoria's reign that they could not have been separated in a hundred years. Now, the German Empire has fallen. But the British Empire cannot stand alone. She will follow us into the abyss. Deprived of our joint support, the whole of the present civilization will follow. The worlds entering into a decadent era like unto the Dark Ages."

It is but natural, perhaps, that the Kaiser should believe Germany's downfall means the crumbling of a civilization. His exaggerated idea of his own and his country's greatness had become an obsession that verged on fanaticism. Some alienists class this innate egoism as a form of mild insanity.

STATE CAN DO NO WRONG

The rest of the world is not likely to be very deeply impressed by his direful prophecies. We of the United States at least are convinced that our civilization builded on the German conception of national right and justice could not long endure. In order that the readers of the Memoirs may get a clearer vision of the philosophy on which the Kaiser's observations are based I shall insert here an extract from Lasson's "Das Culturideal und de Krieg." This is a kind of political economy, published in 1868, and used as a text-book in all the German secondary schools.

Force is the characteristic feature of right. . . . In natural intercourse, in consequence, there are, and can be no laws. . . . Between states there can be no thought of law or right. . . . There is no right where there is no law, no judge, no superior compelling force . . . States have absolutely no mutual duties, because as between them there is no law or right. . . . There is no commandment of right to observe political treaties. . . . Infraction of the right by force is a crime in civil life. A STATE CAN COMMIT NO CRIME.

Is it any wonder that a generation which had been taught in its infancy that a "state can commit no crime;" that "between states there can be no thought of law or right," should fail to see the injustice of the German invasion of Belgium?

More than this, books written in Germany attacking the Lasson theory, for which the metaphysical basis was furnished by Hegel and reduced to concrete form by Lasson—such books were suppressed by governmental edict.

To follow the Kaiser's defense in the succeeding installments of the Memoirs one must keep in mind this theory of what constitutes a state. He never refers to the mutual duties of governments, because it is a fundamental of German foreign policy that, "states have absolutely no mutual duties, because, as between them, there is no law or right."

QUEEN VICTORIA'S DEATH

In some places the Kaiser is a tiresome narrator. He devotes whole columns to the discussion of trivialities concerning former state officials; and when he comes to a topic of world interest, the last moments of Queen Victoria, he simply writes, "After the Queen had quietly breathed her last in my arms," and passes on.

One wonders why it was in the arms of the Kaiser and not in those of one of her own sons, that she expired. In his youth the Kaiser was an amateur dramatist. He learned the secret of suspended interest; and he seems to take a malicious pleasure in intriguing his reader. Perhaps he has acquired the memoir habit, and figures on writing a second series to supply the details that were omitted from the first.

SCHOOLS LET DOWN BAR AGAINST SIGNS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Pictorial posters have suddenly appeared on the walls or facades of some of Paris lycees. This is an innovation, for the public schools hitherto have kept their wall space sacred from the bill posters' attacks. The reason is the lack of funds for necessary improvements.

There will be strict censorship of all advertisements appearing on the school walls.

ILLINOIS TO BALLOT ON WINE, BEER

State Attorney-General Directs Submission of Question to Vote

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Voters of Illinois are to have another opportunity to express their opinion of permitting the sale of "light wines and beer," which means, of course, that if the saloons reopen, or rather, if they are legalized—they are already running wide open, Sundays included—the patrons will be able to get any sort of liquor they desire.

Atty.-Gen. Brundage today delivered an opinion to Secretary of State Emerson, directing him that the "light wines and beer" question must go on the ballot for a State-wide referendum on November 7.

The petition which has been circulated contains more than 500,000 signatures and its form has not been seriously attacked. So the Illinois voters will have another chance to register as "moist" or "bone dry."

Although the referendum will not change the legal situation, the campaign is expected to heat up immediately. The Illinois "wets" are determined to make the Illinois demonstration so emphatic that, with similar displays of sentiment in other States, it will have its effect upon Congress.

Following his arrest Wilson was grilled until late tonight. At the conclusion of the grilling Sheriff Shay announced that a number of other arrests would follow at once.

plex us," said Thomas B. McAdams of Richmond, Va., president of the national association. "They are the industrial controversy and unrest at home and international financial difficulties abroad. To these problems we will address ourselves with unmistakable vigor."

LOWER PRICES SEEN

A regret "that not only do we show no desire to aid in the restoration of Europe, but by means of such financial measures as the Fordney McCumber tariff, do our utmost to prevent Europe from working out its own difficulties by means of its own efforts," was expressed by H. A. Taylor of Chicago, chairman of the association's economic policy committee.

He saw living prices dropping back toward prewar levels, a marked decline of borrowing from Federal reserves by member banks, good crops and satisfied farmers.

"The cloud on the horizon is still the foreign situation," he continued. The trouble does not lie in the fact that we cannot find consumers for our surplus, but that our customers are in such a financial condition that they cannot pay a reasonable price for our products and the farmers are faced with the dilemma of selling their surplus either below cost or not disposing of it at all.

PLEAS FOR FARMERS

Speaking for the middle Mississippi Valley territory, E. F. Swinney of Kansas City, Mo., a former president of the association, said:

"Much progress has been made during the four years since the armistice. We are much better off than a year or two ago, but we do not look for real prosperity in this district until our farmers are able to buy more of the things they need with the proceeds of grain and cattle products, or become accustomed to getting along with less."

A feeling of better nature is the prime factor for improved business, in the opinion of J. Hoopes of the Central State Bank at Dallas, Tex., who said:

"The business situation in this territory is very much improved. Merchants are buying carefully, but in increased amounts, prevailing prices for the cotton crop have been satisfactory; interior banks have been able to liquidate freely; building operations are increasing rapidly."

lean women who take foreign husbands."

But it appeared probable tonight that the government will not make any issue of her loss of citizenship, nor give the new law its first test. Rather it will ask Miss Duncan how about her soviet views.

Of her alleged soviet views, Miss Duncan side-stepped. She expressed the opinion that the government at Washington "had no sympathy with revolutions."

RECALLS ANCESTRY

"I thought," she said, "that our great country was started by a revolution in which my great-grandfather, Gen. William Duncan, played a prominent part."

Then she added with a touch of defiance:

"They keep my body from entering America, but they cannot keep my spirit out. There are at least 20,000 girls all over the country who are now dancing the soul dances that I brought into fashion twenty years ago."

Miss Duncan's husband is Serge Yessini, about 24 years old. He speaks no English, while Miss Duncan speaks no Russian. Their romance is carried on through an interpreter in the person of Woldemar Wetlugina, a linguist. Miss Duncan's two children complete the party, all of whom are temporary guests on Ellis Island.

CARESSES HUSBAND

Speaking of her young husband and drawing his curly head down on her shoulder caressingly, Miss Duncan said he was a young "imaginist" poet who had already written many poems which had been translated into French, but not yet into English, but that they soon would be.

"He is called the greatest poet since Pushkin," she continued. "He has written a poem of the tragedy of Pougatchoff, the young revolutionist of 150 years ago. Then, Pougatchoff said, that the next revolution would come from the university and Lenin is the present world revolutionist of the university."

PRIMARIES PLEASING

Harding Regime Upheld

Republican Leaders Say Vote Shows Rank and File Satisfied

Party to Retain Substantial Lead in Both Houses, Indication

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Primary elections for selection of candidates for the United States Senate and House of Representatives in the November election have been completed with the exception of one State, Rhode Island.

Upon the results of these primaries, Republican party leaders are basing unusual optimism and believe that they indicate beyond any doubt that the Harding administration is to be indorsed at the polls and that both houses of Congress will retain comfortable Republican working majorities after March 4 next.

John T. Adams, chairman of the Republican National Committee, after an analysis of returns as affecting the present personnel of Congress, said tonight:

"The results clearly show that the rank and file of the Republican party are satisfied with the work and personnel of the Republican majority in the present Congress."

MAJORITY INDORSED

The present Republican membership of the House is 258. Of these 259 entered the primaries in their respective districts for renomination. Only fourteen out of this number, Republican leaders point out, were defeated.

This is less than 6 per cent of the total number who by entering the primaries asked for an indorsement of their record. It may be stated that where incumbents were defeated the causes which contributed to their defeat were local. Illinois contributed two to the list of Republican Congressmen defeated for renomination, Kansas one, Missouri one, New Jersey two, New Mexico one, New York one, Oklahoma one, Pennsylvania four and Wisconsin one.

Four Republican incumbents of the House did not seek renomination as Representatives but asked for and received the nomination of their party as candidate for the United States Senate. These were Congressman Mondell of Wyoming; Congressman Riddick of Montana, Congressman Fess of Ohio and Congressman Green of Vermont.

PLAN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Republican leaders from the President down are planning an active campaign, although the President expects to take no more than an advisory part in these activities. As a result of a recent conference between Harding and Representative Will R. Wood, Indiana, chairman of the Congressional campaign committee, several members of the cabinet have agreed to take the stump.

Among them are Secretary of State Hughes, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of Labor Davis, Atty.-Gen. Daugherty and Postmaster General Work. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt and Assistant Postmaster General John H. Bartlett also are to participate.

The President's official family plan to concentrate much of their fire on Ohio, Mr. Harding's home State, where an indorsement of the administration is particularly desirable. The platform of principles adopted by the Republican party in that State, and on which Carmi Thompson is running for Governor, and Representative Fess for Senator makes its keynote the sentiment expressed in "stand by the President." The Harding policies and accomplishments, or lack of them, will be on trial. The issue has been so sharply drawn that a Democratic victory would be construed as a repudiation of the President by his own State.

HARMONY IN OHIO

The invitation to former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana to open the Republican campaign in Ohio was extended by President Harding. Behind it lies the desire of the administration to line up the progressive sentiment of the State behind the candidates for Governor and Senator As far as organization is concerned there has been a harmonization of the regular Republican leaders and the leaders of the progressive faction of the party in that State, much to the encouragement of the campaign managers, who are being selected from both wings of the party.

The Ohio Congressmen who are candidates for re-election find themselves somewhat embarrassed in the effort that will be expected of them in emphasizing the slogan "stand by the President." Ohio has a solid Republican delegation in the House but only one member of it, Representative Joseph H. Himes, voted to sustain President Harding's veto of the Soldier Bonus Bill, while another, Charles L. Knight, who has announced his resignation from the House on account of dissatisfaction with party conduct in Ohio, was paired in favor of sustaining the President's disapproval.

LONDON DEALER BUYS HESSELTINE BRONZES

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Oct. 1.—An event of great interest to art circles, just announced, is the purchase of the famous Hesseltine collection of bronzes by Alfred Speero, a London dealer. The collection is one of the three remaining of any importance in England outside of museums, the others being that of Sir Otto Beit and the one formed by the late Sir Julius Kernher.

It comprises about sixty-five objects, and is almost as important and certainly more interesting than the Salting bequest, owing to the remarkably large number of rare models of the highest interest. Moreover, the collection was formed at a time when a connoisseur possessing the knowledge and taste of Hesseltine could afford to ignore anything not first-class.

Bronze admirers hope this collection also will be bought intact, although there already are signs that one or two of the outstanding pieces will be purchased separately. The collection is of such uniform excellence that it would be difficult to single out any particular work for a separate reference. Bronzes always have been a subject of heated controversy because of the number of forgeries which found their way into the most important collections. But an undoubted Benvenuto Cellini bronze like the "Minerva" in this collection, or Marsyas playing the double pipe in his contest with Apollo, by Antonio Pollainola, make the whole collection of unusual interest and value.

PICNIC PLANNED BY EMPLOYEES OF CITY

ANNUAL AFFAIR TO BE STAGED ON COLUMBUS DAY AT GROVE

Arrangements are being rapidly completed for the city employees' third annual picnic to be held on Columbus Day, October 12, at Sycamore Grove, under the direction of a general committee of which C. R. Lewis is chairman, E. C. Carpenter, secretary, and E. P. M. Cruets, treasurer.

The members of the committee state that the annual affair is in no way a political event nor is it called for the purpose of discussing the relative duties or responsibilities of the different municipal departments, but is simply a picnic. The membership of the general committee represents all departments of the city government.

The number of city employees has now reached a total of 5810 men and women, divided as follows: Firemen, 329; police department, 1316; engineering, 1581; water and power, 3200; harbor, 500; library, 240; miscellaneous departments, 1144.

STREET CAR GRINDS OUT MAN'S LIFE

Son of State's Attorney-General Victim of Fatal Auto Accident

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—Sigel C. Webb, only son of U. S. Webb, Attorney-General of California, was killed in an automobile accident on Columbus avenue, near Stockton street, here tonight.

An unidentified man was injured and at the Harbor Emergency Hospital, where he was taken, it was said he probably would die.

Webb and this man were in one machine. Another, as yet unfound, was driving down Columbus avenue abreast of it. The two cars sideswiped and Webb and his companion were thrown out. Webb struck on his head directly in front of a Stockton street car and his body was mangled before the car could be stopped.

The other car sped away and the police early tonight were without any clew to the identity of its owner or driver.

The car Webb was in bore a license plate indicating it was the property of J. H. Rhodes of San Francisco.

SERB CRISIS DUPLICATED

Noted Expert Draws Striking Parallel in Near East Situation, With Array of Powers Reversed

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—"The Turkish situation is as grave as the Serbian crisis in 1914," says Roger Babson, the famous statistician, "and France is almost in the same position that Germany was then.

"The gravity of the Turkish situation is too little understood," said Mr. Babson. "It is as grave as the Serbian crisis in 1914.

"And France is in almost exactly the same position that Germany was then.

"The real seriousness of the danger has been somewhat hidden. The change has come quickly. A few weeks ago England was in the saddle. She did the talking, did the worrying. Today the situation is just the reverse.

"England is in a hole. France deliberately and meanly, I think, put her there.

PARALLEL DRAWN

"England alone of all European nations stood for law and order. She alone stood for the payment of debts and the fulfillment of obligations.

"Austria and Germany were bankrupt. Chaos held Russia. Italy was on the verge of bankruptcy. France was compromising. England was the country that told us she would pay her debts with interest.

"Her policy with Germany was in opposition to that of France. England wanted to get as much out of Germany as possible without killing the goose that laid the golden egg. France was for killing the goose, but still for demanding the eggs. England was Europe's Big Brother.

"Today she is faced with fighting Europe. For she stands practically alone. The new government of Greece is not with her. Germany alone, in case of war, is her possible ally. For the Germany of today is not on friendly terms with the Turkey of today. And should Germany go in with England there would be an entirely new interpretation placed on many European relationships and the problems of those relationships. There is the matter of reparations, for instance.

ENGLAND STANDS ALONE

"Yes, England stands practically alone. Italy will back Turkey. Russia will back Turkey. And of course France will back Turkey.

"It must be kept clear that the real issue is not between Great Britain and Turkey, but between Great Britain and France. France has been backing Turkey. England has been backing Greece. Turkey and Greece have been but pawns on the chessboard.

"When the last war was on, Russia was promised Constantinople. Russia withdrew. Then, it was decided to keep Constantinople free, out of the power of either France or England. England slowly got the upper hand. Then France played her cards. She even equipped the Turks with arms and uniforms—the very arms and uniforms that America sent her. She has practically admitted at Washington that the Turks are wearing American uniforms, supplied by her.

"Today, France holds the trumps. It is not merely a war on paper, remember. Turkey is fortifying herself in putting guns and troops in strategic positions. And England is in a hole. England has either got to fight the Turks at a tremendous cost of men and money, without the full co-operation of her own people, or else she has to lose India, Egypt, Persia and the Holy Land.

"What will happen? I do not know. What should America do? Keep out of it. What Europe needs is not war, not money, not diplomacy, not leagues of nations—but some old-fashioned religion."

Sixteen Dope Peddlers Get Terms in Pen

During the session of the United States District Court in San Diego, U. S. District Judge Sawtelle made a run on dope peddlers, sending sixteen of them to the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan. Two others were sent to the same prison for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition amendment. Ninety-two defendants were disposed of during the term.

There were six verdicts of guilty involving nine defendants, and five acquittals involving six defendants. Twenty were sent to the San Diego County Jail, following verdicts of guilty or confessions of guilt. The fines assessed amounted to $15,771, and of that amount $7939 was paid in cash to the clerk of the court.

"IT'S NO FUN TO BE KING!"

Constantine Confides He Now Can Live Like Gentleman and Thinks America Should Save Europe

BY OTIS SWIFT

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ATHENS, Sept. 29 (Delayed.)—"Between you and me and the gatepost, being a King is no fun these days. It is a lot of hard work." Thus Prince Flukesbouren, recently well known as King Constantine of Greece, chattily summed up his personal opinion of recent events in a tea-time interview with me today. An exclusive hour's conversation in the garden of the royal summer palace at Tatoy, outside of Athens, is the first and only interview the former King has given since his abdication.

He told me that he expects to leave tomorrow with the former royal family for Palermo on a merchant marine transport. The former monarch, who looked tired and nervous, but cheery, refused to discuss Greek politics. He voluminously surveyed the general European situation, however, declaring that all Europe was tottering into chaos.

RAP AT AMERICA

He condemned France bitterly and denounced the American policy of nonparticipation in European affairs, saying:

"Why didn't you recognize me? You call America democracy, but you do not recognize me. What kind of democracy is that?"

He refused to say whether he was planning to write a book.

Permission to have an interview with the former King was courteously granted by the chief of the revolutionary committee, Col. Gonatas, who gave all the help he could and kindly signed a pass through the revolutionary army lines guarding Tatoy.

This afternoon, accompanied by N. Theodoropolis of the revolutionary party, I motored thirteen miles to Tatoy along the road famous for the Marathon race. The charming white marble palace lies in the center of a fragrant pine forest. Beyond the sentry line is a group of little cottages where members of the court entourage reside. While a white and gold uniformed naval officer—aide de camp to the former King—went to request an interview I waited in a vine-shadowed arbor. Near by a black-clad group of ladies was waiting—many in tears and talking of the departure of the Queen.

CONSENTS TO TALK

Constantine at first refused an interview, saying that he did not wish the revolutionary committee to think he was opposing it in any way. Later he consented on condition that no questions of Greek politics be discussed.

The former King received me in the garden. We sat at a little rustic table located half way down the middle of a long, shady avenue of elm trees.

Constantine, who is 55 years old, is a big man with wide shoulders, heavy face, heavy jaw, close cropped bullet-shaped head, bald forehead, wrinkled face of white, tired, weary, blackened pouches under his mild blue eyes. His upturned military mustachios are not waxed. He was bareheaded and wore a gray tweed business suit.

But when, after dismissing his aide-de-camps, he opened the conversation, he spoke cheerfully of the collapsed throne. Constantine's English is without accent, and he speaks in a low torrent of nervous ejaculatory explosive sentences, using much American slang.

"You are an American?" he said. "I cannot understand America. Much of our trouble here has been due to the fact that America did not recognize me. Why shouldn't they recognize me? It was over some silly question in Mexico. The powers said that if the United States recognized me, they would recognize me. What has Mexico got to do with me?

URGES INTERVENTION

"You call America democracy. That is a Greek word—Demos, rule to the people. You talk about freedom and letting everybody be free. Yet you don't recognize me. What kind of democracy is that?"

"I think America ought to do something about this Smyrna situation. America is a big nation with a world of prestige. She should keep order in the world and see that the Turks do not conquer western civilization. You say America's policy is nonintervention. That policy is doing Europe a lot of harm, together with the foolish terms of the peace treaties, which mussed up everything. Of course, they twisted Woodrow Wilson around their fingers in Paris—have you read Keynes's book? But America could now do a good deal to restore order. She should put an army in Asia Minor and keep these uncivilized Turks from upsetting the world."

Constantine paused, produced a silver cigarette case, and lit a cigarette. He did not offer me one, but passed matches across the table when I produced my cigarettes.

"I hope the revolutionary army thoroughly defeats the Turks. They must. The Turks are still the same uncivilized nomads who invaded Europe 500 years ago. They have not produced any culture or art. If they get Thrace there will be a constant menace to Western Europe. Their policy is extermination of Greece. We can and must defeat them in order to preserve the Greek nation."

With characteristic abruptness Constantine changed the conversation.

"You have got lots of Greeks in America, haven't you? I used to ride around town in an automobile a lot. One day I saw a man wearing queer pants. I stopped him and said 'what have you got on?' He said 'these are overalls—I have been to America.' They develop into a fine type in America. I have seen them. But I don't understand your government's attitude. Why didn't they recognize me?

"What are my plans? I haven't any particular plans. I and my wife are leaving for Italy tomorrow on a ship the revolutionary government has placed at my disposal. My daughter and brothers are going also. I am going to Palermo first. I never visited the country around there, but I don't know what I'll do afterwards. I'm sorry to leave here. I like Tatoy. It is a nice palace; beautiful woods, and very cool and pleasant in the summer time. There is good hunting, fishing and yachting, and the climate is very lovely. Father willed Tatoy to me and I have always preferred it to anywhere else.

"How does it feel not to be king any more? Between you and me and the gatepost I do not care anything about being king. Being king is no fun these days. It is a lot of hard work. I can now live like a plain country gentleman."

Still steering clear of Greek affairs, the former king discussed the European situation. He again emphasized the Turkish menace, which he said endangered western civilization. He reiterated that Greek victory was necessary to save Europe.

The conversation had lasted one hour and twilight had fallen in the garden when the aide de camp appeared and halted at attention ten paces distant and saluted. The former king beckoned him to approach.

Prince Flukesboren rose—a tall bulky figure in the dusk—shaking hands as he thanked me for my "bon voyage" on his trip to Italy.

ORGANIZE TO BACK WOMAN FOR SENATOR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Mrs. Charles S. Pillsbury, member of the milling family of Minnesota and one of the foremost women of the Northwest, has been made chairman of the first woman-for-Senator committee, an organization of women from the various States who, irrespective of party affiliations, have set out to elect to the United States Senate Mrs. Anna D. Olesen of Minnesota, the first woman ever nominated to that high office by either of the great parties of the country. They propose to do this by making a nation-wide drive for funds to enable Mrs. Olesen to carry on her campaign.

This information was brought to Washington by Mrs. Pattie Ruffner Jacobs of Birmingham, Ala., treasurer of the committee. Mrs. Jacobs, who was on her way to Boston, was enthusiastic over the chances for a successful outcome of the fight Mrs. Olesen is putting up against her opponent, Senator Kellogg.

"When Mrs. Olesen started her campaign," said Mrs. Jacobs, "she had only $30, gathered by passing the hat at her open meeting, a 'flivver' presented to her by the women of Minneapolis. Not newspaper in Minnesota was for her. Her job was to make friends and votes largely among Scandinavians. These people, as a class, are not for woman's suffrage. But she won them over. She is winning many others over too. Democrats, Republicans, Independents and the Farmer-Labor group are all keenly interested in the progress she is making."

YOSEMITE PARK BREAKS RECORD

TRAVEL YEAR JUST ENDED SHOWS HUGE INCREASE IN VISITORS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Oct. 1.—A total of 100,566 persons, traveling by train, automobile, motorcycle, horseback, carriages, wagons and afoot broke all records for National Park attendance in Yosemite during the "travel year" just closed, according to official figures compiled here today. The total was 9000 greater than in 1921.

Railroad vacationers, aggregating 32,651, registered the greatest increase over previous seasons, showing approximately 35 per cent growth in this class of visitors over last year. The increase in automobile travel into the park was slight owing to the late opening of the roads in the spring.

According to W. B. Lewis, superintendent of the park, 64,737 persons drove into his bailiwick in 19,583 private automobiles. More than 1200 walked in, approximately 400 rode in on horseback, while besides the 32,651 who came by railroad, there were numerous others who arrived aboard motorcycles and horsedrawn vehicles.

The "travel year" which these figures cover is purely a statistical period, at the end of which the park records are closed. The park, however, remains open to visitors the year round.

ADMIRAL APPOINTED AS HAGUE ADVISER

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Designation of Rear Admiral W. H. Rodgers of the Navy General Board to act as technical adviser to John Bassett Moore, commissioner of the United States at the conference of jurists to meet at The Hague next December 10 to discuss changes in the rules of international law, was announced today by the State Department.

Admiral Rodgers represented the Navy Department in the advisory committees created by the government in connection with the Washington conference on limitation of armaments.

COLLEGIAN FATALLY HURT IN CLASS RUSH

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MILTON (Wis.) Oct. 1.—Roland Sayre, 20 years old, Milton College sophomore, died today in Janesville Mercy Hospital from injuries received in the annual freshman sophomore class rush September 22.

Keeping secret the fact that he had suffered a broken rib the night of September 21 during an informal battle on the campus between underclassmen, Sayre entered the formal rush on the following afternoon despite his injury. During the melee one of his kidneys was ruptured by contact with the fractured rib. Uremis poisoning followed, resulting in his death.

HOTEL BUILT FOR REFUGEES

MOSCOW HAS BUILDING FOR POLITICAL CAST-OFFS OF OTHER LANDS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—A new international hotel for political emigrants intended for communists expelled from the United States and elsewhere has just opened in Moscow.

The house starts with fifty-seven guests though the number of foreign bolshevists who have sought refuge in Russia after expulsion is far larger.

The notables among the refugees are quartered elsewhere, many having been given good posts either in Moscow or abroad while others, like Emma Goldman for example, who is now in Berlin, have voluntarily left Russia preferring life under a bourgeoise regime.

Regulations have also been drafted for the colonies of foreign workmen who emigrate to Russia and who, even though communists, will not be obliged to practice communism, but given full liberty to regulate their own affairs.

ROOSEVELT STAMP TO BE ISSUED SOON

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A new 11-cent postage stamp, peacock blue in color, with the portrait of Rutherford B. Hayes, will be on sale on October 4 at Fremont, O., commemorating the one-hundredth anniversary of the former President's birth, according to a statement issued by W. Irving Glover, third assistant postmaster-general.

This is the first postage stamp to be placed on sale of the complete new series planned by the Postoffice Department. The new 5-cent Roosevelt stamp will be available, Mr. Glover stated, on October 27, the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt. One reason for the selection of Roosevelt's portrait for the 5-cent stamp was the fact that this denomination is most widely used on letters to foreign countries, where the President's fame was believed to be more universal than that of any other.

It is planned to place on sale the new 50-cent stamp with a picture of the Arlington amphitheater and the tomb of the unknown soldier on Armistice Day, November 11.

In the new series of denominations the 13-cent stamp has been dropped and 14-cent and 25-cent stamps have been added.

SILESIA CONDUCTS ELECTION FOR DIET

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WARSAW, Oct. 1.—Poland's promise to the Allies to give home rule to Silesia has been realized in the first elections for the Silesian Diet, just held. The Poles secured thirty-four seats and the Germans fourteen. The German representation is 29 per cent of the total, despite the fact that the German vote in the March plebiscite ran to 40 per cent. The Diet will open on October 10.

George Tchitcherin, Russian Bolshevik Foreign Minister, has arrived in Warsaw, and is conferring with members of the government with a view to establishing economic arrangements. He said today that he was eager for peaceful relations between Poland and his country.

AMERICANS TO ASSIST BRAZIL NAVY GROWTH

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

RIO JANEIRO, Oct. 1.—It is reported here that as a consequence of the visit of Rear-Admiral Vogelgesang, U.S.N., a contract has been signed between the Brazilian government and the American naval mission whereby American officers will assist in reorganization of the system of naval instruction in Brazil, as well as in other naval activities.

RUTHENIAN REVOLT DRAWS POLISH FIRE

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WARSAW, Oct. 1.—A lively little reign of terror is on in Lemberg in Eastern Galicia between Ruthenians, who object to the virtual annexation of their country by Poland, and Polish authorities and leaders. A number of buildings of Ruthenia societies were dynamited Friday in retaliation for terrorist attacks on Polish representatives.

SINGERS FIGHT OVER CONCERT MANAGER

LEULA MALIUS AND WALSKA ARE BOTH SEEKING HIS SERVICES

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HOBOKEN (N. J.) Oct. 1.—Jules Dairber, concert manager and whimsical claimant of the distinction of being the only man in the world over whom suit for the alienation of managerial affections has been brought, returned from Europe yesterday aboard the America.

Mr. Dairber referred to the suit filed recently in Federal Court in New York by Leula Malius coloratura soprano, restraining him from acting for Ganna Walska, Polish soprano, and wife of Harold F. McCormick, who is to head her own company in Paris next spring. Mr. Dairber was engaged to employ a supporting company for Miss Walska.

Madame Walska, Mr. Dairber said, had not decided whether she would come to America for a tour this season. He added that Muriel McCormick, Madame Walska's step-daughter, would be a member of her Paris company.

Mr. Dairber praised Malius's operatic talents, but could not understand why trying to deprive him of his hood.

The Pudding Pan's Diary

SATURDAY

AWOKE and found that the prune I stewed last night had been served. At seventeen by the kitchen clock I went to the oven with some breakfast food to crisp. Then I was given six eggs which, after warming up to my work and with the aid of a spoon, I poached with a little less than one-half the amount of heat ordinarily used. You see I beat up evenly all over, held the heat a long time and, therefore, I save a lot of fuel.

After breakfast I made a delicious rice pudding for luncheon. The children love the kind I make. And, then, it became a question of whether I would make soup, or heat up a can of beans. The soup won.

Later in the afternoon I was given the delightful job of molding fruit gelatine. That being turned out onto a dish and placed in the ice box, I was sent to the oven to make a chicken pie. Tonight I'm in the refrigerator keeping some food cold. Because of the thickness of the aluminum from which I am made, I absorb cold as well as I absorb heat. And, being made of hard, cold-rolled metal, I resist the action of strong food acids. I do not absorb odors or flavors, and I am safe and sanitary.

Tomorrow is Sunday. I always start Sunday upside down—inverted over a dish of griddle cakes to keep them hot. I love that job, too.

CHARGE PAIR ROBBED WIDOW

Insurance Agent and Helper in Jail at Tulare

Lindsay Lets Contract for Street Paving

Car Shortage Causes Loss to Grape Growers

TULARE, Oct. 1.—Charles Harvey, Santa Paula life insurance agent, and a woman giving her name as Dessa Stapp, are confined in the Tulare County Jail following their arrest in Bakersfield by special agents of the District Attorney's office.

County officers believe they have two of the smoothest operators who ever worked this part of California.

They were arrested on charges of conspiracy preferred by Mrs. Mae Bradley of Tulare, a widow of a little over a month and mother of two small children, who through asserted swindling operations of the two was fleeced of about $11,000 life insurance left by her late husband.

She declares that soon after her husband's death Harvey arrived on the scene and offered to help get the insurance and to aid in other business matters; that she trusted him and accepted his advice and that of Mrs. Stapp in planning to take up work of selling children's endowment policies, the method to be taught by Mrs. Stapp. In the meantime she accompanied them to Los Angeles where the policies were paid and the checks cashed. In a few days the duo by asserted fraudulent misrepresentations secured the money and that she was left almost penniless.

The case is to be prosecuted vigorously. The prisoners will be arraigned before Judge Rush of Tulare within a few days.

NEW BANKING-HOUSE

Third Financial Institution Opens At Porterville

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 1.—The Home Bank, Porterville's new financial institution, the third in the city, will open its doors Monday morning, October 2.

Temporary quarters are located in the Porterville Hardware Building on Main street but a permanent banking home will be erected on the Trager corner where a site has been purchased by the institution. Modern equipment and safety devices have been installed and every convenience will be offered the public.

The Home Bank is a local institution, the stockholders and officers being Porterville business men almost exclusively. Associated with it are banking men of years of experience and a capital of $125,000 is said to have been paid in.

UNUSUAL LAW SUIT

LINDSAY, Oct. 1.—Suit for a restraining order designed to prohibit Dr. W. W. Tourtillot of Lindsay, long-established practicing physician and surgeon of this city, from practicing in and around Lindsay, has been filed by Dr. H. R. D. Shoemaker, also of Lindsay.

Dr. Shoemaker says that he purchased the office, equipment, practice and good-will of Dr. Tourtillot on Sept. 28, 1921, but that the defendant resumed practice in Lindsay Aug. 1, 1922.

This is the first such suit of record in the courts of Tulare county in many years and is causing considerable interest.

PAYS THE PENALTY

VISALIA, Oct. 1.—Frank Lehman, who admitted burglarizing the mountain home of Bill Hart near Eshom Valley, was sentenced to San Quentin penitentiary for an indeterminate term by Superior Judge J. A. Allen.

Lehman did not ask probation. F. E. Peacock and his wife, Kate, pleaded guilty to the same offense and asked probation which was granted.

No charge was filed against Helen Lehman, wife of Frank Lehman, a fourth member of the mountain party which traded an automobile for a horse and rig at Porterville and started on a trip through the mountains during which several ranchers reported articles stolen. Much of the stolen property was found with the party when arrested.

EXPENSIVE CAR SHORTAGE

VISALIA, Oct. 1.—The car shortage in Tulare county will cost the grape men of this county approximately $2,000,000, according to Frank R. Brann, horticultural commissioner, who has just completed a survey of the situation.

The lack of refrigerator cars, causing shipment in other cars with a waste of time, except for the packer, he declares, is causing heavy loss. Wine grape growers and those whose product yields readily to crushing for the juice are losing heavily in not being able to get their crop shipped to the market at a time when the price is highest.

Tons of grapes are rotting, in spite of the fact that everyone who can is drying, he declares. Some packers have already been compelled to dump grapes because of lack of cars in which to ship.

LET PAVING CONTRACT

LINDSAY, Oct. 1.—Contract for two miles of city paving has been let to the Clark and Henry Construction Company of Stockton by the city trustees. The bid called for $1.88 per cubic yard for grading and 22.2 cents per square foot for paving. Material will be asphalt and concrete and work will start October 10. It will be pushed to completion before the rainy season.

Streets to be paved include Hermosa from Mirage avenue, Foster, Harvard, Homassel, Ballah and Orange.

When this work is completed all of the streets leading to Lindsay schools will have been paved.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

VISALIA, Oct. 1.—Helen Danner, Dinuba chiropractor, was given a suspended sentence of three months in the County Jail by Superior Judge W. B. Wallace. She has entered a plea of "guilty" to a charge of practicing without a State license.

OBERAMMERGAU ACTORS SHAVE

Defiant Act Intended to Upset Film Men's Plans for Passion Play

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH. [Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.]

MUNICH, Oct. 1. — A number of leading actors in the Oberammeragau Passion Play have visited the barber and had their locks shorn. They did this in order to end the temptations of foreign movie men who are steadily increasing their offers for the privilege to film the Passion Play.

The bidding had run so high and the disappointment over the steadily shrinking value of the play's earnings of 21,000,000 marks was becoming so manifest the idealists feared the town meeting might vote to accept.

WISCONSIN EXPECTS HUGE LOGGING YEAR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BIRCHWOOD (Wis.) Oct. 1. Indications now point to one of the greatest logging seasons in many years, and preparations are under way at present to take care of a large cut of timber. A large number of logging companies operating in this region have declared that because of the better lumber prices this year operations will be the greatest since the war.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER (Colo.) Oct. 1.—Denver property owners will redeem from holders of tax certificates property worth approximately $5,000,000 in 1922, paying not less than $200,000 in delinquent taxes and interest. This establishes a record and represents the heaviest redemption of property sold for taxes in the history of Denver.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER (Colo.) Oct. 1. — St. Luke's Hospital, the Salvation Army, the Children's Hospital Association and the Sunshine Mission are beneficiaries under the will of Benjamin K. Kimberly, who died in Denver, August 23. The estate amounts to $15,000.

DRY DAYS INCREASE INSANITY

Double Number Maniacs in Chicago Now Than Before Prohibition Act

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—In the pre-Volstead days the victim of alcoholics became shiftless, unable or unwilling to care for his family, unkempt and an all-around worthless bum.

Today he becomes a maniac, a train wrecker, house breaker. He assaults women and little children. In many cases he dies a horrible death. Frequently, when death does not come quickly, he becomes blind or insane and he cannot be cured.

According to statistics compiled by Dr. James Whitney Hall, assisted by a number of physicians who have kept records at various hospitals, insanity in Chicago has increased more than 100 per cent since the Volstead Act went into effect. An average of 150 persons are becoming insane every week, as against sixty or seventy weekly in the days before prohibition. Every hospital accepting mental cases is packed beyond capacity. Patients are sleeping on the floors, on cots and in bathtubs.

These are the victims of the deadly hootch, distilled in some barn or basement, of poisonous ingredients and sold under forged labels as whisky or brandy.

CAMPAIGN TO LESSEN FACTORY ACCIDENTS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1.—Pointing out that two-thirds of the 3500 deaths in 1921 occurred in industrial establishments, the Personal Managers' Club of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce has arranged for a series of lectures on accident prevention for the fall and winter to be held in the central branch of the Y. M. C. A. The plan is part of an informal campaign to reduce the number of accidents in Brooklyn industries.

CITY CHANGES NAME

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST. PAUL, Oct. 1.—South Stillwater has declared its independence and has changed its name to the city of Bayport. Bayport's declaration of independence from Stillwater was made at a special election when residents voted 151 to 37 to change its name.

Pacific-Southwest Review

By JAMES O. MOORE, Vice-President Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank

Jas. O. Moore

It is believed by many students of finance that the development of branch banking in California is the beginning of a movement which may eventually result in the United States again adopting a system of banking which coincides, in all major principles, with the banking systems which have proved successful in all other important commercial countries.

Such a development would re-establish a banking system of the type which was undergoing rapid development in the United States until the exigencies of the Civil War started the United States in the development of banking practices absolutely at variance with those in all other countries of the world.

Prior to the Civil War practically the only banks which had maintained records of long and successful existence in the United States were those which were based upon the branch banking principles.

The change of name of this bank to the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank was made so that the title under which it operates may be properly descriptive of the territory served.

Due to government financing requirements during the Civil War a system of national banks was inaugurated in the United States. This system was developed primarily to finance the Government with little attention to scientific banking principles and so made no provisions for branch banking. While not entirely satisfactory, it was so much superior to certain State banking systems, or rather lack of systems, which were existent in this country, that the various state bank laws gradually came to be modeled closely upon the national bank laws and consequently almost entirely eliminated branch banking in the United States.

In the meantime, other countries were developing important branch banking systems until today the United States stands as the one leading commercial country which is not operating its banks primarily along this line.

It is particularly interesting to note that irrespective of the stage of development of the country in which tried, branch banking has always proved popular and successful. For example, England, France and Germany, leading commercial and industrial countries prior to the War were operating most successfully under a series of branch banks. On the other hand, such countries as Canada, which were largely countries undergoing development of natural resources, found branch banking systems necessary to their most satisfactory growth.

In the United States, the only important piece of national banking legislation passed since the Civil War was the Federal Reserve Act, which recognized the undoubted soundness of the branch banking principle and the benefits to accrue to the country through the operation of branch banks within the Federal Reserve Bank system.

Now California is definitely adopting the banking system which has universally proved successful in all other countries and the entire financial world is watching the development of branch banking in this State in the belief that this system, based upon the sound principles which have made branch banking the most effective banking system throughout the world, may mark the beginning of the return of the United States to the banking principles which have proved most serviceable in all other countries.

HISTORIC TREES STILL SURVIVE

Giants of Mexico Date Back to Spanish Conquest

Cortes Wept Under Boughs of One After Defeat

Scientists Plan to Save Old Relics of Remote Past

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—Notwithstanding the recent published report that the "Tree of Tule," known to Mexicans as "El Arbol de Tule," was in its declining years, a scientific investigation of the famous living relic that connects the present with the remote past shows that it is good for perhaps another 200 or 300 years of life.

Attention also has been called to other outstanding trees in Mexico, all of which are to be carefully examined and steps taken to arrest any outward evidences of decay that they may be showing.

From the standpoint of age the giant ahuehuetls of Mexico are perhaps more notable than the trees of any other country. Some of these trees date back far beyond the time of the Spanish Conquest.

ARBOL DE TULE

One of the oldest trees in Mexico is "El Arbol de Tule," also known as Humboldt's tree from the fact that it bears on one side his name with an inscription and the date of his visit. This tree is in Oaxaca. It was in 1502 that Humboldt passed the "precious tree" on his way to the ruins of Mitla.

By his order a tablet with the inscription "El Arbol Querido" was placed thereon and signed by himself. This table is oval in shape and is about six feet from the ground and is four or five feet high by three or four feet in width. Whether it was originally oval-shaped is not certain as the edges are entirely overgrown with the bark which has encroached upon the lettering until the ends of the lines are obscured, although enough remains to give its meaning. It has the appearance of a place that was smoothed in the bark to the wood underneath and carved but is thought to have been a separate tablet of ahuehuetl wood graven with the inscription and which in the more than 3 century of its stay has become imbedded in the bark and incorporated as part of the tree.

WRITING CLEAR

The inscription is still clear and legible where it can be seen, while Humboldt's name and the date are perfectly distinct. On another side of the tree Humboldt's name in letters over a foot high may be seen.

In their relation to historical events, the "Arbol de la Noche Triste" at Popotla, under which Hernan Cortes is said to have wept, and Montezuma's tree, under whose shade the Emperor Montesuma mourned over his defeat, are perhaps the most interesting and important of Mexico's ancient trees.

It was in 1502 that Montesuma II was raised to the Aztec throne, and on March 20, 1519, the conquerer, Cortes, landed on Mexican soil. From time immemorial the Aztecs had believed that a god, fair of skin and of heroic mien, would appear and dwell with them. Under the impression that Cortes was the long-prophesied god, Montesuma and his train met the visitors outside of Tenochtitlan, the capital city, and welcomed them as beings of a higher world, offering them the hospitality of the land and its treasures.

This friendly attitude must have amazed the Spanish chief and his followers, who were bent only upon conquest, and with flying colors and martial music, they entered the gates of the city. The grandeur of the scenery, the well-cemented pavements, the large and beautiful buildings, must indeed have been a source of astonishment to these men from Spain, who had doubtless expected to find an ignorant and savage people dwelling so far from the then-civilized part of the world.

PROUD RACE

These evidences of wealth and progress only served to make the Spaniards more covetous, and they determined to redouble their efforts to conquer the inhabitants and lay claim to the vast wealth of the land. Cortes was soon to learn, however, that the conquest of this strong and proud race was no easy task.

After much wranny and many depredations, including the confiscation of the imperial treasure, Cortes seized the Emperor and held him as a hostage against any treacherous act on the part of the people. This conduct on the part of the invaders caused the natives to look upon them as demons rather than gods.

Montezuma's brother, Cuitlahua, lord of Istapalapan, had also been made a prisoner. However, upon the return of Cortes from an expedition to the coast, where he had defeated a political rival, who had just landed from Spain, he found the entire city in a tumult, the people having revolted against the cruel and humiliating treatment they had received at the hands of the Spanish soldiers who had been left by their leader to guard the place.

BROTHER RELEASED

To quiet the revolt Cortes released Cuitlahua, who, smarting under the injuries and indignation he and his people had suffered, exerted himself to arrange a definite program of warfare against the intruders. Rallying the great army of Montesuma, Cuitlahua led them against the Spaniards. Battle after battle was waged, victory and defeat alternating with each side. Finally it was agreed by Cortes and his officers to retreat from Tenochtitlan, the plan being to go to Tlascala where future operations would be decided upon.

The night of the retreat is known in Mexican history as "La Noche Triste," or sad night, because of the fierce and bloody battle that was fought during the hours of darkness. It was on the morning after this sad night that Cortes, as he sat under one of the great trees by the roadside, and looked upon the desolation that surrounded him and his thin and disordered ranks paused before him, that his anguish gave vent to tears.

The tree pointed out as that which sheltered Cortes while he rested and gave way to grief is now enclosed with an iron railing as a protection against relic-seekers from whom I was in danger of being cut down and carried off in pieces. In 1872 this historic tree was injured by fanatical Indians in an attempt to burn it down, and for a while an armed patrol guarded it.

Although still alive, this ancient tree shows signs of decay and some years ago all of the dead matter was removed from its heart, the live wood thoroughly scraped and the openings filled with cement in an effort to prolong its life.

In the beautiful garden of Chapultepec is Montesuma's tree. This ill-fated emperor had been only upon conquest, and with flying colors and martial music, they entered the gates of the city. The grandeur of the scenery, the well-cemented pavements, the large and beautiful buildings, must indeed have been a source of astonishment to these men from Spain, who had doubtless expected to find an ignorant and savage people dwelling so far from the then-civilized part of the world.

FIGURES SHOW RESULTS

There is an old saying that figures never lie; therefore, the totals required to express the activities of the Orpheum circuit not only have the glamour and fascination of their phenomenal growth, but they tell a story of achievement which is an inspiration to every boy and man in this country, and a striking commentary on the expansion of the United States in the third of a century which has elapsed since the founding of the Orpheum.

On that day in October, 1887, when Mr. Martin Beck and Mr. Morris Meyerfeld, Jr., opened the doors of the first Orpheum Theater in San Francisco, they provided a program of seven acts which called for the services of less than a dozen persons. The attaches of the theater, including the orchestra, ushers, stage hands, and cleaners numbered less than fifty—or a total of about sixty persons who derived salaries from the Orpheum.

During the week of October 23, which is to be celebrated nationally as "Orpheum Circuit Third-of-a-Century Anniversary Week," this organization will have in its direct control fifty theaters, valued at over $40,000,000, most of which are the outright property of the circuit.

There will be more than 325 of the highest class and most expensive acts comprising the program of these theaters and in addition more than 100 minor theaters, and 600, direct or indirect subsidiaries of this amusement company.

In the fifty theaters of the Orpheum circuit, more than 2700 men and women will receive salary checks at the end of anniversary week and 200 more are employed in the general offices maintained in Chicago and New York. In the subsidiary theaters a total of 3500 more are on the pay rolls, or a total of about 7400 men and women, the outgrowth of the sixty who were Orpheum employees thirty-three and one-third years ago.

The amount of the salaries paid in those days forms an interesting comparison also, with those of today. The cost of the program that first week in 1887 was about $1200. Today the program of an Orpheum Theater in one of the big cities frequently runs to six or seven times that amount, while that of the programs in all the fifty houses amounts to an average of more than a $250,000 weekly.

Large as this figure is, it becomes at least doubled when the salaries of Orpheum subsidiaries are added, while the wages of the orchestras and of the employees in the various departments of the physical operation of the theaters, have risen from about $100,000 to over $160,000, which in turn is augmented by the houses indirectly dependent on the Orpheum to a total of over $400,000 per week.

This added to the total of $500,000 paid to the artists on the bill, and the salaries paid the members of the general office staff, makes a sum of nearly $1,000,000 paid in salaries every week, against the $2250 which was the salary list a third of a century ago.

MAN'S HEAD FOUND IN PARK PACKAGE

NEW YORK POLICE SEEKING MOTIVE FOR MYSTERY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — The finding by two boys of the head of an unidentified man, apparently an Italian, about 27 years old, wrapped in a bed ticking and brown paper, in Bronx Park, furnished the police a new mystery.

One theory is that the man was a victim of the Black Hand and another is that he was killed as a result of a bootleggers' feud.

One outstanding fact, the police said, was that the slayer or slayers wanted it to become known that the man had been put out of the way, otherwise the head would have been thrown into the river or otherwise disposed of.

Photographs of the head were taken and broadcasted all over the city tonight by the police in an effort to learn the identity of the man. The murder, according to the police, had occurred within forty-eight hours of the finding of the head.

Juárez se Halla ya en Calma

EL PASO, octubre 1.—Eugenio Martínez, Jefe de la zona militar del norte de México, llegó anoche a Juárez con cuatrocientos infantes procedentes de la ciudad de Chihuahua. Viene a reforzar la guarnición de Juárez, con motivo de la frustrada intentona que hicieron 150 soldados rebeldes del 42 Regimiento, de apoderarse de la ciudad a nombre del General Francisco Murguía, Jefe de la más reciente revolución de México. Cien dragones del 42 Regimiento habían llegado de Casas Grandes un poco más temprano, en la tarde.

Juárez se halla tranquilo, estando la ciudad y suburbios dominados por las fuerzas federales que son al mando del General J. J. Méndez, Jefe de la Guarnición. Los soldados, los guardas fiscales y los civiles, dirigidos por el General Méndez, desbarataron el levantamiento antes de la llegada de refuerzos. En telegrama del Presidente Obregón, de que el General Martínez dió conocimiento, se recomienda que la guarnición de Juárez sea acuartelada fuera de la ciudad de hoy en adelante, a fin de evitar la posibilidad de desórdenes dentro de la población.

REVOLT CHIEF IN EL PASO?

a two-hour battle about the customs house.

The number of dead was reported today as follows:

Seven rebels, three executed prisoners, two fiscal guards, one private of the Second Regiment of mounted gendarmes and one civilian. At Liberty Hospital there were five wounded rebels, one loyal soldier and four civilians. Three officers wounded in the battle were in El Paso hospitals, while several soldiers, fiscal guards and civilians slightly hurt were at their homes and had not been listed.

"The situation is quiet and I probably will leave for the south soon," Gen. Martinez said. "Troops which I brought to Juarez with me will remain here until further arrangements are made."

The first formal court-martial proceeding in connection with the revolt began early this morning. First Sergeant Francisco Castro was the accused. He was charged with failure to perform his duty. He was in command of the guard at the barracks when the uprising occurred.

Gen. Martinez said today that it was believed that only 100 men of the Forty-third Regiment revolted.

Revolutionists on the American side of the border had planned to send an expedition into Chihuahua southeast of Juarez this morning, Mexican Federal authorities said. The plans were known. The insurrectionists, well equipped, were to have crossed at 4 a.m. But the revolt of 150 men of the Forty-third Regiment in Juarez prompted United States agents to move swiftly to round up the alleged plotters in El Paso.

Mexican Federal authorities declared they believed the garrison revolt and the plans of the El Paso revolutionists had no connection.

TURKISH AIMS ARE MISTRUSTED

Cabinet permitted Gen. Harington to send the virtual ultimatum to the Turks to clear out.

Although the Turks have not yet withdrawn completely, they have evacuated the heights of Eren Keui and have desisted also from parading before the British wire entanglements.

MANY DISPUTES DUE

If the Turks around Ismid commence such tactics or attempt to enter the neutral zone at that point, there is likelihood that the British will raise the question before entering the conference.

It is known that while Gen. Harington is making every effort to maintain peace, he is a most exacting and determined person when given cause.

Another question which may arise with the conference is the form of government or control to be established in Thrace pending the terms of peace. It is certain that the Turks will demand that they be permitted to take over and reoccupy Thrace immediately to protect their nationals, keep order and prevent confusion and crime with the withdrawal of the Greeks. It is suggested that Allied officials and troops might be used for this purpose.

Under these heads the conference promises many disputes. In some diplomatic circles there is a certain optimism over the situation, it being pointed out that the Turks are "too wise to fight when they know they risk all by such a course, whereas they are assured of many advantages before the peace conference opens."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 30.—(Delayed.) A dispatch from Sofia today reports that M. Standua was assassinated in his home Thursday night. M. Standua was the leader of the Macedonian revolutionary committee and was responsible for many prominent political assassinations in Bulgaria.

The Bolsheviks are enraged, claiming that M. Stamboulinsky, Premier of Bulgaria, is responsible for the assassination, fearing for his own safety and heeding the demands of the Little Entente to suppress the activities of the revolutionists.

PLAN TRIBUTE TO COLUMBUS

Bones of Great Discoverer Lie Neglected

Erection of Great Memorial is Proposed

American Republics Seek to Make Amends

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Removal of a stain on the honor of American republics which have permitted through indifference the remains of Christopher Columbus to lie in comparative neglect in an obscure cathedral in Santo Domingo is to be undertaken by Latin-American delegates to the next Pan-American Conference at Chile.

Announcement that Secretary Hughes hoped to attend those sessions has prompted the belief his personal influence could be enlisted if the matter of a suitable memorial for the discoverer of America were presented to the conference.

The Dominican Republic has done as much as that small ward of the United States could possibly do, yet nothing approaching preservation of the bones of Columbus in a suitable dignity ever has been undertaken. His remains are subject to the curiosity of casual tourists and frequently have been disturbed.

EYED BY CURIOUS

"What would the English people say," one enthusiast declared today, "if at Stratford-on-Avon it were the custom to open from time to time the tomb of the immortal Shakespeare to permit the gaze of the curious; or the French, if a similar desecration were perpetrated at the tomb of Napoleon; what would New Yorkers think if Grant's Tomb on Riverside Drive were thrown open to every passerby? What a wave of indignation would sweep over America if it believed the venerated portals of Mt. Vernon were made free to the occupants of every sightseeing bus which makes its way to the tomb of George Washington?"

The last expressed wish of Columbus was to be buried in the land which he discovered. When he died at Valladolid, Spain, on May 20, 1506, after years of privation and discouragement, his remains were twice interred in Spain before their removal to Santo Domingo about 1540. In December, 1795, the Spanish authorities decided to take back to Spain the relics of the man who had discovered a new empire for them, and they did transport to Spain what was believed to be the bones of Columbus. Subsequently study and research developed that the Spaniards took not the bones of Christopher Columbus, but those of Diego, his son.

The discovery that a kind of a poetic justice had brought about the realisation of the last wish of Columbus to be buried in the land he first touched, came as the result of mere accident. In 1877 it was established that the bones of the great explorer had not been transported to Spain; but remained in a leaden box some twenty-four inches in length, which was found at Santo Domingo. Today this leaden casket, containing the bits of bones and dust which once were the great admiral, is not even sealed.

"When some high dignitary comes to town," said William E. Pulliam, receiver-general of the Dominican customs, in a report just received by the War Department, "the inner casket has been opened to allow closer inspection and actual handling of the bones themselves. This happened upon the occasion of the visit of Secretary of War Stimson and his party in 1911, and also in the year following when Secretary Knox and numerous parties made their ceremonial trip around the Caribbean circle. The writer was present upon both occasions and admits, but not without some self-reproach, that he, too, handled some of the bone fragments.

"It was that very fact which first suggested the idea that it should be the concern of Pan-America, the peoples of the twenty-one republics occupying the territory of North and South America and Canada, to provide a suitable memorial and final resting place for Columbus in the cradle of America, as Santo Domingo is called. Santo Domingo cannot do it alone."

MEMORIAL PLANNED

The proposal which apparently is most favored by the republics comprising the Pan-American Union provides for the erection in Santo Domingo as nearly as possible to the exact spot where Columbus first touched the land of the new world a magnificent memorial, which shall combine the qualities of a commemorative tomb with those of the most powerful lighthouse in the world.

The project provides for a massive tomb, the interior of which shall be modeled upon that of the Invalides, and the exterior to be somewhat along the lines of Grant's Tomb on Riverside Drive.

The idea of a giant lighthouse has found particular favor, first, because the coast of Santo Domingo is a difficult one for mariners, and second, because of the peculiar appropriateness of commemorating the greatest navigator the world has ever known with the most powerful light in the world. The giant beacon tower would be more than 300 feet in height.

STRANGE VALLEY IS ENCOUNTERED

Discovery of 160 Acres in Mountain Range Announced

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

REDDING, Oct. 1.—Discovery of a 160-acre valley high up the Salmon River mountain range in Siskiyou county—a valley it is believed man never has penetrated—was reported yesterday by G. O. Laws deputy fish and game warden of Trinity county. The valley is surrounded by jagged granite peaks. Its elevation is reported at 9000 feet.

Law declares he scaled a peak and looked down upon the valley through spy-glasses. Through it a river flows, Law said, that plunges over a precipice 800 feet high, and empties into a branch of the Salmon River.

Forest rangers are now engaged in attempting to find an entrance to the valley.

STRIKE NOT TO STOP MOVEMENT OF COAL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON Sept. 30.—The impending lake seamen's strike will not seriously hinder the movement of coal into the northwest, in the opinion of government officials who are keeping in close touch with the situation.

The Labor Department received reassurances from William Livingston, president of the Lake Carriers' Association, that notwithstanding the prospective strike transportation facilities would be adequate to take care of all the coal that can be delivered at lake ports.

FROST TOUCHES CROPS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 1.—Autumn frosts have tipped crops of Winnebago county, but thus far have not caused serious damage.

MONEY FAMINE GRIPS BERLIN

Further Decline of Mark is Reichsbank Burden

Printing Presses Are Far Behind Demand

Rationing System Proves Utter Failure

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—The closing week of the month was marked by another sharp decline of the mark and the added aggravation of a money shortage crisis. The mark's closing quotation was 1650 to the dollar, while the money shortage assumed unprecedented proportions despite the Reichsbank's feverish efforts at relief the past three weeks.

The situation was such that big Berlin banks were unable to pay cash checks as small as 1000 marks. Many shops, plants and business houses were unable to meet their monthly payrolls. The government likewise was unable to make payments on money orders above 10,000 marks.

This is the situation after more than three weeks' uninterrupted operation of the Reichsbank's printing presses kept at work twenty-four hours daily in an effort to catch up with the shortage.

PRESSES HUMMING

On Friday the Reichsbank paid out more than 1,000,000,000 marks on demands from Berlin alone and 3,500,000,000 marks the last three days of the month.

The Reichsbank printing presses broke all records at the end of the month. No less than 5,000,000,000 marks were printed on Friday alone. This marks a production increase of 400 per cent and yet despite this and the extensive use of special Reichsbank checks, the money shortage remains unabated.

The Reichsbank's efforts to establish a rationing system whereby applicants received only 25 per cent of their demands proved a total failure, for applicants simply resorted to the obvious method of putting their demand at a figure 25 per cent of which covered their needs.

Moreover, only a small share of the Reichsbank's daily output or other banks daily payments find their way back to their treasuries, for the public is hoarding all the money it can for fear of the shortage becoming more acute.

SHORTAGE ACUTE

Thus despite the unprecedented output of new paper money by the Reichsbank, which has reached not less than 30,000,000,000 monthly, Germany continued to suffer an acute money famine.

Swimming in an ocean of paper money, German industry, business and people in general cannot find enough to satisfy their thirst. It is another case of water, water all around and not a drop to drink.

The chief source of trouble is the unabated rise in the cost of living and the panic animating business circles, who fear further decline of the mark and hoard vast sums of paper money while making ever more pressing demands on the Reichsbank, whose production of paper money in turn tends inevitably to bring on another crash of the mark, which according to opinion prevailing in financial circles now is hardly avoidable.

HUNGARY WILL SEIZE LANDS OF EMIGREES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BUDAPEST, Oct. 1.—The Hungarian government's announcement that it will start proceedings for high treason against all emigrees who fled the country after the collapse of the revolution unless they return to give an account of themselves or face punishment, brings a number of interesting Hungarian figures again into the limelight.

The threat probably will have little effect on such men as the distinguished novelist, Biro, or the painter, Barzok, but exiles with property in Hungary, are receiving news of the impending confiscation gloomily. There is an element of piquancy in the situation. Count Michael Karolyi, leader of the first revolution in 1918, owing to his wife's position as a daughter of the extremely conservative Karlist leader, Count Julius Andrassy, is likewise under the government ban, but for reactionary, not liberal activities.

The Count and Countess Karolyi, though owning vast estates in Hungary, are practically starving in Scutari. The Countess recently petitioned the government to make allowance from the estate to educate her two sons. Her father, while repudiating vociferously his revolutionary daughter and son-in-law, finds his indignation cooling when faced with surrendering part of the family estates to the government.

SEEMING DEFENSE OF VATICAN'S ACTS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.]

ROME, Oct. 1.—What bears the earmarks of being a semiofficial defense of the Vatican's action in placing works of Anatole France on the index appears in the Catholic Corriere D'Italia. "A Pope like Pius XI. booklover, humanist and scientist, has placed Anatole France on the index! Where are we?". The Vatican champion asks and answers: "In a silly, gossipy world. The defenders of liberty of thought in art should be tranquil. If M. France is a great artist he has found a judge worthy of him.

"If M. France was at least a professed Catholic, his case would afford more material for discussion. But M. France is not a Catholic. He is a dilettante, an unhealthy skeptic, a declared enemy of Christ and the church, the spirit of evil and impiety who takes a satanic pleasure in misunderstanding, doubting and blaspheming. Any honest peasant can see as well as the humanist Pope there is no place in the family of Christians for such a writer.

"In a recent novel this elegant malefactor of the pen defined Catholicism as the greatest impiety in history and predicted its end. In the year 2000 France's books will be molding in the libraries and the elegant skeptic will be unknown and forgotten."

CAR SHORTAGE AFFECTS GRAIN

Foreign Demand Unsatisfied With Roads Clogged

Boats Held at Seaboard to Await Cargoes

Canadian Roads Institute Permit System

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The situation in the grain trade is largely a matter of transportation.

There is a demand from abroad and from the East, the South and the Southwest for grain which cannot be filled owing to inability of the railroads to furnish sufficient transportation. Boats are held up at the seaboard and grain is being rushed all rail from Chicago to Atlantic ports and considerable to the Gulf ports to load steamers. Buffalo is congested and Georgian Bay ports are under the permit system, the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific refusing to accept business except on the permit plan.

EXPORT HALTED

Movements of grains at primary markets is heavy, 30,505,000 bushels last week, or 5,854,000 bushels, or 23.4 per cent above last year, and practically 4,000,000 bushels or 13 per cent over the five-year average. Grain is backing up at the primary markets and stocks are increasing, while the exporters are unable to do business because of inability to get grain moved.

"The effects of unwise injection of government in industry extends itself over many years of actual suffering and loss," said Julius H. Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and former government wheat director, who was here Saturday.

"I use, for instance, the situation in the grain trade and particularly as affecting the wheat. I speak with special interest because with thirty years' experience as a grain exporter I am personally competent to point this out to the grain trade. The direct result of the present situation depends upon the prosperity of the grain area of the West and the grain trade will comprehend the usual results which flow from inadequate transportation.

PRICE ADVANCE

"Between Buffalo and New York the four great trunk lines serving that port have since the first of September not contracted for a single bushel of grain for export movement. This constriction of the free flow has resulted in an advance in the wheat price in Liverpool exceeding the advance in Chicago and American markets by 5 to 7 cents per bushel.

"Within ten days the lake freight on grains from the Lake Superior port of Duluth and the eastern lake port of Buffalo has advanced from 2 to 5 cents per bushel. This increase is the measure of the vessel owners' apprehension that the grain-filled elevators of Buffalo cannot discharge the lake carriers on arrival and that the carrier will lose its earnings by lying in the port of Buffalo with undischarged grain, because the railroads east of Buffalo do not relieve the elevators of their accumulation there. The same condition exists between Chicago and Omaha and other western markets.

"Corn for September delivery in Chicago was worth around 63 cents on Saturday, while if that corn is delayed by inadequate transportation in December it will bring only 40 cents. Oats for September will bring 41¼ cents and for December 37 cents. Country elevators are full of corn and oats that should be moved to market on the high price of current delivery but which by every analysis of available transportation in sight will not arrive before the lower market basis for December instead.

"Therefore the price paid the growers of the west represents the hazard of that delayed transportation instead of the immediate market available at the close of September if such grains could have been shipped and delivered.

FARMERS LOSE

"The sum total of all these factors with relation to the wheat, corn and oats marketed by the farmers in the west may be fairly rated as to 5 cents to 10 cents lower than the present market would justify if supplied with liquid and adequate transportation. If Nebraska raises 500,000,000 bushels of grain and if this condition should maintain throughout the crop year it would mean that farmers there would be deprived of $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of possible earnings on their grain crop, and I do not need to point what $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 enlarged spending power of the farmers would mean to other industries as well.

"In this whole situation we see the evil reflected to the farmers of the West on this one commodity of grain arising out of inadequate transportation."

Wheat prices advanced part of the week in the face of an enormous marketing in the Northwest and in Canada, with fair export and milling demand and with accumulating supplies domestically, while abroad they have decreased.

ESTATE WILL PAY INHERITANCE TAX

ARCHITECT LEFT FORTUNE OF HALF A MILLION, REPORT

The estate of Octavius Morgan, one of the city's best known architects, who died at his home, 819 South Westlake avenue in March last, will pay an inheritance tax to the State of $14,704.08, according to a report just filed by E. P. Werner, inheritance tax attorney, in the office fo State Controller Ray L. Riley.

Mr. Morgan left a fortune approximating $500,000, represented almost entirely by realty holdings. The principal inheritors are a son and daughter, Octavius Weller Morgan and Jessie Morgan McGillvray. Small bequests were left to a sister, Charlotte Morgan, and to Miss Genevieve Fortier, the latter for a number of years the dead man's secretary.

VETS WILL GET DOG SHOW CASH

Hollywood Kennel Club Plans Affair Early in November

Officials of the Hollywood Kennel Club are formulating plans for a dog show to be held in Hollywood, November 17 and 18, next, the proceeds will be turned over to the Disabled Veterans of the World War, to be used in the reduction of their debt of $56,000.

Many men who became injured in the war have been unfortunate enough to lose their papers, or have failed to interest the government in their cases. Climatic conditions in other parts of the country are not beneficial to them, and they are finding their way to Los Angeles, hoping to regain their health here.

The Disabled Veterans own a building at 246 South Hill street, where living accommodations for fourteen men are maintained. Here the men are cared for until they can find employment, or until they are admitted to the Veterans' County Home at Altadena. Funds for this work are low, and it is for this reason that they have accepted the offer of the Hollywood Kennel Club.

Officers of the club in charge of the show are G. G. Greenwood, president; Charles H. Christie, vice-president; Freeman A. Ford, vice-president; Fred L. Porter, treasurer, and H. B. Benedict, secretary.

NEW YORKS LEADS

Of the total income tax New York paid 23.69 per cent; Pennsylvania 12.13 per cent; Illinois 8.68 per cent; Ohio 6.76 per cent, and Massachusetts 5.82 per cent, these five states paying together 57.08 per cent of the combined personal and corporation tax of the country. These States, with seven others, Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, New Jersey, California, Missouri and Maryland—twelve States in all, paid 95.52 per cent of the total tax.

The number of corporation income tax returns for the calendar year 1920 was 345,959. Of these 203,233 reported net income amounting to $7,902,654,813; income tax $636,508,292; war profits and excess profits tax $988,726,351; total tax $1,625,234,643.

New York filed the greatest number of returns, both individual and corporation, and reported the greatest amount of net income, followed by Pennsylvania and Illinois. The total number of returns filed by New York was 1,103,129, of which 1,047,634 were personal, and 55,-495 were corporation.

PENNSYLVANIA RETURNS

Pennsylvania filed 691,572 returns of which 672,746 were personal, and 18,827 were corporation.

The net income reported by individuals was $4,-030,622,696 and by corporations $1,958,629,723. The net income reported by New York was 18.92 per cent of the total reported by the United States, and the tax was 23.69 per cent of the total paid by the United States. The number of individuals who filed income tax returns for the calendar year 1920 was 7,259,944. The aggregate net income reported by these returns was $23,735,629,-183 and the total tax amounted to $1,075,053,686. As compared with 1919, the above figures show a growth of 1,527,184 in the number of returns filed and an increase in the total net income reported amounting to $3,876,137,735, but a decrease of $194,576,418 in the total tax.

As evidence of the increased scope of the work of the bureau of iternal, revenue and an increasing knowledge of taxpayers from year to year as to the requirements of the income tax law, the report shows that in 1917 there were filed 3,472,890 personal returns showing net income of $13,650,000,000, while in 1920 there were filed 7,259,944 personal returns showing a net income of $23,736,000,000.

New Home of Relief Bureau to be Opened

A musical and speaking program, with Bishop Cantwell as the principal speaker, will feature the formal opening tomorrow evening of the St. Vincent de Paul Society's new Waste Collection Bureau building at 727 North Broadway. Everyone, regardless of church affiliations, who is in sympathy with the charitable work being done by the Society is invited.

The new two-story brick building, which will be used as a permanent distributing center for the Waste Collection Bureau, was recently constructed on the rear of the lot, 60x220 feet, which, with the assistance of Bishop Cantwell, has been purchased by the Society.

One of the most important branches of the Society's charitable work is the gathering of used articles given to the bureau. This branch of the institution, established six years ago, has received and distributed among the poor 128,483 pieces of clothing, 332 suits, 3018 pairs of shoes, 1021 pieces of furniture and more than 5000 hats.

The bureau mends shoes, cleans clothing and otherwise repairs all material donated and, through its distributing centers, disposes of all gifts to the needy.

JAPONETTE

BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALLMENTS.

James Edgerton returns from Paris and finds that the house of Edgerton, Tennant & Co., from which he has derived his income, has failed, leaving him practically penniless. Arriving in New York, he resigns from his clubs and goes to his apartment. Upon entering, he finds his rooms occupied by two young women, Diana and Silvette Tennant, distant cousins, who, like himself, have been financially stranded by the failure of the firm. After being mistaken for a burglar by Diana, explanations follow, and Silvette, coming into the room, informs Edgerton that he cannot dispossess her by using the spare bedroom. The tenant sisters had taken the apartment to advertise for custom. As social entertainment, Edgerton joins in the plan, believing that his social prestige, coupled with the beauty and charm of his cousins, would enable them to make a good income. A Mr. Rivett calls in answer to the advertisement, and it is arranged that Diana, Silvetta and Edgerton go to Adirotha, the Rivetts' country home in the Berkshires, and Edgerton, in return for board and lodging, christens Diana Japonette, and promptly falls in love with her. Diana, while discussing Edgerton with Silvette, admits her interest in him, but promises, because of their mutual poverty to put him out of her thoughts. At Adirotha, Edgerton meets Christine Rivett, daughter of the house, she becomes interested in him and arouses Diana's secret jealousy. As the house party progresses, Diana and Edgerton have a spat. Mrs. Rivett, upon seeing Edgerton and her daughter, Christine, together, entertains unfounded hopes. Mr. Rivett, however, makes it clear that he objects to Christine taking Edgerton seriously, also that his wife feels the same way. Inwood, invited to Adirotha, but finds that Christine is only slightly interested in him, arranges to have an old friend, Billy Inwood, invited to Adirotha, but finds that Christine is only slightly interested in Billy. Diana, upon seeing the growing intimacy between Edgerton and Christine, is prepared and determined to make Edgerton see that his position in the house is a hum hating one for a man of his gifts, and decides to send him on an attempt to do something more worthy. Edgerton, upon noting Christine's growing interest in him, arranges to have an old friend, Jack Rivett, invited to Adirotha, but finds that Christine is only slightly interested in Jack. Diana, upon seeing the growing interest between Jack Rivett and Christine, loses control of his emotions and, while walking with Diana embraces her and declares his love. In the meantime, Jack Rivett, shadows Silvette, and she, in an attempt to divert him, tells him flatly that his attentions are worrying his father and mother. Jack Rivett, after some polite nary sparring, finally declares his love for Silvette, thus further complicating the affair. Silvette repulses him, but later admits to her sister that his attentions are not entirely distasteful to her. Mr. Rivett overhears out Diana and they have a heart-to-heart conversation, which leaves Diana with the feeling that she has been thoroughly pumped.

"I'm going for a ride with my wife"—he meant drive—"just a buggy and an old plug. She and I enjoy it, Miss Tennant."

To her surprise he took her hand between his own dry little palms and pressed it.

"You're a good girl," he said; "you and your sister—and Edgerton—he's all right—you're good children—and all of the same tree, little lady—all of the same old block in the beginning—that's plain as preaching. . . . Do you really like my Christine?"

"Yes, I do."

"And Jack?"

"Exceedingly."

"That's right; they like you, too, they ought to. They're good children, and so are you. Good-by."

Chapter X
COMPOS MENTIA

As Diana put her pony to a full gallop and rode him off, Edgerton's mount fell, and the young fellow lay sprawling on the sod.

He was on his feet immediately; so was his polo pony. When Diana pulled up, whirled her mount and came scurrying back, Edgerton had picked up his mallet and stood resting against his saddle.

"All right, Jim," she asked briefly.

"You look rather white," she insisted. "Did Parsnip kick you?"

"It's nothing," he said, smiling.

The girl looked after him, saw the groom slip a white wool polo coat over the young man's shoulders and take the pony, saw Edgerton drop his hands into the pockets and stroll across the field toward the terrace; then, lifting her mallet, she hailed Jack Rivett in a clear, ringing call, and cantered away up field.

"Good morning!" he said pleasantly, stopping on the gravel drive.

"Good morning, Mr. Edgerton. Are the young people amusing themselves?"

"I think so—thoroughly."

"You came a cropper?"

"I sometimes do."

"You are amusing yourself?"

"I always do."

"So do I," nodded Rivett, buttoning his gloves. "Never was bored in my life—poor compliment to one's self, Mr. Edgerton, to find life a bore."

Edgerton smiled and stood with his left hand in his coat pocket, looking out at the flat field beyond where half a dozen young people on lively ponies swung their mallets and cantered leisurely about in pretense of practice.

Presently Diana, Christine and Inwood swung their ponies and came driving pellmell down the field after the ball.

"Your cousins seem to be up to anything," commented Rivett.

"They were bred to everything worth while."

"Oh! Is polo worth while, as you call it?"

"Do you wish to start such a complex discussion?" asked Edgerton, laughing.

"No; my wife will be here in a moment. . . . You're looking very pale, young man," he added abruptly. "Did that pony hurt you?"

"A little. . . . Mr Rivett, do you need my services any longer?"

"I don't need anybody's services," said the little man dryly. "I never needed anybody in all my life—except my wife. There's no such thing as a necessary man. No man ever lived who couldn't be replaced. . . . What's the matter?" Edgerton said slowly: "I thought I'd go back to town and hunt up a job.

"Why?"

"Because there's no reason for my being here. There never was any reason. You knew it when I asked you to take me, but I didn't—because I didn't know you and your family."

"That's a compliment, isn't it?"

"It's just the truth. I'm glad my cousins are with you. . . . I'd like to go back now."

"Tired of us?"

"You don't have to ask that."

"More compliments," said Rivett. "What is wrong, then?"

"I am."

"Hadn't noticed it."

Edgerton smiled faintly. "More compliments? . . . Mr. Rivett, I want to go to town and hunt up a job, and get in the game. That's all."

"Can't you wait a month and see us through the October shooting?"

"I would, merely because you ask me, but I can't. I just want to get away quietly and not bother anybody. . . . I've broken my arm."

Mr. Rivett swung sharply and his eyeglasses glittered.

"Which?" he demanded.

"Won't you stay here and let us look after you?"

"I knew you'd say that. You've been very nice to me. Ask me again as a guest. I'll be glad to come as a friend if you care for me that way."

Mr. Rivett's unchanging eyes watched him.

"We'll ask you. My wife likes you. So do I. . . . I don't want to interfere with a man who knows his own mind. . . . But do you think you can stand the journey?"

Edgerton's white lips were compressed.

"Yes," he said.

"Very well; we'll stop at Fern Center. Billings can reduce the fracture."

"Are you going with me?"

"I certainly am," said the elder man.

With a valet's aid he got into his clothes. His swollen wrist lay in a sling.

"I won't bother the others now," he said to Mrs. Rivett who was on the edge of tears because he would not remain and let her take care of him. "Please say good-by for me when they come in and say I'm all right and hope to see them all again. . . . Good-by! . . . It's been a real happiness to know you—and yours. Will you let me continue the friendship?"

"Please do," she said, tremulously. "Jacob, you will tell Holmes to drive carefully, won't you?"

"Yes, mother. Billings is going to put him in good shape."

So they drove away in a big red touring car, Edgerton sick with pain, but perfectly cheerful; Rivett taciturn, twirling his gloved thumbs, seeming to muse gloomily in his serious manner.

Dr. Billings reduced the fracture—a simple one—Edgerton refusing anaesthetics. He fainted during the short operation, and came to with his head on Rivett's shoulder.

Half an hour later Edgerton was on his way to New York, lying back in a chair in the drawing-room car, feverish lips closed. Rivett sat in the chair opposite.

"I was going, anyway," he said briefly in reply to the young fellow's protest.

And together they made the journey, not only to the city, but to Edgerton's apartment, where Rivett quietly turned himself into a valet, helped the young man to bed, called up his physician, Dr. Ellis, lingered to learn what condition the patient was in, and silently vanished. And for two or three days Edgerton forgot about him, for Ellis kept him prostrated, and the nurse who had been summoned knew her business.

He managed, however, to write his bread-and-jam letter to Mrs Rivett, and another to Diana:

"My Dear Cousin:

"They've probably told you that I've been ass enough to snap a bone in my left arm. It's nothing, as you hunting people understand. I was a bit stupid with it, so I ran down to have it fixed up—and, incidentally, hunt up a job; and I wasn't up to explaining and saying by-by to everybody, so I just slunk off—ill-mannered pup that I am, but people are indulgent to dogs.

"This is but a line to take leave of you and Silvette, and to ask you to remember that, in any and all interims, this apartment, is a family joint, so don't go elsewhere and pay perfectly good rent. Your room and Silvette's are always ready for you—useless unless you use it.

"When I nail a job, I'll report to the family. If you make new plans, may I hear from you?

"Wishing you both a jolly and successful autumn.

"Your cousin,

"JAMES EDGERTON III."

IN this age when science has made light, power and water everywhere available, when machinery has lessened labor and anaesthetics have dulled the edge of pain, the funeral director has utilized science to lighten the burden of the sorrowing.

With the aid of science he is able to protect the family and the community from the danger of contagion, to make transportation safe, and to remove the traces of illness and unnaturalness which used to accentuate the grief caused by death.

With the help of professionally trained assistants, modern equipment, motorized conveyances, and often a fine funeral home or chapel, he is able to relieve the family of all details, and perform a service that brings comfort in the darkest hour and affords the consoling consciousness that the last tribute has been fitting and beautiful.

NEW WEAPONS IN ROBBERIES

Offer of Ride Followed by Vicious Attack

"Cigarette-Holder Bandits" Hold Up Driver

Crew of Street Car Forced to Yield Coin

Using revolvers, automatic pis- ette holders as weapons, auto ette holders as weapons, auto bandits early yesterday morning held up and robbed two pedestri- ans, one taxi driver and a Pacific Electric car crew.

Edward Potts of 361 West Six- ty-first street fell victim to the monkey-wrench bandits. Accord- ing to Mr. Potts's story to the po- lice, he was waiting for a street car when three men drove by and offered him a ride toward his home. He said he accepted their invitation and for a time every- thing was serene and lovely. Then, at the intersection of Vernon and Grand avenues, one of the trio reached into a side pocket of the car, extracted a monkey wrench, and without a word struck Mr. Potts on the head. The blow cut a deep gash in Mr. Potts's scalp and rendered him partly unconscious. The bandits lifted him from their car and left him in the street minus $10. A few minutes later a motorist conveyed Mr. Potts to the Receiving Hospital, where he was given treatment.

TAXI DRIVER VICTIM

The cigarette-holder bandits (a new species in local crime statistics) held up and robbed Charles R. Payne, a taxi driver, with a stand at Fourth and Hill streets. Mr. Payne told the police that he had picked up two men as passengers, who ordered him to drive to Co- ronado street and Sunset Boulevard. As he turned into Coronado street from the boulevard, he said he felt two round cold objects, like the muzzles of revolvers pressed against the back of his neck and heard the order to keep still and hand over his change. Believing that he might be shot, Payne gave the "passengers" $7, all the money he had. The "passengers" then alighted from the machine and stood a few seconds in the street. Payne then noticed, he told the po- lice, that both men had nothing in their hands but long cigarette holders and were both fashionably dressed. However, when he at- tempted to recover his property, both men produced revolvers and succeeded in getting away.

PEDESTRIAN ROBBED

As he was walking toward his residence at 6895 Wilshire Boule- vard, M. Masuda reported two men armed with revolvers drove up in an automobile and threat- ened to kill him if he did not "divvy up." Mr. Masuda "divvied up" to the tune of $40, and the bandits fled in their car.

According to a report telephoned to Central Police Station, the crew of Pacific Electric car No. 857 of the Owensmouth line was held up and robbed near Owensmouth of $50 and their pocket knives. The bandits, according to the report, had boarded the car in the city and ridden almost to the end of the line when they staged the robbery.

DOBBS, BANKER, DEAD

Vice-President of Bank of Italy Passes Away; State Examiner Five Years Ago

Ralph E. Dobbs, vice-president of the Bank of Italy here, and a 32-second-Degree Mason, died at his home, 851 South Crenshaw Road, at 6:15 o'clock last night after an illness of two weeks. Up to the time Mr. Dobbs was in the best of health.

Mr. Dobbs was 40 years of age. He had been a resident of this city for the past eighteen years, during which time he was engaged in the banking business. He was a member of the Scottish Rite, the Los Angeles Athletic Club, Los An- geles Country Club, and a num- ber of banking associations.

Mr. Dobbs leaves his widow, Mrs. Veronica Dobbs; his mother, Mrs. Effie B. Dobbs, who has been residing at his home; and a brother, Mr. William T. Dobbs of New York, who is on his way to Los Angeles. There were no chil- dren.

Mr. Dobbs was born in Chicago, Ill., in 1882. He was graduated from the Chicago High School and the University of Michigan. After leaving college he immediately se- cured a banking position in Chi- cago.

Two years ago he came here and with Mr. Dobbs started with the Home Savings bank. Later he became assistant to John W. Wil- liams, examiner. He then be- came a member of the Equitable Sav- ings bank, going from here to San Francisco as State bank examiner. Two and a half years ago he be- came connected with the Bank of Italy and had been with them ever since.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made but will be under the auspices of Scottish Rite Ma- sons. The body is now at the Pierce Brothers and Company fu- neral parlors.

Investigation Concerns the Liquor Cache in Fire Department Building

An investigation involving a large quantity of bootleg liquor which is said to be stored in the rer of a building occupied by the Hunting- ton Park Fire Department, to be conducted by U. S. Attorney Burke and prohibition officials, will be asked for today by John Farrell, father of Arthur Farrell, the deputy city marshal of the surburban town, who shot and seriously wounded Harry Fleming, a fireman, during a quarrel September 19.

The purpose of the investigation will be to determine how the liquor came to be confiscated and placed in its present location without be- ing turned over to prohibition au- thorities.

Attorney S. S. Hahn has been engaged by the elder Farrell to as- sist in the investigation as well as to defend the marshal when he is tried the 19th inst.

The quarrel in which Fleming was wounded occured in the court- room of Justice Cassidy at Hunting- ton Park. Farrell maintains that he shot Fleming because the lat- ter attacked Mrs. Farrell when she took the fireman to a house in Bel- vedere, which Fleming was to watch for Farrell. Fleming was a chief witness against Herbert Wilson in the recent trial in which the mail bandit was convicted of slaying his pal, Herbert Cox dur- ing at attempted jail break. Flem- ing has constantly denied that he attacked Mrs. Farrell, saying that the shooting followed his refusal to loan Farrell $50.

EMPLOYEE OF CITY DROWNED

Charles Sacks Victim of Accident; Find Body in Reservoir

Either the victim of an accident or a suicide, Charles Sacks, about 45 years old, an employee of the City Light and Power Bureau, was drowned in the upper San Fernan- do Reservoir some time between September 26 and yesterday. His body, bearing signs of having been immersed in water for several days, was found in the lake yes- terday morning by Officer H. R. Haines.

Sacks was employed, according to the officer, at the aqueduct camp about one mile above the lake. He was last seen in the camp by the cook on September 26, at which time the cook told Officer Haines that Sacks appeared to be despondent because of a chronic illness. From the camp to the upper reservoir the aque- duct runs in a westerly down the slope. No one, after falling into it, could survive or make his way out of the racing current. It is the be- lief of the police that Sacks either fell into the aqueduct or deliber- ately jumped into it, knowing that it would be the end. No note in- dicating suicide was found on the body, which was fully clothed.

The body was taken from the lake by officials of the Noble un- dertaking establishment in San Fernando, and later removed to the Bresee undertaking establish- ment here.

HUNTER KILLED ON DUCK QUEST

Glendale Man is Victim of Stray Bullet

Asserted Slayer Placed in Jail by Sheriff

Five Other Nimrods Injured by Reckless Shooting

Firing at a flock of mud hens with an automatic pistol, a hunter yesterday, the opening day of the duck-hunting season, missed his quarry, but killed another man on the other side of Elizabeth Lake, a report made at the Sheriff's office stated.

As the report of the hunter's death was received, other informa- tion was received indicating that at least five other duck hunters in various places had been shot in the legs and arms.

The dead man is L. B. Randall of Glendale. John Bruno, an Ital- ian, was arrested and placed in the County Jail by Deputy Sheriff Johnson as the man who killed Randall. The deputy sheriff stated that Bruno had been in this coun- try only a short time and had no permit to carry a revolver.

Randall, it was stated, died al- most instantly from his wound. His relatives were notified and Chief Deputy Coroner MacDonald or- dered the body taken to a Glen- dale undertaking parlor.

One of the other five reported shot was brought to the city for medical aid. He was James Has- well, aged 40 years, of 3788 South Main street. He was suffering from a gunshot wound of the right eye, inflicted, according to his own statement to the police, by Walter Hoifner (address unknown.) Po- lice Surgeon Dean, who administ- ered emergency treatment, de- clared that Mr. Haswell may lose the sight of his eye as the result.

In obtaining medical aid for Mr. Haswell a record run of four hours was made between Big Bear Lake and this city. Immediately after the accident Mr. Haswell was placed in the automobile of his stepson, Elmer Fryer, also of 3759 South Main street, and driven to this city as speedily as the moun- tain roads would allow. Due to the location of the injury, Mr. Haswell suffered great pain during the journey. At the Receiving Hos- pital he reported that four other duck hunters at Big Bear Lake had been accidentaliy hit by flying bird shot. Indications were, he said, that the popular hunting grounds were overcrowded with hunters.

Mr. Haswell, after receiving emergency treatment at the Receiv- ing Hospital, was removed to the Clara Barton Hospital.

Automobile Accidents Result Fatally; Both Succumb at Hospital

The body of Mr. Simmons was removed to the L. F. Utter under- taking establishment. The body of Mr. Sprague was removed to the Los Angeles undertaking es- tablishment.

Mr. Simmons was hurt when an automobile in which he was rid- ing skidded and overturned at Pasadena avenue and Avenue 50. William McDonald, driver of the car, who was bruised badly was held by the police on a charge of reckless driving.

Mr. Sprague suffered a frac- tured skull when he jumped from a moving street car in front of an automobile driven by F. M. Redd of 613 Gladys avenue near the corner of Seventh street and Ceres avenue.

LONG BEACH, Oct. 1.—With his clothing ablaze, Frank Bruce, engineer on the passenger launch Wolfman, leaped into the water of Long Beach harbor this morn- ing and saved himself from serious burns, when the Wolfman caught fire from an overheated motor. The boat was at the Halfhill can- ning dock.

Bruce was rescued from the harbor by men on near-by boats, and although portions of his cloth- ing had been burned from his body, he escaped with only minor burns, it was said. The launch was badly damaged by the blaze, which destroyed the craft's upper structure. Total loss of the boat was prevented by the city fire de- partment, which responded to a telephone call.

"Hounded by Creditors," She Says

Miss Mildred Harris

MILDRED HARRIS BROKE

Former Wife of Charlie Chaplin Declares She Will Begin Bankruptcy Proceedings Here Soon

Despite the large sum of money which Charlie Chaplin is supposed to have bestowed on Mildred Harris at the time of their divorce set- tlement a little over a year ago, that young actress, now on the Or- pheum Circuit, is going into bankruptcy, according to her own state- ment contained in a letter received here yesterday. That Miss Harris's financial condition was brought about by two long illnesses and by be- ing out of work for many months is the reason for her action, she says.

In the letter dated from St. Paul, Miss Harris makes the astounding disclosure that after the lawyers were paid, her part in the money given by Chaplin was only about $6500.

"I believe," writes Miss Harris, "that I told you of our losing our house and furniture through my illness last year, and not working so long. We (mother and I) had put everything we had in it, you know, after the lawyers were paid, and we lived for nearly a year on the money Charlie gave me, which was about $6500 after the attor- neys were paid.

"I expected to stay with Lasky, but my operation, a year ago in July, fixed everything so that I had to come East and then had a nervous breakdown, and finally last March I started in my act after a very hard struggle in New York all winter.

"I have been hounded for months by my creditors and have been paying almost all my salary out to them weekly, but the income tax came along, taking a large amount weekly, so I cannot satisfy all my creditors, and they are suing me, and mother and I have been near- ly crazy for weeks.

"Besides this, an ex-producer of mine is suing me for a large amount that he has no right to, as he is the one who two years ago sent me East to buy clothes for three pictures, and then cancelled my contract on account of my di- vorce. Mr. Chaplin would not stand for me on the same program with him.

"So my only way out is bank- ruptcy. I have fought it for over a year, but there is nothing I can do. I shall do what is right by those who are deserving when I can. I am not trying to cheat anyone. I had fully intended to pay all.

"I have to take out my papers in Los Angeles as that was my home. I would rather do it any place but there."

Miss Harris is appearing in a playlet on the Orpheum circuit, in which she made a decided suc- cess.

Mr. Ramirez in '83 started El Clamore Publico, the first paper in Los Angeles. He also constructed the first brandy still in this vi- cinity. The family owned large acreage of vineyards in what is now the heart of Los Angeles.

Packing-house of Swift Firm Suffers Heavy Loss in Night Fire

Fire in the upper floor of the Swift's meat-packing plant at First and Santa Fe streets late last night caused damage totaling several thousands of dollars.

Three alarms were turned in, bringing most of the city's fire- fighting equipment to the scene. Damage in the large plant was not estimated at an early hour this morning, but officials of the com- pany stated that the loss from the water and fire would run into the thousands. The origin of the blaze was not determined.

MAN IN TUB KILLED BY LIVE WIRE

Electric Vibrator Short Circuits; Heroic Efforts Fail to Save

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Oct. 1.—While in the bath tub preparing to use an electric vibrator, Maurice Brown, 322 Cottage Place, was killed this afternoon as the result of an elec- tric shock received from a short circuit.

Several nurses from the Roose- velt Hospital rushed to the home and attempted to revive Mr. Brown through the use of oxygen and res- piratory methods, but to no avail. Meanwhile, the police had been no- tified. They brought a pulmotor, but this also failed to revive him.

Mr. Brown was 28 years of age and was born in South Africa. He was a British war veteran, having been gassed and wounded several times in the World War. He had been in this country for three years, the last two of which he had spent in Los Angeles and Pasadena. Lately he had been working on the Anita Baldwin ranch.

He leaves his widow, formerly Gladys Wyckoss, a Pasadena girl whom he married seven months ago; and a mother and sister in England.

WARSHIPS TO GREET VOYAGERS

Submarine Chaser Will Escort Excursionists on Return from Hawaii

Ten miles out at sea shortly aft- er noon today a submarine chaser from the Pacific Fleet, with Cham- ber of Commerce officials, city off- cials and newspaper men aboard, will welcome home 250 Los Ange- les business men who went to Ha- wail three weeks ago on a Cham- ber of Commerce business excur- sion.

The steamship City of Los An- geles, on which the Chamber of Commerce party made the trip to and from the Islands, is scheduled to tie up at the dock in Los An- geles Harbor shortly before 2 p.m.

Admiral Eberle, in charge of the Pacific Fleet, has arranged to have a squadron of warships riding at anchor in the outer harbor. They will be so arranged as to form a double line.

Arrangements were made yes- terday by radio to have the City of Los Angeles pass between the two lines of warships while en- tering the harbor, and as she drifts into the home port the whistles of the boats in the Pacific Fleet will blow a rousing salute, wel- coming the happy travelers home.

The delegation which visited the Islands was headed by President John D. Fredericks of the Cham- ber of Commerce and Mayor Cryer. The Mayor will head the party when it arrives, since Capt. Fred- ericks decided at the last minute to extend his journey to points in the Orient. Frank Wiggins, secre- tary of the Chamber, is with the party.

The City of Los Angeles was reported in a radio message to The Times so I ought to be near- ing her home port in a pond-like sea. A seven-bout boxing contest, arranged by Benny Fidler, athletic director, was held Saturday night on the afterdeck and yesterday re- ligious services were conducted aboard, the message stated. The Times' radio program was received on the ship and by means of the vessel's telephone system was heard in all staterooms.

MONSTER STILL IN ATTIC

Asserted Bootleggers Find New Use for Place Where Grandmother Kept Cedar Chests

In the place where grandmother used to keep the cedar chests that came over in the Mayflower, her mother's wedding dress and other family heirlooms, Boyle Heights police officers early yesterday found a distilling plant which they say would make a poor man a plutocrat in one week.

This place was the attic of a two-story house at 710 South St. Louis street, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lavitoff. The plant consisted, the officers say, of one fifty-gallon still, twenty-one barrels of mash and 100 gallons of intoxicating liquor. Officers Baker, McHale and Garard, who made the raid, declared they were not sure whether it was supposed to be whis- ky or brandy, but that at all events it was intoxicating.

STILL WELL HIDDEN

The discovery of the plant dis- closed to the police, the officers said, a new method adopted by as- serted bootleggers to conceal their source of revenue. The still, mash barrels and other equipment of the plant were installed in the attic, according to the officers, and after- ward the stairway was removed, leaving the only entrance and exit in a small hole about eighteen inches square and large enough to allow the passage of a man's body.

It was through this hole that the raiders made their way into the attic, after they had searched cellar, bedroom and outhouses without result. In order to convey the plant to the Boyle Heights Po- lice Station the officers were com- pelled to tear out the ceiling of the hall bedroom. Mr. and Mrs. Lav- itoff were arrested on a charge of violating the Volstead Act.

FUMES ATTRACT

Having met with such success in this raid the officers, equipped with a search warrant, rubber heels and flashlights, flivvered their way to a house at 1201 Brooklyn avenue, where, it had been reported, fumes of home brew could be scented is- suing on the night air. Sure enough, they say, after awaking Joe Covello, asserted proprietor, and informing him that he was ar- rested on a charge of violating the Volstead Act, the officers descended to the cellar and there found an other fifty-gallon still, twelve bar- rels of corn mash and about ten gallons of some kind of whisky. Covello was taken to the Boyle Heights jail and the officers quit work for the night.

LONG BEACH, Oct. 1.—Rear- Admiral Charles E. Clark, aged 79 years, famous Spanish-American War captain, died here suddenly at 5 p.m. today at 3335 East Ocean Boulevard, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles F. Hughes, wife of the present commander of the Seventh Division of the Pacific Fleet.

Funeral services for the world- renowned naval officer will be ex- tremely simple and attended only by intimate friends of the family. They will be conducte d at the Hughes residence at 2 p.m. Tues- day. Among those who will attend the ceremonies will be Admiral E. W. Eberle, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet and other high ranking officials of the fleet.

Admiral Clark, who retired from active service in 1905, coming from Washington, D. C., to live with his son-in-law and daughter at Long Beach, had been in ex- cellent health until Sept. 22, last, when he took to his bed suffering from an attack of heart disease. Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Hughes were present yesterday when death came to the old hero.

Born Aug. 10, 1843, in Bradford, Vt., the home town of Admiral Dewey, Rear-Admiral Clark was a schoolmate of Dewey, and at va- rious times was a shipmate of Dewey in the Navy. He became fa- mous in 1898 when, under forced draft, he made the run from San Francisco to Santiago, Cuba, to join Sampson's fleet. At that time the voyage had to be made around the Horn. Admiral Clark left San Francisco March 19 and reported to Sampson for duty June 3, his ship in perfect fighting trim after the long and trying journey. Admiral Eberle, now in command of the Pacific Fleet, was at that time a lieutenant on the Oregon.

Soon after the war, Capt. Clark, together with several other cap- tains, was promoted six numbers in grade, and in 1904 President Roosevelt again advanced him six numbers in grade, tendering him the rank of Rear Admiral. A year later Admiral Clark retired and came to Long Beach to live.

Besides his widow and daughter, Mrs. Hughes, Rear-Admiral Clark leaves another daughter, Mrs. S. S. Robison, wife of Rear-Admiral Robison, Military Governor of the Republic of Santo Domingo. He also leaves one grand-daughter, the daughter of Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Mary Louise Nimitz, wife of Lieut. Otto Nimitz, who is now serving aboard the Wyoming, with the Atlantic Fleet.

The admiral's remarkable race in Oregon occurred during the opening days of the Spanish- American war in 1898. Clark, then a captain, was 54 years old. He sailed from San Francisco on March 19. Between him and his destination was the contingent of South America, the gales and turbulent waters of the Straits of Magellan where a Spanish torpedo boat lurked also, and a fleet of formidable Spanish warships cruising the Caribbean Sea. On the afternoon of the sixty-seventh day of sailing the Oregon steamed into Jupiter Inlet on the coast of Florida unharmed and ready for battle.

It is the world's record which probably will never be equaled— it probably will never again be at- tempted. The Panama Canal re- moves the necessity. A modern battleship could be transferred from San Francisco to the Florida

"CHAOTIC" MUSIC IS LATEST

Conductor Rothwell, on Return Home, Pictures Tragic Struggle in Europe for New Expression

Inspired by the heroic efforts being made by European composers to find a new medium of expression, but unimpressed by the ultimate significance of their actual accomplishments, Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra, yesterday returned from a four months' tour abroad.

He was accompanied by his wife, Elizabeth Rothwell, prominent operatic and recital singer, and their daughter, Claire-Liesel. They were greeted on their return by L. E. Behymer, manager of the Phi- harmonic Orchestra, and a party of friends.

"Glad to be back? I should say so."

These were the first words spo- ken by Mr. and Mrs. Rothwell in unison. And they were echoed by the smile which beamed on the face of their little daughter.

"It was very inspiring, but it was very sad—all of it," said Mr. Rothwell.

SOCIAL STATUS SAD

The Rothwells left here June 1, traveling with few stops to their destination in Germany—the cens of their first successes in music. They spent nearly all of their time in the leading art centers, and the popular resorts of Germany, Aus- tria and Switzerland. They had an opportunity while there to hear and to study much of the newest music that is being written abroad.

"What was particularly depress- ing was the social conditions abroad," said Mr. Rothwell. "The artists of Europe are many of them in the direst need.

"Superficially everything seems much the same as it was before the war, but a closer survey of condi- tions reveals on every hand little but tragedy.

"The music that is being com- posed abroad reflects more closely than it ever has the unsettlement

NURSE ALL TANGLED IN LAW'S NET

Girl Facing Five Charges Now Involved as "Poser" in War Over Estate

With five criminal charges already on file against her, Lucille Stanage, a nurse, was served with a copy of a restraining order issued by Superior Judge Charles O. Bustek of Sacramento, to prevent her or Alfred Stevenson from disposing of any of the $15,000 estate of the latter.

The papers, which were served on the young woman yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Pfaffle, stated that Alfred Stevenson is an incompetent and that his sister, Josephine Stevenson, is seeking to be appointed guardian of his person and estate. The sister and her attorney were in this city yesterday to have the papers served.

It was asserted in the document that Alfred Stevenson's estate before he became ill, amounted to $10,000 and now is in excess of $15,000. He is 55 years old, according to the papers. It was stated that Lucile Stanage was posing as nurse for Mr. Stevenson and was caring for him at the Casa Del Mar Hospital, Culver City. It was also asserted that she was not a fit person to care for him.

The young woman recently was arraigned before Justice Hinshaw on a charge of forgery of the name of Jennie Lamberton to a check for $50 and before Justice Baird on an accusation of grand larceny of $300 from Doris G. Hopper. The same day she was arraigned before Judge Houser on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses, grand larceny and larceny by trick and device. She was released on bail on Friday.

LATEST MUSIC HELD "CHATIC"

and sorrow which prevails. There is a vast struggle going on for a new expression. The composers have thrown over all the old traditions. Music is seemingly written from measure to measure; there is no continuity, no development.

CHAOS IN COMPOSITIONS

"I believe that the composers are capable of it, but they simply do not want to do anything that may link their present achievements with those that have gone before. They prefer to write rhapsodic works, short and in many instances dynamic, but depending altogether on the inspiration of the moment and giving not the slightest indication of any brain work such as went to make the works of the older masters.

"Most of this music is extremely difficult to play, and still more of it would in this country be considered exceedingly difficult to listen to. In the instance of one young composer, a Hollander, the base on his composition looked and sounded just like a mistake. It seemed to have no relation to the rest of the composition.

"Everything is futurism, impressionism and post-impressionism. It looks more like the end of a period than the beginning, and personally I believe that after it is all over there will be a moribund period, and then the new musician will take from this strange chaotic heritage what is best and build from that the new impression."

REHEARSALS TO START

While in Europe Mrs. Rothwell gave a charity recital with her husband accompanying, at which she sang a number of Schoenberg's songs. Schoenberg is regarded as ultra-modernist, although hardly as extreme as some of the younger men to whom Mr. Rothwell has made reference.

Mr. Rothwell brought with him many compositions for piano and voice, as well as orchestra, some of which he may play during the present season.

"Most of them, I believe, are too displeasing for our ears," he continued. "Besides, there is very little orchestral music being written. The orchestras abroad avoid this new school. They are becoming very conservative—in fact, more conservative even than our orchestras in America."

Rehearsals for the Philharmonic Orchestra concerts will begin next Monday, according to Mr. Rothwell, and the first concert will be played toward the end of this month.

CHURCH BATHES IN PROSPERITY

Same Simplicity as Found in Poorest Sanctuaries

Sincerity and Reverence Alike Everywhere

Old-Time Sermon and Modern Are Compared

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Yesterday I went to a large successful church, a thoroughly modern church with a thoroughly modern and much beloved pastor—the First Congregational Church, Rev. C. S. Patton D. D.

The only other Congregational Church I ever went to was a little corrugated iron church in a little corrugated iron town in the desert in South Africa, whose congregation consisted of about ten white families and perhaps forty kaffirs.

MANAGEMENT, FRIENDLINESS

It was difficult to believe in the "empty church" cry, and all those other indictments against modern protestants. The streets were lined with automobiles for two blocks. Every seat, including the balcony was occupied. And these people did not go to church as a solemn and rather exacting duty—they went keen with enthusiasm, alert, interested. They were received at the door by a kindly gentleman with white hair who gave each and every one a welcome. And he knew them nearly all. There were businesslike ushers in every aisle to direct worshipers to vacant seats. There was an air of general efficiency, organization, implying that the same devotion which men give to their businesses was being given to their church, to their God.

The service was preceded by the voices of the choir assembled in the vestry, singing with peculiar sweetness, trained harmony, joyous reverence. And they came in thus singing, garbed in black surplices with white stoles, about fifty men and women—and the women hatless, which neither the Roman Catholics nor the Episcopalians will permit. They took their places beneath a great organ. The music, directed by a capable expert, John Smallman, the organ played by Walter F. Steele, was the best of its kind, conducted with the same expert efficiency required in good houses of entertainment—thus implying that the best in modern entertainment is as important as worship, to God, as it is to theaters.

Little children were marched in from Sunday School, carrying sunflowers—religion, you see, made charming for them.

Then, the congregation standing, sang "Praise God from whom all blessings flow"—the old familiar childhood hymn sung by packed church full of wage-earners and prosperous people, in the shadow of a great stained-glass window depicting Christ as the Shepherd, guarded by winged angels.

After that the Lord's Prayer, spoken standing, led by the pastor.

In the visits to the various churches, the different denominations, all worshiping the same God, differing only in trifling technicalities of form and procedure, I have observed that in a great many of them the worshipers no longer kneel for prayer. I myself was taught to kneel right down on my knees, that only the lame and the halt might omit this obeisance. But kneeling would be ostentatiously conspicuous in most of our churches today. This is not a criticism; doubtless God thinks more of the prayer than the physical pose. But the change had a curious effect upon me at first, I felt irreverent, a bit of a slacker. Yet perhaps the new method brings God more into the relation of a Divine Friend, a Father, than a remote Royal Being.

SERMON OF SINCERITY

So that, while the pastor prayed for the righteous development of all those young people in our schools and colleges, for the curtailment of human prejudices and the enlargement of human sympathies, we sat silent, until the choir jehanted the musical Amen.

Another change that has impressed me in modern churches, is that the offertory is taken prior to the sermon. This, we may venture to remember, was occasioned by the fact that a good many people used to leave before the sermon. But they don't now. The sermon is what they specially go for. But I observed when the offertory basket reached me yesterday, it was heavy, well filled—the outward and visible sign of inward faith, that touched the pocket. There was modernity, yes, but no evidence of modern religious backsliding at the First Congregational Church yesterday.

The pastor's sermon was rather a brilliant modern lecture—on evolution—with a slightly religious application—nothing like the old-fashioned sermons with their firstly, secondly and thirdly. While explaining the science of evolution in simple terms, the pastor permitted himself some humorous little touches, whereat the audience laughed appreciately — aloud. This, too, was against all my own traditions—yet one cannot conscientiously argue that humor has no place in God's house. So that when, as an illustration, Dr. Patton said that the tomato worm had become green for good and sufficient reasons—those that were not green having been caught in their nefarious industry — the laughter was unrestrained. Another simile of the boy who could wiggle his ears in school, and the final argument "Why not presume that God made man in the way that it looks as if He made him rather than in the way that it looks as if He hadn't" were received with equally appreciative laughter.

Will Teach Alcohol's Effect

GIVES UP TRIP TO JAPAN

New Executive of Alcohol Education Association Will Stir Up Women's Organizations

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Oct. 1.—Another addition to the staff of the Alcohol Education Association came to the Maryland last week. She is Miss Helen Forbes, who gave up a trip to Japan with Dr. David Starr Jordan to come to Southern California and stimulate women's organizations to activity along antialcohol lines.

Miss Forbes, a niece of the late Henry Watterson, will make her headquarters at the Maryland. Her principal work will be the organization of institutes of women for the dissemination of the literature the association will produce, and to give lectures and informal talks on the effects of alcohol on the human system.

HOBSON PRESIDENT

Richmond P. Hobson is president of the association, Montaville Flowers of Pasadena, its general secretary, and Dr. David Starr Jordan its director of research. Dr. Jordan will endeavor to form a Japanese branch on his eastern trip, with headquarters in Tokio. Miss Forbes, who hails originally from Atlanta, became interested in the movement some time ago and has been assisting Dr. Jordan and Mr. Flowers in the organization of the society. She already has done some work among women's clubs in San Francisco and Oakland.

"I planned to sail with Dr. Jordan and his wife when they left on the 21st inst.," said Miss Forbes, "but at the last minute decided to continue my work here instead.

"The work of the association is making prohibition effective by spreading, as it has never been spread before, the truth about what alcohol does to humanity. Education must supplant the law.

"By getting women interested in the publications of the association we will get them to pass on this vital information to the growing generation, and finally accomplish what was meant to be accomplished by the Eighteenth Amendment.

"I find, to my surprise, that some of the women of California are pretty "wet" in sentiment, but even these agree that spreading information is an excellent thing to do. We are winning them over to the purpose of the association."

Miss Forbes spent a year or so on the stage, and once played with Douglas Fairbanks. She has never been in pictures, but admits they interest her.

"I was brought up in a family with ten brothers," she said, "and know something first hand about what alcohol education can accomplish. My father was an inventor, a scientist. At mother's suggestion, and for our benefit, he studied up on alcohol and told us what it does to the brain and the other organs, with the result that none of us ever drank. We weren't forced or forbidden—simply informed."

Miss Forbes doesn't smoke, either, and doesn't believe in women smoking. But antismoking propaganda is no part of the Association's activity.

"We have enough to do with the alcohol end," said Miss Forbes.

SPOUSE AFTER MEDIUM NOW

argumentative expressions in proof of the spiritualistic system. The following is a quotation from the instructions:

"Telepathy is communication between subjective minds. A message requires the concentration of the objective (your mind) on the message to be communicated. This message can be received asleep or awake. There are, of course, skeptics who look with pity on people that believe in telepathy, yet the world's greatest scientists have admitted the truth and proven the facts of this science and it is a fact that it cannot be disproven."

Confidence, passive thought, positive thought and concentration are described as the keys to telepathic communication in the paper which the mediums receive. The instructions declare that the teachings or practices of spiritualism do not conflict with Christianity.

METHODS SHOWN

In another place in the paper the method for receiving and sending spiritual messages is described. After reading and thinking over a sentence until it is visualized and then waiting a week, the medium is said to be "ready for your first thought wave." All thinking must be done with the eyes closed, the instructions set forth.

The investigation which is to be conducted this morning will not be confined alone to the activities of the spiritualist association. Mr. Joos said yesterday that he expected to interview, during the entire day, persons who have had some dealing with "Rev." Newman. He added that as the investigation of Newman's activities progresses many additional victims are being located. All of the persons who have been found declare that they have given the medium money for some type of service. In no additional cases, however, has it been found that the amount accepted has been over $50. All of these cases merit instituting misdemeanor charges against Newman.

HERE IS MEANEST THIEF

An electric bread mixer, a saxophone, a Hudson seal fur coat, a string of pearl beads, an automatic pistol, $170 worth of carpenters' tools, $2000 worth of jewelry, a bottle of Benedictine and a baby's rattle were some of the things stolen in fifteen burglaries reported to the police late Saturday night and yesterday morning.

In this case, Mr. Worden, according to the police report, returned to his residence from the theater and found the thieves at work. As he entered the thieves jumped up from their rifling of the house, and brushing by Mr. Worden fled to the street.

Residence of Jesse Tester at 3317 Granda street entered by thieves who tore off screen on a rear door and $300 worth of silverware stolen.

New Ruling on Tax Payments Received Here

An important ruling received yesterday by Collector Goodcell has to do with claims for credit of taxes erroneously collected under the revenue acts of 1918 and 1921.

Under the decision, the amount of any ad valorem penalty and interest which has been collected without authority, may be made the subject of a claim for credit against income, excess profits, or war profits taxes due from the taxpayer under any other return, if such claim is filed within five years.

CHAMBER URGES PAY INCREASES

Higher Salaries for Heads of City Boosted

Attorney Declares Present Stipend Too Low

Will Necessitate but Small Tax Rise

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce have indorsed the city charter amendments which will appear on the November ballot under which the Mayor's salary would be increased to $10,000 a year, that of the City Attorney to $7000 a year, the City Auditor's salary to $6000 a year, and City Councilmen's salaries to $4200 a year.

In support of the proposed increase of the City Attorney's salary, City Attorney Stephens in a letter to the Chamber of Commerce said:

"I feel free to urge the adoption of this amendment, inasmuch as the proposed increase will not affect me personally—unless the people of the city see fit to return me to this office at the election next spring.

"The present salary of the City Attorney is $4000 per annum, and this amount is so inadequate and so disproportionate to the responsibilities and exacting duties of this office that I feel sure that your organization will be glad to help in correcting such an unfair situation.

The total turnover in cash of the city in the fiscal year, 1921-22, not including money received for the sale of bonds, was in excess of $35,000,000, and I believe that I am conservative in saying that no private corporation whose business compares even in a small way with this great volume of business of the city of Los Angeles would think of paying its general counsel less than $10,000 per year.

It is safe to say that there is no legal department, either public or private, west of Chicago which has such a volume of business or so many varied and important questions as this office. The amount asked for in the proposed amendment is $7000 and this was fixed not because it is adequate, but because it is the same as the amount paid to the county counsel and the district attorney, as well as the judges of the Superior Court."

The additional tax necessary to pay the increased salary of the City Attorney, Mr. Stephens said, would amount, for example, upon a house valued at $5000 and assessed for $2500, to ninety-five-one hundredths of 1 cent.

Bids Received for Lift-Bridge at Local Port

Bids were opened Saturday by the Board of Harbor Commissioners for the new steel bascule or lift-bridge to be built over Cerritos Channel at Badger avenue, connecting Terminal Island and the mainland, five offers being received. The bids were:

The piers for the bridge are now being built

MAKES CITIZENS OF FOREIGNERS

Miss Olive Pixley

TRANSFORMATION of for... eigners into 100 per cent Americans is the important duty that has been assigned to Miss Olive A. Pixley of Glendale. Miss Pixley, who is a native of Colorado Springs, Colo., has been an at... tache in the office of Frederick Jones, local naturalization exam... iner, for five years.

Recently she conducted an ex... amination in the court of U. S. Dist. Judge Bledsoe in which more than fifty foreigners were con... verted into American citizens. In recent months she has made sev... eral trips to other cities in this district to conduct similar examin... ations.

The States embraced in this dis... trict are California, Arizona and Nevada. While Mr. Jones attends to the heaviest part of the work in the local office, Miss Pixley is said to give him splendid assist... ance. She is credited with being thoroughly posted in regard to naturalization law.

The last three naturalization ex... aminations held in the Federal courts here were conducted by her. She is one of three women in the United States to whom this important work is entrusted. The other two are located at Austin, Tex., and St. Louis, Mo.

LONG BEACH MARDI GRAS OPEN TODAY

Festival Will Continue During Week; Features on Program

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 1.—This city's first Mardi Gras carnival, which local promoters hope to make an annual feature hereafter, will open today with scores of fun features scheduled throughout the week. The carnival's birth will be formally marked at Silver Spray Pier tomorrow evening at 7 p.m. A dinner in honor of the Queen of the carnival, Miss Billie Smith, and her court of beautiful young wom... en, selected by means of a voting contest, will be given at the Hotel Virginia at 6 p.m.

The coronation ceremony will be held in Lincoln Park at 8:45 p.m., at the close of the big downtown parade. Soon after the coronation ceremonies the Mardi Gras Queen's ball will be opened in the Majes... tic Pavilion on the Pike. At 9 p.m. a grand carnival of masques will be opened in the amusement zone on the Pike.

Scores of traveling shows have come to Long Beach for the carni... val week and every hour of the week up to Saturday night will be crammed full with thrilling and entertaining features, according to the program officially published today.

Aquaplaning and surf-boat con... tests and other marine sports will be featured Tuesday in front of the Hotel Virginia. Each day's fun will be wound up by a grand Mardi Gras carnival of folly on the Pike. Thousands of visitors from every section of the Southland are ex... pected here during the week-end and provisions have been made by the Pacific Electric and other transportation companies to handle capacity crowds.

Saturday, the final day of the carnival, will be home day for the sailors and officers of the Pa... cific Fleet, now at anchor in Los Angeles Harbor. Many entertain... ment features are to be provided for the thousands of blue-clad men-o'-warsmen, who are to be the special guests of the city.

GASOLINE HIGH IN PALESTINE

Bishop of Jerusalem Visits in Los Angeles

Churchman Depicts Life of Historic Land

Cites Obstacles in Way of Zionist Drive

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Los Angeles has a distinguished visitor this week in the Right Rev. Bishop Rennie MacInness, D.D., bishop of Jerusalem, whose dio... cese includes Palestine, Trans-Jordania, Syria, Cilicia and the is... land of Cyrus, and until a year ago included Egypt and the Su... dan, as well on the other side of the Red Sea. He is accompanied by Mrs. MacInness, a distinguished M.D., of the London University, who took up this profession that she might be more competent in the missionary side of the work.

Bishop MacInness came to the United States to represent Britain at the Episcopalian conference at Portland, Or., bearing direct cre... dentials from the Archbishop of Canterbury. And whilst here he will also visit all those centers who contributed so generously to the relief work in his far-off biblical diocese in the dread days of 1918-19 and tell them exactly what their money achieved. He leaves for Salt Lake City next week.

NEWS FASCINATES

Nothing is more fascinating than this direct intimate news from those famous and sacred historic places of which our Bible tells, the original birthplace of the Christian religion.

For instance, Bishop MacInness possesses a classic five-year-old Ford, the very first automobile ever seen in Jerusalem and origi... nally costing him almost as much as a Rolls-Royce. He says it runs better now than it ever did, possibly because gasoline has come down from $1 to 30 cents a gallon, and he expects it to run better than ever when gas gets down to 20 cents. But, oh, there are lots of automobiles in Palestine today, he says—at least 100 if you count all Palestine.

And the roads are pretty good—since 1918. Although the British mandate was not officially signed until a month ago, the British be... gan their good work right away, so that now the roads are excel... lent and there is excited talk of electric lights and electric street cars. In the meantime the bishop, in his Ford, can get to Nazareth, the Sea of Galilee and back to Jerusalem in five hours, and one will soon be able to go to Bethle... hem on a street car for a nickle.

And the cost of living is coming down, too. One used to pay $1.00 a dozen for the tiniest eggs—feed being so precious and nourishment nil, but now the eggs are not only a bit larger, but can be had for 50 cents. Bread is still 11 cents a loaf and butter an incredible lux... ury. Such little butter as there is is imported from Egypt, "heavy with cow's hairs," as Mrs. MacIn... ness explained, so the bishop's household is supplied direct from England. And although the dis... ciples were fishermen, fish is al... most an unknown luxury there now. Vegetables are rare and of limited variety. Meat is dear and tough.

ZIONIST MOVE

All of which, says the bishop, will explain a little the complica... tions of the Zionist movement. This, he says, is not a religious movement, but a political, a na... tional movement by which the Jews are again to become a na... tion. But so far most of the im... migrants have been Russian and Polish, 70,000 of them—not enough to form a nation, but just enough to greatly disturb the old residents and incumbents, who show no en... thusiasm whatever for having these newcomers thrust upon them and given all sorts of privileges to the detriment of the natives. Thus, for instance, the scheme to give the Zionist immigrants all unoccupied lands, all Turkish government lands and all the German colonies. "Why the Zionists? Why not us?" say the natives, with rather natural inter... est in the matter.

However, for the moment the Zionists are buying land just like other people. But even this annoys the natives—because the Zionists have more money to buy with, and land ownership is going to mean political power in this new Legis... lative Council which the British are setting up. This, with a High Commissioner and elected repre... sentatives, is the form of govern... ment chosen for Palestine, with a Ladies' Council, of which the wife of the High Commissioner, Lady Herbert Samuel, is the head, and of which Mrs. MacInness is an ex... ecutive member.

One reason for the dire poverty Palestine has experienced is that there are no more pilgrims, few tourists, and the influx of the Zion... ists has naturally occasioned a house shortage, besides eating a great deal more than they can produce at present. And no one would loan money for any purpose until America permitted the Brit... ish mandate to be signed.

CHURCH IN DEBT

In the meantime, the Greek Or... thodox Church, which is the most nearly akin to the Episcopalians, has a debt of 70,000 English pounds, and tried to sell its land to recuperate. But the Greek Church was not very efficiently businesslike, so the British held up the sale to the Zionists until it had been advertised in Egypt and the Sudan and elsewhere. However, there were no bidders, so the Zionists will probably get it at their own price, after all—and the natives don't like that idea a little bit.

During the war the Turkish Gov... ernor lived in the bishop's house in Jerusalem, and the surrender to Gen. Allenby was signed on his desk.

Bishop MacInness will make several public talks while here, and it will be seen that he has much of intimate interest to tell. He and Mrs. MacInness ex... pect to return to England via Canada in time for Christmas, which they will enjoy in that coun... try for the first time in twenty-five years. They have four children at school in England, where the bish... op also owns a delightful country home. They expect to be back in Palestine in January.

WILL OFFER TRAFFIC PLAN

Suggestions of Commission for Downtown Relief to Be Presented to Safety Committee

The five specific, definite recommendations made to the City Coun... cil by the Los Angeles Traffic Commission for the relief of downtown street congestion will be considered at a hearing to be given at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon at the City Hall by the Public Safety Commit... tee of the Council. It is expected that, in addition to members of the commission who will be present to urge that the recommendations of that body be given at least a ninety days' trial, a number of busi... ness men will appear.

hTe latter are particularly inter... ested in Article I of the commis... sion's recommendations which provides for the marking off of thirty-foot spaces at the curbs on the downtown streets to be desig... nated as loading spaces, and at these a passenger vehicle may stand one minute to receive or dis... charge passengers and a commer... cial vehicle may stand not ex... ceeding fifteen minutes in order to load or unload.

This recommendation was made by the commission following a number of hearings at which wholesalers and retailers as well as a number of other business men and merchants appeared and asked that present conditions in regard to deliveries be improved.

DELIVERIES HAMPERED

As it is now, these business men said, a delivery truck arrives in front of a store, restaurant or other place of business where no alleys exist to deliver goods. There is no space at the curb for the delivery wagon to park, and so the driver is forced to stop his machine in the second line of traffic in order to carry his deliv... eries into the place of business to which they are consigned. This stopping in the second line of traffic is prohibited by city ordi... nance, so drivers are frequently arrested. This situation, the busi... ness men say, is unfair, and it also adds to traffic congestion.

Under the commission's plan there would be sufficient loading places in each block so that all delivery wagons could be accom... modated near the stores to which deliveries must be made, and the existence of the loading stations would make unnecessary the standing of any cars, passenger or commercial, in the second line of traffic.

The parking spaces, which would be marked off on the curbs, would be twenty feet each, and in these forty-five-minute parking would be permitted all day, the present no-parking hours from 4 p.m. until 6:15 p.m. being repealed, under the commission's plan.

The lifting of the no-parking-hours ban, the commission be... lieves, would be made possible by the marking off of the parking and loading spaces as well as the ex... istence now of the no-parking spaces at downtown corners, as these measures would relieve con... gestion. They would also have the effect of slightly reducing the amount of parking space on the downtown streets, so to counteract this loss of space the commission took the position that as a matter of justice to automobile owners and the business men of the city the no-parking-hours ban should be lifted, as such a change would, with the existence of the loading stations and safety zones, not tend to congest traffic or prevent street-car movements.

Other recommendations of the commission included a rule that would keep downtown street traffic moving at all times, and would prohibit drivers waiting on the streets for parking space at curbs. Another changed asked for was the amending of the city laws so that unnecessary driving of automobiles on street-car tracks would be pro... hibited. This provision was aimed at the "automobile hog," as the commission termed him, who re... fuses to wait in the traffic line, but who dashes out of the line onto the car tracks, and down the street and then forces his way back into the line, meanwhile holding up street cars, pedestrians, and the movement of the traffic line.

Zipping Bullet Gives Emphasis to War Reports

Tom Carr of 1947 Second street, Santa Monica, went hunting last Saturday. Yesterday morning he stood at his window, cleaning out his trusty thirty-thirty rifle. His hands were perspiring and while "monkeying" with the trigger his finger slipped, the hammer fell, and—

On the other side of the street, by an open window, sat J. H. Wat... son, reading the Sunday Times. The following headline caught his eye: "British General Dispatches final ultimatum to Kemalists. Note Orders Moslem Troops to Get Out or Suffer Consequences."

Just as his eye took in the word "consequences" a bullet whizzed by Watson's ear, struck the wall board and smashed the family macaroni dish. Watson jumped to his feet and started to dodge the next bullet of a murderous Mos... lem.

"'Bout me!" shouted neighbor Tom. "That was entirely unintention... al!"

"Bullets and intentions don't al... ways travel together," smiled Wat... son, "If that bullet had gone an inch farther to the left I wouldn't have heard your apology."

FIUS AND HIS TRIP ARRIVE

Europe Encompassed in Two Box Cars by Spanish Inventor and Impresario

Valentine Fius and his trip through Europe, which he carried around the world in two box cars, have arrived in Los Angeles. Mr. Fius is one of those curious geniuses that often come out of Latin America, but in his case he comes all the way from Spain with his "Viaje Europeo en Veste Minutos."

Patrons of El Teatro La Prin... cess, the little Spanish-language playhouse on East First street, find the doors closed, for the whole place has been torn up to get Senor Fius's European trip into the place. The little Spaniard, who is the inventor, operator and im... presario of the thing, is superin... tending the work, but paused long enough yesterday to explain what it is all about.

When one enters the little the... ter he is confronted with the en... trance gates of a European sta... tion, with doors for the first and second-class passengers. Going farther in, one finds a replica of a European railway car, such as is used on the Paris-Mediterranean route; side doors, curious cross-seats, tiny windows and signs in Spanish of the usual railway warnings.

SEE EUROPE HERE

One end of the car is open, and here has been inserted a transpar... ent screen. When the passengers are all seated the whistle blows, the engine chugs, the car rocks, the wheels grind, the girls giggle and on the screen, from behind, are thrown scenes of travel in Europe such as one might see from a railway coach.

Senor Fius invented the con... trivance, built it himself, arranged the screen and took all the pic... tures, which he obtained by cling... ing to the front of railway en... gines—in the Alps, in the Pyrenees, through Spanish desert, French farmland, and German forests. He also runs the show, with the aid of his little wife.

With his European tour packed in two box cars, Fius has traveled all over Spain, Cuba, Mexico, and now for the first time comes to the United States. He expects to leave directly for the Philippines and Japan.

"I first got the idea when, as a young man, I visited the world's fair, at Paris," he explains. "When I got back to my home in Bar... celona, I worked on it many years. The first one was a car like this, only I had the scenery pass the open windows, by means of scenery rolls. Then, when motion pictures came in, I studied them, and worked out the transparent screen idea."

The European trip car usually is erected in the open, any vacant lot will do. But here Senor Fius found all sorts of complications. There had to be permits for this and for that and while it wasn't a motion-picture theater, in the usual sense it had to be classed as such. So he persuaded the man... ager of El Teatro La Princesa to take him in out of the cold world.

They have been pulling down and putting up for two or three days, and will be two or three days more before the show will be ready. In the meantime, the actors and actresses that have been put... ting on variety and grand opera in the playhouse are out of work.

"It is a very nice thing for lit... tle children," one of them said yesterday. "Very amusing for chil... dren. But unbecoming the dig... nity of a real theater like El Te... atro La Princesa."

THE NIGHT RIDERS

The Texas Democrats declined to pass a resolution denouncing the Ku Klux Klan. Down in that State the politicians all seem to be a bit dubious about stepping on the tail of the Klan. The Invisible Empire sticks its head so far out of the ground that it is visible for miles. But if Tom Woolwine has aught to do with the shaping of the platform the California Democrats will not pass over the Klan in silence.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS

They are always digging up something. If it isn't Pola Negri's past it is the bones of some mylodon or a saber-toothed tiger. Now somebody boring a hole on the edge of the Gobi Desert has unearthed the skeleton of a baluchitherium with a skull more than five feet long. An animal with a five-foot skull should know better than to go by the Gobi Desert to do its dying. It is shown that this creature was in life more than thirty feet in length and would bring terror to the breast of even a big-league umpire. It is over 1,000,000 years since the animal walked the earth, but the skeleton can still throw a scare.

PAYING THE FIDDLER

People are not neglecting their amusements, although it has been intimated that the theaters are not doing as much business just now as they might be. According to the amiable gentleman who garners our income tax the government revenue from the theaters of Los Angeles was $582,000 in 1918. For the fiscal year recently ended the tax from the same source reached $2,600,000. This is merely the amount which theater patrons chip in on the side. This sum alone exceeds the entire revenues of the district in 1915. This year the collector is rounding up more than $50,000,000 in the Los Angeles district. That is a big business for anybody. People fret at the tax on their pleasures, but it amounts to too big a thing for Uncle Sam to let go.

THE WASTERS

Red tape and administrative extravagance cost the taxpayer a lot. At the McKinley Home in this city there are eight boys entitled to support as full wards of the State. Accordingly the administration is paying the per capita allowance, which amounts to about $515 for the eight lads. But the State has to send a nurse and an inspector to see that the money is spent and eighteen different commissions have something to say about the matter. It costs several times the $500 to see that the allowance is properly expended. Now the McKinley Home is going to make different arrangements. It will either care for the boys without expense to the State or provide for them outside. This is simpler than fussing with the commissions and inspectors that form the cumbersome part of the State machinery. It requires a $2 inspector to watch the expenditure of $1. It seems that nobody can be trusted.

EXCHANGE IS NO ROBBERY

Housing problems in Vienna are said to be interfering with domestic problems. There are not enough homes to go 'round and no money for new ones. There are a fair number of marriages, but not enough. The sad fact is that they are childless. There is no room for children. It is said that there would be more marriages and more room, but for the mother-in-law problem. Lots of matrimonial journeys are wrecked because mother is on board. Now there is a serious campaign under way which has for its purpose an exchange of mothers-in-law. The woman who might be a disturbing factor in the intimacies of one home could be a valued boarder in another. So they are trading mothers-in-law in Vienna. The husband who is scared to death in the presence of his wife's mother is complacent and friendly in the company of the mother of an acquaintance. There are possibly a few families in this country in which the idea of trading mothers-in-law would not be repugnant.

THE CRUSADERS

The Manchester Guardian bewails the Women's Christian Temperance Union at one of the beach cities are demanding from the local Board of Education the abolishment of all forms of dancing in the public schools. They say that the board is paying some $18,000 a year for "physical culture" and that the bulk of it is danced away. They say there is no sense in training a bobbed-haired bunch to fox-trot through the municipal pocketbook. So far as the W.C.T.U. is concerned money spent in the dance or the making of its music is worse than wasted. To train the young to an indulgence in the tango is little less than crime. To spend the city money in the employment of a battery of saxophones is malfeasance, misfeasance and mischief. People learned to walk soberly under the beneficent ministrations of the Eighteenth Amendment. It may take the Twentieth to relieve them of the feverish measures of the wiggle-waggle. It is not enough that America should be sober. It must also be decorous. And how can a girl be decorous when the clarinets are bleating, "I'm Hungry for My Hop!"

AMERICA AND TURKEY

Since the dawn of history that narrow strip of territory of which Constantinople is the crowning jewel has been a storm center. But all the storms which have devastated that region have not been of the same character. Some have been purely tribal, though the fury of the contestants has made the struggle assume a disproportionately large place in history. Still others have reflected bitter animosities between rival religious factions in that region. A few of these contests have been of major significance and have brought Europe and Asia to the death struggle.

The problem before America at this time is, therefore, to determine fully the character of the present Turko-British crisis before this nation is definitely committed to taking a hand in the struggle—if actual struggle there is to be.

This much we know: We are not politically, economically or culturally a Near East power. Our destiny points elsewhere.

Furthermore, it is by no means settled that the mere technical change of control of the Dardanelles or the selection of a new Sultan constitutes a threat to world freedom or to Christendom.

For years the Near East has been the puppet region for the most sinister type of European statesmanship. The religious principles of Islam have been dealt with none too gently by Christian powers in bribing and otherwise corrupting and debasing the Caliphate and the whole governmental machinery of islam.

It is inconceivable that a reconstituted Turkey, unaided by India or Russia, could really threaten the integrity and safety of any considerable portion of even Eastern Europe. Until such time, therefore, as Turkey actually threatens American interests and the principles to which we are dedicated we are justified, nay it is our duty, to keep hands off.

There is no surer way to whip up the resentment of the Moslem world than to make it possible for Indian propagandists to point to the fact that the white world has rushed to arms, even before the Mohammedans have made anything more than a local display of force.

The moment that American interests are jeopardized the moment that the struggle assumes the proportions of a concerted assault by Islam upon Christendom, the moment it is certain that this to to become a combined assault by Bolshevism and Mohammedanism upon civilization itself—THEN, and not until then, will be the time for this country to step in. Meanwhile, any false step on our part, any misjudging of the significance of the Turkish crisis, may provoke a world conflagration which a display of cool-headedness might otherwise be able to avert.

A PLEA FOR BROMIDES

Bromide was, in its youth, a respectable word, endowed with dignity and standing. Low employment has, however, tarnished its appearance, wrecked its decent career, sharpened and poisoned the mild edge of its meaning till it has become a common roustabout of a word. Robbed of its original meaning, it has become the malevolent instrument of the critics and satirists. A bromide was, in its pristine purity, a salt of hydrobromic acid which is recognized medicinally as a sedative. Now a sedative has a soothing and tranquillizing effect upon the human system. Behold a critic kidnaped the young word bodily and used it as a label for every commonplace remark. Thus ended its private life and there began its abandoned public career.

When two solid citizens meet and exchange:

"Well, is it hot enough for you?"

"Yes, it's hot enough for me."

"Hotter today than it was yesterday."

"In fact, it is hotter today than it was yesterday," there is a package of bromide and a dose of sedative. In other words, a grinning reproach upon the national lack of originality and a witness to the national stupidity.

However, the term bromide itself has become so commonplace that it is bromidic to call a bromide a bromide. The statement of one citizen to another that it is hotter today than it was yesterday is a symbol, an earnest that all's right with the world. God's in his heaven, the world is wagging peacefully on. It is the thermometer of welfare, the index of sincere feeling, the gage of friendship. It is in concentrated form, the expression of one man's belief in the order of things as they are, the understanding of his own position in this state of things and his recognition of the other citizen's relative position.

The exchange of platitudinous remarks is a day-to-day reassurance of the rightness of things. The citizenry speaks a common language, the symbolical language of bromides. The obvious sense of the words need not be too closely inquired into except by the bright critics who seize upon each platitude, label it "bromide," hold it up to the light and laugh uproariously.

The commonplace remark is the foundation of all social relation. It is the password and the open sesame which, once uttered, opens the door of the sacred shrine of business discussion. Suppose the solid citizens began to fling brilliant epigrams about, began to cast original, double-edged quiddities at each other. The magic circle would be broken. A new language would be born which would, in turn, become hackneyed and trite. The quip of today is the bromide of tomorrow.

The obvious comment does have a soothing and tranquillizing effect. It is cheerful and welcome. It is charged with a deep significance. It is homely, but sincere. The ill repute into which the word bromide has fallen because of the fine scorn of the critics must change to a position of true importance. It is hot today.

NOTHING DOING

After all their preparation and expense the astronomers and scientists who went to Christmas Island to photograph and study the eclipse of the sun encountered clouds that defied their penetration. They had spent months in blissful anticipation of three minutes and even these were denied them. Among other things, they hoped to confirm or refute the Einstein theory. As it is, we will have to struggle along with our relativity as best we can. We are always bumping into the unkindness of fate.

Breakin' the Bric-a-brac

A CHALLENGE TO TEMPERANCE

At the November polls the many elements interested in defeating the Eighteenth Amendment, either directly or indirectly, are combining for a concerted attempt to insert at least the thin edge of the "wet" wedge into some crevice in the national "dry" plank.

For the first time since the country repudiated alcohol many candidates are openly bidding for the vote of those seeking to restore gradually the old conditions of the wine party and the liquor bar. This argues organization and financial backing. A "wet" bloc has been added to the vicious minority system that is everywhere attacking the expressed decisions of the majority. Furthermore, this bloc is evidently spending large sums for the election of candidates whose actions it can control.

To this challenge the friends of temperance must oppose an unbroken front. Let there be no misunderstanding as to the issue involved. Those in favor of tilting the lid in the legalization of drinks with low alcoholic percentages, intentionally or unintentionally, are taking the first steps toward a return to the discredited wide-open saloon system.

Licensing beer and light wines will have no effect on the operations of bootleggers, since these cater to the taste for swift and strong intoxicants. Moreover, the extra inspection and surveillance required of enforcement officers, if the country were flooded with light intoxicants that mustn't be allowed to intoxicate, would add enormously to the expense of enforcing this novel form of temperance.

While it is evident that, under the Eighteenth Amendment, quite apart from the Volstead Act, the sale of any drink that did actually intoxicate would be illegal and probably so interpreted by the Supreme Court, a wet bloc could cause considerable confusion if it controlled a sufficient number of votes to modify the Volstead Act.

Such a contingency is not likely at the present time. But it is well to avoid the beginning of trouble. Already in both the Senate and the House too many votes are controlled by various blocs. No encouragement should be given a "wet" bloc by returning candidates it has assisted to elect.

And for any candidate running for any office in the gift of the people the friends of law and order will favor those whose record is sure in the enforcement of all decrees that have received popular sanction.

KNIGHTS OF THE CRUTCH

Benevolent and kindly intentioned people have been woefully disillusioned by the recent exposures of the comfortable fortunes of New York beggars. The quality of mercy has rarely been strained on the American mind. It is inherent and deeply lodged. It is a precept of the Christian religion and, as a Christian nation, we subscribe to the tenets of brotherly love and the belief that we are our brothers' keepers. It is the instant and unreasoning response to desperate appeal that has generated the growth of a splendidly organized and highly specialized business: the business of begging.

Mercy, as a definite quality in the American mind, has been accurately measured as a profit-bearing quantity by shrewd men in exactly the same way in which a deposit of gold-bearing ore is assayed. It will yield so many millions of dollars annually. While dreamers have gone off in mad searches for fabulous gold mines, have gone to the depths of the seven seas for jewels, have penetrated the earth's surface for oil, the astute ones have sat quietly on the street corners, in despairing postures, in pitiful rags of the best designing, draining the one positive hidden treasure; and that is mercy. In a golden shower it droppeth as a gentle rain from heaven to heap up huge bank accounts for the unscrupulous ones.

Beggary has been refined to a scientific and profitable business. A professional beggar has on his finger tips, knows in their finest uses the value of vision, key situations, strategic values, pulling power, psychology of appeal and could school any number of struggling salesmen in the fine art of getting results. The jargon of his trade is as complete and apt as that of the bootlegger, and, being older, is more dignified. In real estate supply and demand are intermittent and changing quantities. Beggary is based upon a property as reliable and constant as the recurrence of hunger. Mercy as a capital is so inexhaustible as the demand for it.

To secure the last ounce from the treasure-bearing lode of mercy requires only the most effective equipment and the wisest methods. The lode may be tapped on any crowded street corner with the machinery of a few rags, pathetic expression, a pair of crutches or blue glasses and a cap. It is like tapping the vault of the national treasury.

So long as America is a Christian country, just so long will its people practice promiscuous charity and so long will that charity be imposed upon. The impositions revealed in New York show one of the most ludicrous situations in American life. Hundreds of hard-working, poorly circumstanced clerks and stenographers and salesmen, whose salaries average $35 weekly, hurrying home to a tiny flat and a moderate dinner halt to drop a tear and a part of a meager income into the ragged cap of a millionaire beggar who will shortly take a devious path to a modern mansion, where he will dress and dine in valeted and servanted luxury. Later on he will summon his limousine for a theater expedition and party, provided it isn't the chauffeur's night off. The poor beggar is not even spared the servant problem nowadays. The fortunes amassed from the world-old institution of beggary by the application of business methods and psychology give the American public pause.

The expose will no doubt cause a temporary depression of business, but, as in all well-established institutions, it will recover, and the few millions laid away by the chiefs and branch managers will help tide things over. Deserving beggars will, of course, suffer more intensely. The charitable public, dreadfully affronted at such ruthless exploitation of its finer feelings, will dam the flow of its mercy and money. But the sluices will not hold long, they will overflow into the first tattered cap around the corner and the solid citizen will walk away with the old familiar glow of righteousness and the warm thrill of giving.

After all, whose is the profit?

IMPARTIAL JUSTICE

In connection with its rather gloomy review of court conditions in America the law enforcement committee of the National Bar Association strongly recommended changes in practice which would give the prosecution every right of appeal now enjoyed by a defendant—except from a verdict of not guilty. The committee also holds that it should be the right of the prosecutor to bring to the attention of a jury the circumstance that the defendant had failed to take the stand in his own behalf or refute the testimony of the State. The committee further objects to motions that are purely dilatory and insists that there should be but one appeal from a judgment of conviction in a trial court. Parole, probation and indeterminate sentences should be for first offenders only and these must necessarily be segregated from the hardened and professional criminal classes. As criminal law is now applied, the defendant is given every advantage. There are no possible points of controversy in which he does not start out with all existing benefits. In some of the States the jury is permitted to become the judge of the law as well as the facts. If there could be a standardization of criminal practice in the various States it would be a fine thing for justice. The bar committee will keep at the work along these lines. Moreover, the committee goes to the extent of denouncing the grasping tendencies of the legal profession and demands a higher code of ethics. Members of the association are called upon to serve without fee in cases where the poor or worthy are being wronged, defrauded or oppressed. Ultimately there must be refutal of the thought that in any community justice is too costly for the poor. Let the voice of the bar committee prevail.

RIPPLING RHYMES

THE FARMER

The farmer has more kinds of grief than any man I know; if he has pleasure, it is brief, and long-drawn is his woe. My Uncle Hiram tills the soil, he hustles day by day, and half the time his earnest toil is labor thrown away. This year he had a field of corn that grew to wondrous size and he surveyed it every morn with gladness in his eyes. The rains arrived in timely showers, the sunshine followed then, the cornstalks grew through daylight hours, by night they grew again. My Uncle Hiram's spirits soared, he watched the green corn wave; "this fall," he said, "I can afford a hair-cut and a shave. The way that field is looking now the harvest will be fat; I'll lift the mortgage from the cow and buy my wife a hat." He thought of many things he'd do when all that corn was shucked, when it was run the sheller through and to the market trucked. Then came a hot wind from the south that turned bright green to gray; the corn, as in a furnace mouth, burned up and blew away. My Uncle Hiram viewed the wreck, crop gone, beyond recall; two briny tears ran down his neck, he sighed, and that was all. Oh, oftentimes this sort of crime the husbandman must view; but for laments he has no time—he has his chores to do.

WALT MASON.

WHAT WAR MAY MEAN

BY RAYMOND BLATHWAYT

Author of "Through Life and Round the World," E. P. Dutton & Co., who are also publishing his new book, "From Thought to Thought."

To begin with, I trust, it means a very close friendship between England and the United States. But it also means far more. I will very briefly and succinctly endeavor to indicate what may well be forthcoming.

Two or three weeks ago a certain ominous paragraph in the Los Angeles Times led me to make the remark: "This may mean the greatest war the world has ever known." My American friend, to whom I made the remark, replied: "I don't agree with you. If the Turks and the British fight it will be all over in six weeks."

I said, "Much more likely six years!"

He was incredulous; he laughed at me. "You are a pessimist," he replied.

"No," I said, "I am not. I am simply taking into consideration world-wide and inevitable contingencies. That is not pessimism and, even if it were, it is surely better than unthoughtful and ill-considered, ill-informed optimism. When the Boer War broke out in October, 1899, a vast number of English optimists shouted out: 'We shall eat our Christmas dinner in Pretoria.'"

And the war lasted for nearly three years! The same in September, 1914, then the song of the unthinking optimists was: "We shall march into Berlin on Christmas morning."

As a matter of fact, after nearly five years of the most deathly struggle the world has ever known we never marched into Berlin at all.

It is perfectly possible that the Allies may put the Turks to flight in six weeks, but it is not probable. It will most likely be a long and deadly struggle.

But it is with what the war may eventually mean that I am more concerned at the moment; what it may lead to, where it may end. As Andy Gump, in last Thursday's Los Angeles Times, so truly says: "It isn't where you start; it's where you land." That is what counts!

This outbreak, if it flames into action between the British and the Turks, may result, probably will result, in world-wide disaster.

It may mean the proclamation of a holy war which will set the whole of the East, Near and Far, in a blaze which may rage for twenty years.

In India there are 70,000,000 of Mohammedans, who are practically sworn to defend the faith. They are fanatical upholders of the Sultan of Turkey and will fight, on his behalf, to the very end. They have recently sunk their ancient differences with 300,000,000 of Hindus and, with them, if revolution and mutiny are declared, they will fight the British Empire to a finish.

My American friend laughed at that when I put it forward as a very solemn reason for our doing all we possibly could to avoid a clash today with the Turks in Constantinople.

"Why," said he, "they are mere savages; they have no modern armament. They could not stand up to Great Britain for a week."

"But," I replied, "granting all that, and that we have all the modern devices that they have not, or may not possess, for we don't know what they may have gained in the way of modern armament, how can 200,000 British soldiers stand up against 370,000,000 natives of India, aflame with fanatic fervor and driven on by intense hatred of the English rule, even if they fought us with only their bare hands? If England and Turkey do go to war, India will burst into flame at once, whether we lick the Turks or they lick us."

And then there are the untold millions of North African and Sudanese Mohammedans, all of them, as Rudyard Kipling said thirty years ago, "first-class fighting men."

It will take all, and far more, than France and Italy can do to overcome these hordes of the most desperate and the bravest soldiers it is possible to imagine.

We must take into consideration the tremendous psychological effect of religion upon eastern nations and such a creed as that of Mohammedanism.

Every single Turkish, Indian or African Mohammedan, as well as the Mohammedans of Arabia, Mesopotamia and Egypt, will throw himself, utterly fearless, upon the bayonets of the British, the French or the Italians, knowing that immediately he dies he will go to paradise, in which he believes!

And that is the strength of Mohammedanism. The Mohammedans believe in their religion. We don't believe in ours!

Islam against Christendom.

When Richard Coeur de Lion led his soldiers against the Saracens the English soldiers wore the cross emblazoned upon their breasts and their banners. And they were willing to, and they did, fight to the death for it.

Can we say the same today?

Our soldiers are just as brave and just as magnificent as they were then, but that which will be the flaming inspiration of the Mohammedans will be their unquenchable and undying faith in their prophet and their religion.

And then, again, what will Russia do? I understand that already 200,000 Bolshevists are on their way to India to foment a universal rising against the British rule.

That is an omen, in itself, which is pregnant with the most terrible possibilities.

This war, if it begins, which God grant it never will, will not fizzle out in six weeks, as my friend so optimistically forecasts.

It will rather be the most hideous tragedy of world-wide disaster that has ever overtaken the human race.

With Turkey, Russia, probably also Germany, India, North Africa, the Soudan, Mesopotamia, Arabia and possibly Egypt against the Allies, and other contingencies and potentialities of which we know not today, what else can be looked for but a war which will gradually drag in the whole world?

And that brings me to my last point: "What will Japan do?" That is a question that affects America almost more than it affects any other nation.

Believe me, if war really breaks out between the Turks and the British today it is, in almost all probability, good-by for years and years to come to peace and plenty, happiness and comfort all over the world.

And America, yes, even Los Angeles and Hollywood will realize this to the nth degree.

AIN'T IT JUST SO?

Billie Lale says he wonders sometimes if there is such a thing
As absolute truth in the world
In any department of life and he and Joe Hatch were flivvering past Len
Potts's the other day and Len
Stopped them and told them of
The scrap he and Ab Dollarhide
Had over a political argument.
Lifetime friends, but no more.
And a little further along they Passed Lee Adair's and Joe told
How Lee fell out with his brother twenty years ago over close
Communion and they haven't spoken since, and a little further
On they passed a filling station
That was painted an odd shade
And a couple of miles beyond it
Billie remarked about it and Called it blue, and Joe said, No,
Anybody could see it was green.
Not pea green, of course, nor olive green, but a shade of green,
And Billie said, well, he'd
Bet ten dollars it was a shade
Of blue and they'd just drive
Back and ask the owner and take
His word for it and Joe said,
"Shoot," and they did and the Owner said it was a shade of grey.

Maj. Andre of the British army was hanged at Tappan, N. Y., as a spy in the year 1780, after negotiating with Benedict Arnold for the treacherous surrender of West Point. His remains were taken to England in 1821 and interred in Westminster Abbey.

The first Pan-American conference was opened at Washington, D. C., in 1889. Its object was to promote amity, peace and commerce throughout the western continent. Ten republics were represented and signed an arbitration treaty. James G. Blaine originated the idea and planned the conference.

Broadway Laid Out by Indians

Many who use the familiar Broadway in New York are ignorant of the fact that this highway follows almost exactly an Indian path, whose somewhat picturesque name was Weckquaesgwek. Recent discoveries have shown, however, that the upper section of this famous street has been in practically continuous use for centuries. It is known that the Indians had a natural genius for path-finding and in this instance it was unusually exemplified, because when modern engineers started to turn the original narrow pathway into a roadway and later into a paved street with tracks and subways the line of the original Indian trail was still preserved as being the best available. To such an extent is this the case, in fact, that, were the modern pavements to be removed, remains of the original path could still be found.—[Christian Science Monitor.

HOW HE MANAGED IT

Shortly after being made a peer Lord Magheramorne, who was better known as Sir James McGarel Hogg, went to dine at the house of an old friend, where he announced himself to Jeames as "Lord Magheramorne."

"What?" said the startled domestic.

"Lord Magheramorne," said he, with emphasis.

Jeames shook his head. He despaired of attempting to render the uncouth gutturals. What was he to do? The visitor was advancing to the drawing-room.

Jeames hesitated a moment, then boldly flung open the door and proclaimed: "The late Sir James Hogg."—[Vancouver Province.

A SCHWAB ANSWER

A party of foreigners recently visited the Bethlehem steel plant and Charles M. Schwab showed them over the property. Among other things they marveled at was an immense traveling crane. One of the party asked Mr. Schwab if he could study it at close range. "Certainly," he replied, "and if it will help you any I will send you a complete set of blue prints."

The questioner was amazed at the steel-maker's frankness and generosity. "If you do that," he managed to say, "we might build one like it."

"Go ahead," Schwab replied, radiating the well-known Schwab smile, "but by the time you have it erected we will have better ones here."—[Wall Street Journal.

SURE OF DISTINCTION

The woman of wisdom bent over the crystal ball. "Your son will be a very distinguished man if he lives long enough," she murmured in deep, mysterious tones.

"Oh, how nice!" gushed the proud mother. "And for what will he be distinguished?"

Listen, World!

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED By Clare Robinson

They hung him the other day—the 24-year old boy who had murdered a man. Twenty years old. That's Johnny's age, isn't it? And it doesn't seem more than a week since you put him in his first rompers, does it? Of course Johnny thinks he's a grown-up man, but you and I know different. How we laugh behind his back at his grown-up airs. Only a kid, our Johnny!—And out there in a lime-filled hole rots what is left of another Kid whom we have hung!

No, this isn't going to be a "sob-sister" appeal. I do not believe in sob-sistering over criminals. I do not believe in banking their cells with flowers nor in turning them loose on a defenseless community. But I do maintain that much of our present treatment of the criminals is just as irrational and springs as surely from stupid, emotional excesses as the banks of flowers.

Why do we have criminals? Because we permit criminals.

Crime is woven into the very warp and woof of those deformed brains and twisted spirits by evil matings we allow to take place. Crime is ground into their imaginations, grafted on their every gesture by the vicious surroundings which we permit and further. The devil does not always wear hoof and horns. He appears far more often in the disguise of bare pantry shelves, neglected childish sickness, overworked childish bodies, broken child spirits. For all this we are infinitely more responsible than the child who is growing into a criminal. Then, when some day the inevitable happens and that diseased brain and spirit inflict some hideous wrong upon humanity, we grab the criminal, lock him up, hang him by the neck until dead and—call that justice. Justice? The justice, stupidity and beastliness of a wolf pack.

If you want to stop crime, don't breed crime. Don't let certain sorts of people mate—don't let certain sorts of children occur. You have no more right to hang a semi-idiot for murder than you have to hang a child for sneezing because it has a cold in its head—

And science has proven that most murderers are semi-idiots.

Shut criminals up, by all means, and eliminate the "pull" that gives them unfair parole. But try in every way to remove the cause that makes for murder or theft. It's doubtful if it can be removed when it has gone as far as murder. If it can't segregation under humane conditions, without the implication of punishment, is the only logical and decent recourse. But in the name of what sort of a God, unless it be a cannibal God, do we now deal with those who have broken our laws?

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

Calls France to Task

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—[To the Editor, Los Angeles Times:] Some days ago you have published in the Los Angeles Times, but the situation in Near East, and special Greece, that King Constantin is to blame.

Kings they cost too much money to keep, and they there for life.

But in the present conflict, not Greece, not even King Constandin, is to blame.

And if we look for the truth is not hard to find. During the World War the Kaiser told the Turk, that if the Turk give him the oil fields in Armenia he could kill all the Armenians he wanted and then the Turks kill over million Armenians.

Now the war is won and France, in the name of Liberty, and the rights of small nations, she went and took the oil fields, of the Armenians, but this time both Greeks and Armenians, they have been giving to the Turk to be exterminated, because France got Syria besides.

The Turks can not build airplanes, tanks, munitions, guns. France give them the guns and money, and munitions to kill the Christians. England she can not alone stop France to take the property of the Armenians, but with U. S. they can put end to such policy of war and destruction.

If the people of America and special through the press, don't take action, ill be wars and rumors of wars, and we are to blame because we permit unjustice, in the front of our eyes to be exercised.

Let's hope and pray to GOD, with True Harts to give us peace.

With True motives,

Yours very Truly,

PETER I. KAMIZOLAS.

Buyers the Goats

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times.] What has become of all of the delightful old-time courtesy? Has it gone to some bourn from which it will never return? Or will it become the fashion again some day?

It is indeed, strange to run across an advertisement informing prospective customers that they will receive courteous treatment when shopping at Doe and Doe's store.

There a few merchants who are able to see the reading matter on the wall and are endeavoring to correct the abuse of inctivity in their own business, but they are the exception. Formerly it was not necessary to advertise civil treatment for customers. It was a thing taken for granted on all sides.

It is all best explained by setting aside, for the moment, the love of pure English, and declare that the customer is the goat: That he knows it, but he is not a voluntary animal of this kind. His belief in evolution is that his gradual development or descent from lower forms of life is upward and not a descent downward.

But this thing has been ground into him with such telling effect during the past few years that now you see him entering a place of business, or the jail, with his money and his hat in his hand with an apology framed and committed to memory for emergency.

But Mr. Goat is all alone in his humiliation. His advance is met met halfway. The handwriting that he sees and feels is: Take it at once or leave it. I am sorry to see you.

Veteran Has His Say

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am an ex-service man and a "full-blooded American" and did my little bit. I am a working man— a day laborer —yet I must admit I do not attach a great deal of importance to the bonus. Men who are going along waiting for and depending on the government's gift of a few dollars are on the well-worn road to dissatisfaction. We only did our duty. Why should we want pay for it? Our country is either worth fighting for—or it isn't. And the question involved doesn't seem to be a very difficult one to answer. To say the least (and the most) its the best we have. Why not let it go at that?

Now here is where I touch on a "touchy" subject — "Prohibition". Seems to me there are lots of "evils" worse than "light wines and beer"—such for instance, as home brew, dope, and loneliness. The unmarried workingman, of which I am one, is forever kept at "attention" by the existing order of things. He has the impression of trying to be uplifted beyond the stage compatible with his peace of mind by those who are themselves in a higher envoironment than the uplifted can enjoy in many, many generations. Over a friendly mug of beer he-men may find contentment after a strenuous day's work and still remain he-men. Instead of having to stand by, cowed, while the fortunate, with place to go, go merrily on their way. I do not advocate a return of the old-style saloon, but there is more loneliness in this country today than can ever be described by any words in our dictionary. The wirtshafts, cafes and pubs of the old countries would offer some solution to this problem—at least to one class—the class that is now mostly ignored. Only appreciation of the value of the space of four columns prevents me from saying much more on this one particular subject.

It may seem like a long leap to love and marriage questions but when speaking of loneliness as I have, it bears a close relation.

It takes but "half an eye" to see that the sexes are drawing apart nowadays. And whose fault is it? Off-hand I would say it is the erroneous conception we have of so many things fundamental. The high life that misleads so many and causes so much discontent and likewise our alleged "high standard of living' are only comparative conditions and do not fulfill our ideals in that extent except in a few cases. As regards relationship of sex, marriage in some form or other is, of course, the only answer. Simplify it then—make it workable —practical. Love, of course, is and always should be, the keynote. But the rest—give men a chance to earn enough to support their wives decently. And give the wife the opportunity to pursue her ideals. If children are valuable to the State, then let the State subsidize them. Today, woman is the martyr of our present civilization. Is it any wonder she rebels?

Light the Tower

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please allow me to suggest through The Times the fine advantage it would be to have the beautiful tower of Los Angeles High School lighted up at night. The thousands who travel by motor going to and coming from the beaches would enjoy it and it would be a fine send-off for our city schools. This tower is said to be one of the architectural treasures of our city, being of English design and much admired for its lines and dignity.

The cost would be light, but the publicity gain would be great.

WILLIAM B. BROWN.

Points to Riches

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Mr. O. H. Jones had a letter, dated August 15, in your columns speaking of four different oil streams coming from Los Angeles. One he has not mentioned: a large stream coming from Mt. Baldy through San Gabriel Canyon to Santa Fe Springs thence to San Pedro and the ocean. It is more than a mile wide and of high grade, with a strong gas pressure.

This territory has never been invaded by oil derricks and is practically unimproved, except some rich orange groves.

There is oil seepage in the foothills back of Azusa, also in San Gabriel Canyon.

Some day this field will be a second Santa Fe Springs. It has already been passed on by geologists.

If oil drillers would keep from the deadlines there would be fewer dry holes, and less money wasted in the oil game.

Question: Is "copyright—1922," attached to a newspaper or magazine article, the correct form to use for its protection?

I. W. D.

Answer: The copyright law prescribes the form thus: "Copyright 1922 by John Smith," Any person who attaches a copyright notice to his material without promptly afterwards complying with the formality of depositing printed copies with claim of copyright for registration, fails to comply with the express requirements of the law, and cannot bring suit for infringement until he has done so.

Q.: When was imprisonment for debt abolished?

I. J.

A.: The abolition of imprisonment for debt in this country began in Kentucky in 1821.

Q.: Did lacquer work originate in Japan or in China?

F. C. V.

A.: While the art of lacquer work was first known to the Chinese and taught by them to the Japanese, this latter nation has so far excelled all others that authorities have said lacquer in all its uses and decorations is a truly Japanese belonging.

Ticket Passers

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Allow me as a citizen and taxpayer to protest through the columns of your paper against the horde of ticket passers stationed in most every business place in the city who worry, hound and harass peaceable citizens as they pass by with their almost frantic efforts to induce them to accept tickets for an alleged free ride to some real estate or oil lot subdivision.

This has got to be such a nuisance and annoyance that it can no longer be tolerated and the way tourists, and especially women, are annoyed is a disgrace to the city.

SAMUEL NELSON.

Ask the Patrons

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The protest entered by Luther Ingersoll, against the location of the new public library on Normal Hill instead of Pershing Square, in an address delivered before the Woman's City Club Tuesday as reported in The Times, appears to be of more than passing interest.

His reasons for objection were many and seem based on good premises. However, over the protest of many when the matter came up for disposal, the honorable library board, consisting of Orra E. Monnette, Mrs. J. Wells Smith, Father Francis Conaty, Frank H. Pettengill and Mrs. Frances Zahn, voted in favor of the hill location. The action of the board, was dissappointing to thousands of patrons and taxpayers who supported the bond issue, with the reasonable expectation, that the site to be chosen would be centrally located, such as the square offers and not one that would require hill climbing, to say nothing of the great expense entailed in cutting down the hill, it being estimated by the City Engineer, one competent to express judgment, that $125,000 would have to be expended, in this one item.

In a rebuttal argument to Henry M. McKee, the prominent banker, though not a member of the board in whose advocacy of the hill site it is observed he has been active, for reasons best known to himself, who is reported as having said: "Why, add to the congested space about Fifth street?" Mr. Ingersoll replied by saying very cleverly as well as truthfully: "Libraries need to be near patrons, the same as banks, easy of access to accommodate the patrons."

Why expend $125,000 of the taxpayers' money when same can be saved? Why scatter money as if it were chicken feed? If the library boardd is looking forward to putting over another bond issue, which may be necessary in order to carry out its plans and to many it looks that way, why not begin practicing economy at the outset and save an estimated cost of $125,000 as a starter?

Pershing Square is the proper site for the library. It is to be hoped that the honorable library board, doubtless well meaning, will get busy and give the patrons and people an opportunity to voice their wishes. A poll of patrons of the library, who are directly interested would not, perhaps, be a bad idea. Why not try it out?

CAMPBELL HARDY.

ORIGIN OF X-RAY

It was in 1895 that Prof. Conrad Roentgen, the famous German physicist, announced the discovery of the fact that if a current of electricity be passed through a certain kind of glass bulb, from which the air had been exhausted, the resulting "light" (so-called in spite of the fact that it is not apparent to the eye,) would penetrate the flesh and semisolid substances and reveal objects on the other side. For want of a better name to give to this disturbance of the ether, Prof. Roentgen called it the X-ray, "X" being the accepted symbol for an unknown quantity. The real nature of the X-ray is still undiscovered. The ray itself is generated by a battery, the wires of which are connected with two electrodes, one of which is a concave disc of aluminum and the other a flat disc of platinum. The current is then discharged through a glass vacuum tube and produces the ether disturbance which renders flesh or clothing semitransparent, while glass, metals, bones and mineral substances are generally opaque to it.—[Indianapolis News.

Why Endure That Aching Back?

DON'T let a bad back keep you miserable! You know there must be something wrong when every day brings dull, nagging backache and that tired, dragged-out feeling. So why not find the cause and correct it? Chances are, you have given no thought to your kidneys; yet more than likely they are at fault. When the kidneys weaken, the blood becomes overloaded with poisons that well kidneys would filter off. These poisons upset the whole system, and it's little wonder one has torturing backache, sharp, stabbing pains at every sudden move, and distressing bladder irregularities. There may be headaches, too, with dizzy spells, "jumpy" nerves, and an irritable, depressed feeling. Then don't risk serious or chronic kidney trouble. Help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills—before it is too late. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

J. M. SMITH, carpenter, 1571 E. 33rd St., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills put my kidneys in good shape and I gladly recommend them. I had severe pains in my back which made it hard for me to do any stooping or lifting. My kidneys didn't act regular. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they soon cured me of the trouble. My back is now well and strong and I have had no further trouble since using Doan's."

MRS. JOHN LEMON, 202 E. 54th St., says: "My kidneys were weakened by an operation and when I overworked or took cold it always settled in my back. I could not half do my housework. At times I had sharp, quick catches in my kidneys. Headaches made me miserable. I often had attacks of bladder trouble and my kidneys did not act right. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they benefited me in every way. I cannot say too much for Doan's."

Antonio Nunes, 1573 E. Jefferson St., says: "My work in a cold storage was trying on my kidneys and caused me to have attacks of backache. I was so stiff and lame I could hardly bend. I couldn't rest at night, and was miserable during the day. My kidneys did not act right and at times the secretions were free and then again scanty. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and used them. They were what I needed, and soon my back was well and strong and my kidneys were in good shape."

UNLEASH THE BLOODHOUNDS!

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, Oct. 1.—High school students at Long Beach Poly are greatly roused over an alleged coup perpetrated to gain possession of the football team's signals. School officials are endeavoring to locate one Frank Drake, who registered at Long Beach last week and who has suddenly dropped from football, school and sight. Drake, if that is his name, appeared on the campus during practice last week and declared himself somewhat as follows: That he had wide experience as quarterback on a certain Oklahoma high school team. His parents had moved to Long Beach and he had come with them; that the family car had broken down on the way here, which accounted for his tardy registration; that he desired an opportunity to try out for the local eleven. The stranger, of stanch build and apparently possessing a wide knowledge of gridiron etiquette, was welcomed to the Green and Gold fold and hailed as a likely find. He was furnished a suit and, of course, given the Long Beach signals. The next day he failed to show and as a result certain Long Beach athletes have a strong suspicion that a certain school or schools not more than twenty-five miles from here now have an intimate knowledge of the present secret digits dispensed by the Long Beach signal barker. As a result Coach Kienholz tomorrow will dole out new signals for the team to master for the coming contest with Lincoln on the 31st inst.

COLLARS

U. S. C. AND POMONA TO CLASH SOON

Saturday's Game Looks Sure, but Cloomy Gus Prophesies No Shut-out

With the first game of the year over the Trojans of the University of Southern California are turning their minds toward the first official game of the year, which is to be played with Pomona College at Claremont next Saturday afternoon.

All the dope points toward a decisive victory for U.S.C., but there's many a well-known slip, as Henderson, head coach of the U.S.C. team, learned last Saturday when Johnny Boyle, star tackle for the Trojans, fractured his knee and threw himself out of the game for the rest of the year.

The other casualties were small but the loss of Boyle is counted as a hard blow.

The Sagehens have a very strong team as far as the Southern California conference teams stack up, but the Trojan institution has more material to choose from and usually develops a much stronger outfit.

Coach Gloomy Gus states that he has hopes of defeating the Sagehens by about twenty points, although last season he planned to do more with a much weaker team.

Otto Anderson made such a good showing the other day that the famous mentor expects to play him straight through the game. Contrary to the usual dope, Otto is not a boy to favor his legs despite the fact that he is a sprinter and hurdle man.

Norm Anderson, another lineman, has shown up far beyond the expectations of anyone who has seen the Trojan team in practice. The big boy has an incredible amount of speed and hits the line like a battering ram. His weight, which is around the 215 mark, is not his smallest asset by any means.

Coach Nixon of the Pomona squad is having quite a time to get a team ready to take the field against the prides of the Red and Gold it would seem. He seems to have a pile of good material but all of it lacks the necessary punch and speed.

Charlie Daggs, well-known sprinter, is the only man on the team who has anything like a decent amount of speed, according to the coach, but he has a lot of beefy boys whom he hopes to develop into fast men.

Tigers Prepare for a Journey to Play Nevada

Timber Wolf Joe Pipal will spend the next three or four days polishing off the rough edges that developed in the team play of the Occidental Tigers last Saturday as the Bengals have a big job on their hands next Saturday in tackling the University of Nevada in their own back yard.

The Orange and Black eleven seems to have the makings of a first-class football team for the first time in years, having a fair batch of second-string material. Norton, Gary and Walker of last year's backfield are going to have their work cut out for them to hold their jobs, as Ridderhoff, Ebers, Shoaf and Creswell of last year's Frosh are going like a house afire.

Pipal apparently is going to have four of the best ends in the history of the institution. He has Johnson and Purcell of last year's freshmen, and the two sensational sprinters, Cliff Argue and Johnny Spangler. Argue played one game for the varsity last year and Spangler fussed around as a halfback. Both are playing a fine game this year at end and seem to have the first call on the jobs.

TENNIS IS GROWING IN THE ANTIPODES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—Tennis is growing in Australia. New grounds are being constructed by the New South Wales Tennis association at Rushcutter's Bay, ten minutes' ride from Sydney. They will include ninety turf courts. Stands to seat 13,000 are being erected.

This is the season when the sporting page is in flower. Several big events in the world of athletics are found overlapping. There is a most sensational race in the Coast League and of engrossing interest to several hundreds of thousands. Even before this has started to cool, the world series, greatest of sporting events on the Western Hemisphere, is found fascinating its millions. Succeeding this, signs point to a "little world series" on the Coast for minor-league championship. Football has already started to unfold. More than 140 gridiron teams are in training in Southern California and preliminary games are already being played.

Golf continues to hold sway on almost countless links; tennis courts throng with devotees of the racket. Two major boxing clubs stage cards weekly, with lesser or outside organizations offering attractions. Hunting, fishing, trapshooting, yachting and a score of lesser sporting attractions have their following. In short, it is difficult to encounter a citizen who isn't intensely interested in some sport.

How different from the work-a-day world of a decade ago, and longer. Then the sporting page was just that—one page, or less. Now more likely a section. Baseball, boxing matches possibly once or twice a month and a very limited number of football games just about completed the sporting calendar. Now there are innumerable activities. The sporting world is becoming a huge, teeming world, almost staggering in its immensity to those who would cater to its requirements.

Our "Lost Battalion," meaning the Angels, will be present this week after what seems to have been an interminable absence. Their opponents will be San Francisco, a good ball team in its way from a good town in its way. This is one year when the Angels haven't returned from their road trips overburdened with medals. In fact, if all the trophies they copped on the present excursion were melted and molded they wouldn't make a good-sized electron. Meantime, Vernon will be playing Oaks in Oakland. Next week San Francisco plays Oaks, and Vernon plays Los Angeles. Which brings whole thing down to Prof. Einstein's theory of relativity, or perhaps one might more properly say, proximity. Teams with most proximity always seem to play hardest against each other. Real battle will be last week of season, providing two leading clubs are still bunched.

Recently I spoke of the Senegalese as impressing me as men of medium stature, long-armed and heavily muscled about shoulders and averaging around 170 or 180 pounds in weight.

Their symmetry may have led me into a false impression as to size. Tom Mulholland, son of William Mulholland, was discussing Senegalese specifications with Walter Jackson, assistant secretary of the Vernon club. Both were in the service. Mulholland not only saw a lot of Senegalese troops in France, but curiosity prompted him to walk among them. Tom stands something like an inch over 6 feet. When in the midst of what he had regarded merely as good-sized men, to his surprise he found all of them his equal in stature and many of them towering over him. Six feet three and four, he says, was nothing unusual. Proportions have much to do with impressions made on the eye. More relativity.

Carpentier's defeat by an unskilled yet strong opponent of the rough-and-tumble variety was not necessarily an upset. Such things have happened before, or nearly happened. Siki crimped Carp in six rounds.

Had Jim Corbett and Tom Sharkey been matched for six instead of four rounds, Sharkey probably would have been heavyweight champion of the world. Tom was then a little-known, rugged fellow just out of the navy, or possibly on furlough. He was merely a rushing, bull-like fighter, with not a suspicion of ring science. Corbett confidently took him on for a four-round affair in San Francisco. Gentleman Jim was by no means in condition. He felt that he could stand the sailor off without so much as superinducing a sweat.

But Sharkey, gushing with stamina, rushed Corbett from the start. He crowded the champion at every turn. His attack was as crude and elemental as that of Siki. He didn't hurt Corbett, who knew far more boxing that Carpentier or any other heavyweight of this era, but the champion tired visibly in the fourth. Jim, so eyewitnesses have told me, was visibly in distress. It was even asserted that the last round was shortened by a friendly timekeeper in order to save the champion. However, no less an authority than De Witt C. Van Court, who witnessed the engagement, gives no credence to this assertion.

STAUBER STARS WITH GUN

Bagging the duck limit and winning a brace of trapshooting events might constitute a busy day to some, but to A. J. Stauber, local clayhawk exterminator, it was just an eventful day. However, the mopper-up of mud saucers bagged his twenty-five quack-quacks early yesterday morning and then drifted casually into the Vernon Gun Club grounds and commenced shooting with twenty-five or thirty other gunners on the Mark Lane and Vernon challenge trophies.

In the affair for Mournful Mark's cup the gunners fired at 100 targets from sixteen yards. Stauber was at his best and bumped off the goodly and winning amount of ninety-eight.

Then followed the shoot for the challenge medal, which calls for three straight wins to make it for keeps. The shooting was at fifty single targets at sixteen yards and twenty-five pairs of doubles from the same distance. Stauber broke forty-nine singles. So did three other shooters. But at the doubles Stauber was the better shot by a whole bird, breaking forty-five. The total in the shoot was ninety-four.

LYNWOOD WINS OVER JAPANESE

Take 8-to-7 Verdict Over Nipponese Squad

Cal-Pa-Cos Take Slugfest from Pomona Elks

Renshaw, Jones and Suttons Lose to White Kings

BY JOE BUSH

The Los Angeles Japanese ball squad, out to make it three victories in a row, were defeated by Lynwood, 8 to 7, in the feature game of yesterday's round of the Greater Southern California Baseball Association's diamond tilts. The Japanese showed surprising strength against the Lynwood aggregation and are improving rapidly.

T. Igasaki, the Nipponese catcher, was the hitting star of the game, slamming out four safe blows out of five trips to the rubber. Pat Rozelle and A. Derfelt got their customary three hits, as did Cluff Pawlas, Lynwood shortstop, who played his last game for the Lynwooders. Pawlas is leaving for Salt Lake.

Cordia, winning pitcher, drove out a three-base hit and his batting record for the last seven games includes three triples, four doubles and four singles. Score:

O'CONNOR FIRST IN SWIM RACE

Defeats Colin Smith After Tight Battle; Marie Curtis Nabs Mermaids' Event

The Los Angeles Athletic Club and the Venice Swimming Club divided honors in the eleventh annual rough water swimming races at Ocean Park yesterday. Marie Curtis of the L.A.A.C. won the women's paddling event, while Wallace O'Connor of the Venetians nosed out Colin Smith for first place in the men's swim.

Miss Curtis easily captured the first prize in the mermaids' event, leaving Mary Wheeler and Thelma Fion, both Mercury mermaids, to fight it out for second honors. Miss Wheeler won the verdict after a thrilling race, by one foot. The time of the women's event was 5 minutes 53 2-5 seconds, which is said to be a new record. The distance of the race was about 500 yards.

Wallace O'Connor and Colin Smith, old-time aquatic enemies, put up one of their usual exciting paddling duels, but O'Connor had just enough reserve power left to beat out the "winged hoof" representative. O'Connor's time for the race, a distance of three-quarters of a mile, was 15 minutes and 31 seconds, also said to establish a new record for the swim.

Eddie Friel of the Los Angeles Athletic Club finished third, Charles Shields of the San Diego Rowing Club finished fourth and Charles Bahlke of the Venice Swimming Club arrived in fifth. There were fourteen entrants in the race.

Messrs. Dell and James Shorten Breach Between Vernon and San Francisco

BENGALS BLANK SEATTLE TWICE

Tigers Nose Out Siwashes in Week's Series

Essick's Dealers Allow Suds Few Base Hits

Large Crowd Attends Waning Season Twin Bill

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS

Long pitchers shortened distance between Vernon and San Francisco.

They blanked Seattle in yesterday's double-header, 6-0 and 7-0, making Siwashes look as foreign to home plate as Esquimaux are to equator. Between them they allowed nine hits, Wheeler four and James five. Therefore it made no difference that Seattle in winning three games earlier in series shot its three best pitching bets—Gardner, Gregg and Jacobs—or that Adams yesterday was forced to rely on Schorr, Sitter and Williams, mainly rookies. Nobody can win against no-run pitching.

GET EARLY START

Vernon copped second in first on blast of hitting by Chadbourne, High and Smith, wild pitches, sacrifices by Murphy and Hyatt. Thence on Bill breezed. Ray French, going from first to third on a mere infield out in first game and scoring in second game from third on short sacrifice fly to Eldred, with his baserunning supplied feature of double-header aside from pitching. Ray also finished the day in a role of mainspring on double play. This bird's arm and general work have improved steadily the past two months. Particularly is his work impressive when serving as the pivot of a double play.

Press box was honored by presence of such personages as Walter and Harry Jackson, Boots Weber, Gerry Pidge, Billy Van, George Washington Pittock and Earl Houck, the bellowing Elk. Late arrival was Sid Neighbours, one-time football hero at St. Vincent's and U.S.C. Sid, who now holds position 185 miles south of Tampico and lives on quail, tips beams at 300 pounds, according to most conservative avoirdupois estimate. Last season consisted of twenty-six weeks. San Francisco, among others, insisted on twenty-eight weeks this year. This may beat Beals out of pennant. Twenty-sixth week ended yesterday and Seals would have won flag by one game.

Not as many people went to beach or other summer resorts as usual. Instead they came out to see Rocky Schorr. This Siwash splashed around for a spell, finally going down for third and last time in fourth breaker. Wheezer Dell, our only duly authorized no-hit pitcher, opposed Schorr in opener. This completed picture of inequality.

PING STARTS SOMETHING

Fumble by Schorr and another by Crane, gave Vernon run in third. But there was nothing equivocal about four gathered off Rocky in fourth, when Ping Bodie dumped complete cargo of ruts on plate with double. French fashioned a double, and Zeider walked. Schorr struck out Dell. Pass to Chad filled bases. Schneider hit fly to Lane so tall and far that ball sparkled no larger than minnow swimming from New York to Liverpool. French walked in after catch, and other runners advanced allotted span. Smith walked, stocking refillable bases. Ping then slammed liner to left field fence, Deacon Hood made tall jump and desperate try, but couldn't quite reach smash. He and ball bounded off fence simultaneously. It is question whether Bodie's drive or Deacon hit fence hardest. Brother Hood and ball rebounded exactly same distance. Deacon embossed himself deeply on boards and touch or two with paint brush would produce perfect portrait of him sticking to fence like swatted house fly on kitchen wall. Zeider, Chadbourne and Smith trooped in on Ping's double. Schorr walked Locker through smoke of battle, when he was replaced by Sitter. Sitter's parents feared he might turn out to be lounge lizard, but he proved otherwise by industriously retiring Hannah, Orr to stumpf. Sitter got seat of pants stung for run in sixth, when Smith spanked triple behind walk. Sitter looked pretty good and may yet hatch out victory. Jack Adams wants to be a pointer to set as Sitter's battery mate. Dell allowed only four hits, two in the first round.

Discovery was made last night of cold-blooded plot by Siwashes to steal into J. Carlisle Smith's bed chamber and scalp him while sleeping peacefully. This would have eliminated Mr. Smith from competition with Brick Eldred in tandem race for red-headed batting championship of league. J. Carlisle circumvented his enemies by sleeping with head in No. 8 lard bucket. Scalping is going too danged far Same temporary result could be obtained by hiring Greek with shoe brush to attack Mr. Smith with box of stove polish while latter is sleeping.

Serious charge of assaulting and abducting my straw hat may be preferred against Howard Lorenz by Independent Order of Helpless Goats. Some claim it is too late sacrifices by Murphy and Hyatt. Serious charge of assaulting and abducting my straw hat may be preferred against Howard Lorenz by Independent Order of Helpless Goats. Some claim it is too late to wear straw sleeve, although rainwater and wind are said to make scalp-lock luxuriant. This was a passably good active lid, and I had intended to enter it in trial heats next spring. Now it is fuller of holes than a honeycomb, and alongside of it porus plaster would look air tight. What permanent crimps are placed in our hats in the name of fashion! But bird who does it is lucky he doesn't get permanent wave placed in own skull. Bonnet buccaneers, chapeau corsairs and straw hat thugs are daily enrolling in our colleges of crime. Haberdashery hirelings, sartorial slaves and conventional peons all! If Shahs of Style decreed that we wear redhot gloves Lid in July most of us would gladly grow blister on bump of knowledge. Some still cling to calico shoes which do not harmonize with fur turban at other end. Few so rich that they do not have to build fall outfit one block at a time starting at top, which is corner stone. Scores:

ANGELS GRAB A PAIR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SALT LAKE, Oct. 1. — Red Killefer's Angels pulled a double come-back here this afternoon and finished with two games out of the seven-game series to their credit. The scores were 7 to 5 and 3 to 2.

This double come-back proved to be a very difficult piece of work for at the half turn in the seventh inning of the first game the boys from Los Angeles were one behind on a 4-to-3 score. Red snapped his whip in the eighth and the Angels chased four counters across, while the best effort of the Bees gave them only one tally.

The second game was a different story. Where there had been looms playing in the first contest there was a minimum in the final game of the series. Thurston and Hughes opposed each other in a game which stood 2 to 2 at the end of the seventh inning. There was only one error and that came at such a time that it did not figure in the scoring. Four two-base hits, the only extra base clouts of the game, were evenly apportioned as were the hits and also the double plays. Scores:

IT'S GOOD THEME

"SKIN DEEP" PROVES FINE AD FOR BEAUTY DOCTOR

By Grace Kingsley

A great theme that, either for tragedy or satirical comedy—the effects and reactions and results of the ex-soldier with the made-over brain and face! Some day, no doubt, a great story will be written on the subject.

One at least gets that much of an inspiration groping around in the general fog and hokum and murkiness of "Skin Deep," which is playing the Mission, with as fine a cast as has ever graced the silversheet of this city.

As it is, one is all at sea in regards to "Skin Deep." Does the fixing of a nose change a man's soul?—Did the fact that the ex-soldier's nose was fixed, making him a matinee idol, tickle him so that he resolved to go straight? Or was it the experiences of war which predisposed him to do so? Or didn't he intend to go straight when he first came home from the war? Or, with all this splendid opportunity for psychological drama, are we to believe that the authors fell weakly back, after all, on the old sentiment about the deep-dyed crook being so touched by kindness that it made him go straight? It's all rather confusing.

By the way, who is the author? The picture looks to me like a case of the scenario barrel overhauled. There is a dash of the black-and-blue serial drama in the airplane-train-rescue stuff. And there is a reel or two of the good old crook drama. Then there is the psychology stuff.

And the moral seems to be: If you are a crook, turn State's evidence and get into the cop's good graces, and if you have a bad disposition, see a beauty doctor.

Milton Sills at least hasn't to make love all the time. He's the guy that has face fixed. After he got it fixed he carried it around and razzed the other crooks. Bull Montana just ought to see him. Bull might find out how to be a real matinee idol. Sills himself does excellent work.

Marcia Manon's face reflects a thousand moods as the weakly wicked wife of the hero, conspiring with the crooks to keep her husband in jail. There didn't seem to be any reason for this, really. She could just have gotten a divorce and married the other guy; but then, of course, there would have been no story.

Florence Vidor is lovely and sympathetic as the heroine. The other actors, including Winter Hall, Charles Clary and the rest, are very excellent.

Why the title "Skin Deep?" Well, anyhow, this picture is a good ad for the beauty doctor!

Engages Director

Now that Gene Stratton Porter has gone to work in earnest in the vineyard of art, as exemplified in pictures, she naturally wants to get the best the market affords in the way of directors. So she has engaged in that capacity James Leo Meehan, a comparative newcomer in the motion-picture field, but one who, she feels, brings a fresh viewpoint and some ideals to his work.

Production on the first of Miss Porter's stories, "Michael O'Halloran," has just been commenced at the Thomas H. Ince Studios, under Meehan's direction.

'COLLEEN OF THE PINES" AT CLUNE'S

For the 568,796,856,879th time the heroine shoulders the blame for the deception practiced on the sister by the villain. Outside of which, "Colleen of the Pines" this week at Clune's Broadway is a passably original story. It will not, however, raise the ante for features of the snow country, because, whatever else may be said for or against these, the Royal Northwest Mounted Policeman is as much of a commonplace on our screens as a traffic officer is on Broadway.

"Colleen of the Pines" is different only in the paternity of its heroine. Her father is a Scotchman instead of an Irishman or a Canadian voyageur. He is given all the traditionally mean traits for which the Scotch are credited without any or their virtues. His two daughters are both, it appears, a little soft on the subject of romance. As a consequence, they both fall in love early in the picture. One falls wisely, the other unwisely. And, of course, the gentler one is the victim of her sister's indiscretion, though, to tell the truth, this served her right for countenancing that indiscretion in the first place. She should have known better than not to be present at the sister's wedding, especially as she wasn't unaware of the villain's bad reputation.

Oh, well—it's just another photoplay of the type. Everything comes right in the end and no doubt somebody will derive a sympathetic heart palpitation from the sacrifice of the half-breed in his effort to protect the heroine.

Jane Novak looks very gentle and sweet always as the outdoor heroine. I don't know how many she has played, but she still makes them engaging.

Charlotte Pierce can well be credited with earnest effort as the sister. She is just a slight bit different from the regulation ingenue and seems to have a good hunch as to what dramatic acting means.

The men are cast out of the usual plaster in just about the usual mold—the father, played by David Allen, and the half-breed being the most interesting.

On the whole—we yawn, until the Lloyd comedy comes on. This is a bit ancient, but still good.

STORY OF YOUTH IN SECOND WEEK

"Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight," which started a second week at the Symphony yesterday to splendid business, will continue for only six days more. Combining drama with comedy and thrills the production has gained great favor. The dominating note of the picture, based on the famous old song, is simplicity. Small-town life is contrasted with the whirl and the fascination of the big city.

One of the most dramatic moments in the life of any man is the first time that he leaves home and around what happened to Garry Beecher has been woven a compelling story.

FASHION SHOW IS HELP AT KINEMA

BY WILLIAM FOSTER ELLIOT

It was design, not accident, that prompted the Kinema Theater to have Peggy Hamilton stage a fashion show there during this particular week—of that I am certain after seeing the show in question and the remainder of the program.

And I am equally certain that it was a bright and praiseworthy idea on the part of the Kinema Theater, as well as being in the nature of a remedial measure levelled at the box office. For, truth to tell, the photoplay feature, "The Infidel," with Katherine MacDonald, is deadly stuff, and needs all such adventitious aid it can conveniently get.

A hard picture to report on, because in no place is the action or its purpose at all clear, "The Infidel" nevertheless may be freely translated into words as follows:

There is a man named Flint living on an island. For some mysterious reason the natives of the island are ready to rise and massacre the missionaries and other white people living on the island the moment Flint leaves. Enter Lola Daintry, the infidel, played by Miss MacDonald, whose purpose (also mysterious) is to decoy Flint away.

Naturally, she falls in love with Flint. She also—somewhat less naturally—picks up on the island a long-lost father. But this doesn't help the plot particularly. There is also a Nabob who falls in love with the beautiful Lola. And then, too, there is his army of a dozen and a lot of half-dressed natives.

Lola decoys Flint as per program, then is smitten by remorse and confesses. Meanwhile the Nabob et al. have begun their dirty work.

A mysterious wireless apparatus also figures—why, none can say, as there was one, not mysterious, on the yacht. Oh, well, anyhow, the missionaries are rescued and Lola suddenly finds that she believes in God—which fact, after the story that has gone before, is the hardest thing of all to swallow.

Let us pass toward more pleasant topics. The fashion show is—I say it without hesitancy, while admitting that I know very little about feminine finery—the fashion show is excellent entertainment. Particularly, perhaps, the bathing suit and hosiery sections. But still good all the way through.

The Sherwoods help things along with syncopation, and the variety of costumes and models all contribute to what really is a more than average vaudeville act. The men enjoy it, too—I heard several say so.

There is also a very funny Jack White-Mermaid comedy called "Danger."

Turks Introduced to Our Corn

The American relief is doing much to make American corn popular in Turkey as a substitute for wheat and rice. Corn flour and corn grits may be the means of relieving the situation and when the natives learn to like corn they will save much money, as it can be supplied much cheaper than wheat and rice.

Father Gets Chance for Publicity

Mother has long been the saint—at least in poetry, fiction and the drama—of the American family. Father has been neglected and usually regarded as a negligible quantity, the unknown algebraic x whose activities, affections, needs and sorrows were strangers in his own household. His life impinged on that of the family circle only when he came home from a hard day at business to eat and sleep.

Rupert Hughes, novelist, dramatist, painter, musician, sculptor, scenario writer and motion-picture director, has helped to enshrine the American mother in the hearts of the country, but in his latest Goldwyn photoplay, "Remembrance," which is now having its prerelease at the California Theater, Mother escapes villainy only by an aigret or so. Father, so infrequently sung, is the hero of "Remembrance."

OFF TO HAWAII

Betty Compson, star of "The White Flower," has left for Honolulu, together with Edmund Lowe, her leading man, and others of the cast. Julia Crawford Ivers, author and director, has already preceded them to the tropic location. The company will be gone for some time, because the picture is to be himed largely in and about Hawaii.

"BROADWAY ROSE"

JAZZ AND PATHOS MINGLE IN MAE MURRAY FILM

By Edwin Schallert

The anti-Cinderella propaganda has started. In "Broadway Rose," this week at Loew's State Theater, Prince Charming fails to claim the lady with the golden slipper.

We must confess that it looked awfully bleak, too, for Cindy for a while. She got an icy throwdown from Prince Charming's family, and then he himself turned nasty. But in the end, of course, the country lover came to the rescue, and—

They lived happily ever after.

"Broadway Rose." It's a pretty name. And there's a song written about it. And the title and the role of the dancer fit Miss Murray like the gazelle's gloves. And you're sure ti like a lot of it, if you're one of the Murray fans, and they, just now, are legion. But—

I wonder.

It's much more serious than usual is this latest Murray picture. It has none of the jazz of "Fascination" or "Peacock Alley."

No.

In fact, it's a sort of revisioning of "On with the Dance"—plus a bit of "Everywomen."

And while the climax affords Miss Murray just the best chance in the world to show what she can do in acting, and she certainly can act, looking something like a Leslie Carter all the while—

The story as a whole isn't quite up to the tempo of this peppful screen star.

The start of the picture is especially slow. The prologue in colors, like a pousse cafe, is lovely, of course, but the opening sequences of the main story seem minus their usual thrill.

It takes quite a while before Miss Murray can turn loose any of her tricks. In fact, not until Rosalie goes down to the country to visit her family do we get that sparkle and vivaciousness which are so characteristic of this star.

After this—well there are spots of gladness and spots of pathos, joyously intermingled. The pathos is deep enough to be really touching, and to excite all your sympathy for the heroine in her pitiful plight. But in all this, there is an echo of the little Russian dancer's tribulations in "On with the Dance." Miss Murray's acting, however, is apparently growing constantly more clever.

The rich chap whom Broadway Rose marries is a rotter, and you know it. He means well, of course, but he's afraid of losing his dad's millions, and so he finally sacrifices the little dancer whom he has disillusioned. The country boy is going to knock him cold, but Broadway Rose thinks it better to avoid black eyes. At the close we are left to presume that in the interim before she married the faithful country lover, the annulment of the first secret wedding was secured.

Everything that makes a Murray picture a high-tension pageant of radiance is there—gowns, and sets and all. Some of the gowns will make you dizzy for a week.

The cast is chosen with an admirable discretion. Our old friend Monte Blue looks very real as the horse culturist from the Styx. Ray Bloomer capably fills the role of the polo-playing heir to millions. Alma Tell offers a society cat with snaky eyes and even more snaky disposition. Charles Lane, Mary Turner Gordon and others are present.

Ina Anson dances in an atmospheric prologue.

IN SECOND WEEK

"The Fast Mail," William Fox photoplay thriller, is now in its second week at the Alhambra. This picture operates on the general lines of a Kansas tornado, traveling at the speed its name suggests, and when all is said and done, is of interest to every thrill hunter. It is melodrama, with its central scene a terrifying race, automobile against train, with the hero on board "The Fast Mail," the villain in the machine, each of the two men bent on reaching Vicksburg first and, once there, battling for their lives over the prostrate body of the girl.

PATRIOTIC EDUCATION IS SOUGHT

"Liberty Bell" Says Many Americans Are Ignorant of National Anthem

Yesterday afternoon a man with a banjo and a woman with a violin stood on Main street playing snatches of old-time songs for the pleasure of passers-by. An elderly woman stopped, dropped a nickel in the collection cup and asked:

"Can you play the national anthem?"

The musicians immediately struck up "Dixie" and the woman, together with other auditors, applauded.

In the October number of the Liberty Bell, official organ of the Society, Sons of the Revolution, State of California, Alan P. Gilmour has an article on "Our National Anthem," in which he shows that the air to "God Save the King" is mistaken by many persons for the national anthem. The author pleads for the inauguration of a campaign to educate the public to the fact that Americans are not expected to stand during the rendition of any patriotic song except "The Star Spangled Banner."

The last Liberty Bell is one of the most complete numbers of that periodical ever issued by the California Sons of the Revolution, being filled with many excellent features, including the first complete history concerning the patriotic societies commemorating the Revolutionary War.

The publication of this history answers for the first time many questions that people have asked as to the differences in the societies, and which are the oldest organizations.

Among other features of the October Liberty Bell is an article by Miss Susan C. Ott, head of the reference department of the Los Angeles public library, showing that the library of the California Sons of the Revolution is one of the best libraries of its kind in America.

MAKE IMPORTANT EUROPEAN DEAL

DISTRIBUTION OF "OLIVER TWIST" ARRANGED ON WORLD-WIDE SCALE

With the closing of a world-wide distribution arrangement between Sol Lesser and Associated First National Pictures, Inc., for Jackie Coogan's latest super-production "Oliver Twist," and with the sailing for Europe this week of Bruce Johnson, manager of the foreign department for First National, a new and bright light has been focused on the Pacific Coast production colony.

According to Johnson, Associated First National will establish a big chain of exchanges throughout every country of Europe. Higher and better American-made First National attractions will hereafter invade Europe and all negatives made for American products will be duplicated for those on foreign shores. This means that only the highest class negatives will be considered for the foreign trade.

"On each and every production made in Hollywood and Los Angeles, two cameras must grind—one for the American print, the other for the European prints, which means that practically the same negative will be made for America and Europe.

In addition to being one of the largest American distribution deals for Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist," Lesser has closed arrangements for what is considered the biggest foreign deal ever entered into by First National for a single production.

BOY VIOLINIST IS HIT OF CONCERT

Max Epstein, a 10-year-old Russian boy, nearly stopped the Grauman concert yesterday morning and his heart must have thrilled with the sound of the prolonged applause. His first number, "Zigeunerweisen," by Sarasate, was followed by "Yankee Doodle," variations, and as still another encore was demanded, he played "Perpetuum Mobile," a magnificent test for any violinist. So great was the welcome accorded him that he will be featured on the daily program during the entire week.

Swiss yodlers—Fritz Zimmermann, tenor, and Mme. Marcelle Grandville, soprano—presenting songs and yodels were also enthusiastically received.

An ensemble number, with Henry Murtagh at the piano, Rene Hemery and M. Amsterdam, violins; Victor Young, viola; M. G. Elkoff, 'cello, and A. Larala, bass, was given with finish and feeling Melba French Barr proved herself worthy of her applause by her rendition of the Ballatella from "Pagliacci." Her encore was Cadman's lovely song, "The Heart of Her. Myrtle Huber, another soprano pleased with "For All Eternity," by Mascheron, and "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." Richard Calles delighted with 'cello solos, playing "Berceuse," by Godard, and "Caprice," by Wendel.

"HUMAN HEARTS" IS AGAIN SHOWING

"Human Hearts," opened its return engagement at the Superba Theater yesterday to large audiences.

The story concerns a son who married against his father's wishes, and who goes to prison to shield his wife from a murder charge. How the wrong is righted through his years of suffering, forms a theme of human appeal and genuine dramatic moment.

House Peters gives a convincing portrayal of Tom Logan, the son, while others in the cast who contribute to the success of the story are: Russell Simpson, George Hackathorne, Mary Philbin, Gertrude Claire and Edith Hallor.

SHERLOCK WILL SHOW

Sherlock Holmes, the famous character of Conan Doyle, comes to the California screen in a new Goldwyn production as soon as the completed version of the feature leaves the cutting room. One of America's finest character actors, Mr. John Barrymore, plays the lead in the great detective story, and is said to give to the screen a new angle on this famous stage person.

A NEW COMEDIAN

Stan Laurel Makes Travesty for Metro

A new comedian star, Stan Laurel, has been added to the Metro forces. He has already completed four pictures for Amalgamated productions, which will be released by Metro, and is now working on his fifth which is titled "Mud and Sand." This new comedy is a travesty on "Blood and Sand." Gil Pratt is directing.

Mr. Laurel's first comedy "The Egg" is now ready for release and will be followed by "The Week-End Party," "The Pest" and "The Dumbbell," all of which have been completed.

The new Metro star is an Englishman. He made his debut in the United States as a leading member of the cast for "A Night in a London Music Hall," which also featured Charlie Chaplin. He has been in pictures for several years, having appeared with Larry Semon and other comedy stars.

In "Mud and Sand," Mr. Laurel plays the role of Rhubarb Vaseline. Other members of the cast include Julia Leonard as Carmel, Mae Laurel as La Paloma, Leona Anderson as Filet of Sole, Sam Kaufman as Humidor and Wheeler Dryden as Cuspidor.

UNLAWFUL MEETING

Wampas "Riot" will be Laugh on Editors

Dramatic editors will be laughed at by experts at the Wampas Riot, to be held at Universal City Wednesday night.

The Wampas Riot has been so designated by Arch Reeve, president, because it will be an unlawful assemblage; the penalty for laughing at dramatic editors being unusually severe on press agents.

As director-general of special events for the Wampas, Malcolm Stuart Boylan has signed up a book of talent to speed up the show.

Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, featured comedians, will stage their celebrated tramp act; Hyman Binsky, the diminutive Jewish merry-maker will appear in a surprise act and Lew Sargent, the laugh-gathering messenger boy of Universal comedies will be the wing-footed courier of the evening. A half dozen novelty features will be "sprung" on the guests.

The invitation committee has sent out formal invitations to newspaper and magazine friends of the Wampas and a press gang will be sent out on the night of the riot to shanghai any of the fraternity in whose knees weakness has set in.

The M.P.A., the New York parent organization of the W.M.P.A., is sending its newly elected president, John C. Flinn, to attend the affair.

IT ALSO MOVES

Looking away for the moment from the spectacular features of the newest De Mille achievement "Manslaughter," at Grauman's Rialto, its reproduction of decadent Rome under the Caesars, its lavishness displayed in the cabaret scenes, and the opulence suggestive of the manner in which the idle rich live—looking away from all these typically De Mille effects, there is still as direct action as has graced the screen in many a day. The picture moves, and by moving holds the attention through a chain of events, dramatic, perhaps impossible, but which points a moral nothwithstanding.

The cast includes Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy, Lois Wilson, John Miltern, George Fawcett, Julia Faye, Jack Moker, Samson Ferguson and numerous others.

She's a Mad Hatter

Louise Fazenda, who is playing opposite Harry Myers as comedy heavy in "The Beautiful and Damned," under production at the Warner Brothers Studios, has two hobbies that she declares are as different as day is from night. One is the collection of antiques, especially brasses, and the other is the making of al her own hats.

"Yes, I'm a mad hatter," she explained. "I never studied millinery as a science and as I couldn't afford all the hats I wanted, I learned how to make them myself. How? Simply by tearing a hat to pieces and putting it together again as nearly as possible the way it was done before."

Apes Houdini

Word comes from Paris that a man named Marshall was arrested there, received a six months imprisonment and a five-year exile sentence on a charge of "special vagabondage." This man fraudulently represented himself to be Houdini and is causing the original Houdini, now in America, no little annoyance and embarrassment.

SOAP MAKERS TRIUMPH

A six-run rally in the fifth inning won for the White King Soap Company ball squad over the Renshaw, Jones and Sutton nine, 9 to 7, in the two squad's game at the White Sox Park yesterday. The game was slow and not many thrilling plays were included in it.

Campbell, the White Kings' third baseman slammed out a home run that added some pep to the proceedings. Score:

DYE WORKS ON TOP

"Candy" Jones, who hurled for the Los Angeles Dye Works yesterday, pulled a comeback and dished out a 7 to 4 win for his club over the New Method Sewing Machine Company nine at Ross-Snyder Field, number one. Jones allowed but eight hits and had the opposition blanked for the first six innings.

Ainsmith, the shortstop for the winners, had a nice day at the bat and drove out three safe swats in five attempts. Score:

OILERS ON RAMPAGE

The West Coast Oil Company ball club sluggers went on a rampage and laced out sixteen hits, which accounted for twelve runs and a 12 to 5 victory over the V. M. Ira Furniture Company ball tossers in a game played at Olinda yesterday.

Duarte, Oilers' pitcher, had all of the Furniture lads baffled by his slants except Worth, Ira left fielder, who slammed out four hits out of five times up. The West Coast Oil Company nine made all of its runs in the first five innings. Score:

EAGLE ROCK PREVAILS

Eagle Rock won its first Greater Southern California Baseball Association game on it's own field yesterday by trouncing the Latin Cubs, 6 to 3. The hitting in the game was conspicuous by its lack of it. There were only six safeties all told.

Eagle Rock swatters had only two hits but made them count for six runs while the Cubs annexed four hits. Both sides fielded loosely. Score:

Beverly Turkey Day Race is Next Classic

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FRESNO, Oct. 1.—The Cotati Speedway is to hold a five-cornered match race on October 29, according to a statement given out at noon today by J. Francis O'Connor, president of the Northern California Speedway, after a conference with drivers and race track officials.

The five speedway stars whose names were attached to the match race agreement were all winners of one or more races this year, and their names as given to the press are as follows: Bennett Hill, who drove his Miller motor car into first place in the 150-mile race here yesterday; Jimmy Murphy, who won the Indianapolis classic this year, as well as events at Tacoma, Uniontown, Los Angeles and Fresno; Tommy Milton, 1921 speedway champion, second place winner here yesterday and first place man at the Kansas City meet last month; Harry Harts, third place man in yesterday's race and winner of the San Carlos race last spring, and Frank Elliott, who by his sensational driving took first honors at the last Cotati race.

In connection with this match race, which will be for the 100-mile distance, O'Connor expects to hold a stock car race. Speedway officials and racing drivers are today enthusiastic over the outlook for the racing game in California. They point out that the race here of yesterday was the best attended of any automobile event ever held in this territory and use that as the basis for their argument that interest in the sport is growing with the public.

The race itself also was very satisfactory, it being generally agreed that it was one of the most interesting ever held on a California speedway. The speed of Bennett Hill's Miller car and the clever driving of Tommy Milton to a sensational finish, only a scant few yards behind the winner for second place, was easily the feature of the day. Harry Harts came through in good style also and is coming to increasing favor with the fans.

The next national championship event is the Turkey Day race at Los Angeles, and Manager A. M. Young of the southern speedway reports that the entry list this year will be the fastest and best ever signed up for a Beverly event.

HOME-CRAFT FESTIVAL IS ANNOUNCED

Highland Park Association Promises Manifold Sights and Novel Features

Developing a statistics complex, Secretary Ogle of the Greater Highland Park Association, yesterday hurled a barrage of figures in all directions in an attempt to convey the magnitude of "the biggest event in Highland Park," to take his word for it.

The event is the Home-Craft Festival, which will hold forth at the Arroyo Seco playground from the 24th to 28th inst. Now for the statistics:

Exhibitors have 20,000 square feet of space.

Placed end to end (the favorite device of demon statisticians) the exhibits would reach from Sycamore Grove to the Arroyo Seco Library.

The dancing pavilion has a 14,000 square foot area. In the bandstand seventy-five pieces will be accommodated.

The stage to be erected will be 50x30 feet, with an extreme height of 23 feet.

Twenty-five thousand — count 'em—feet of lumber will be used in construction work.

Thirty-two thousand watts of light will illuminate the grounds.

Seventy-five palms, 4000 yards of bunting, ten-foot spotlights are other items. In fact, there is every indication that the Home-craft Festival will be Highland Park's biggest event. Special features, such as a 140-piece band concert, a witch parade, an American Legion night and others will be held. The complete program, Secretary Ogle announces, will be given out later.

HIGHWAY TO GOODNESS

BY REV. HENRY STAUFFER,
Formerly Pastor Park Congregational Church

More important than the question: "How Can I Win Success?" and "How Can I Win Happiness?" is this, "How Can I Achieve Goodness?"

For, he who wins goodness thereby achieves real success and enduring happiness. There are three steps that lead to the higher goodness—admiration, faith and imitation. These are the steps that lead to the finest character, lasting thrones of influence and happiness.

First of all in time and importance is the question of what a man most appreciates and admires. He who would become good must know goodness when he sees it, and he must admire it as the most precious thing to be gained in this life.

The reason why many men today are sacrificing health and character in their struggle to get rich, is because the dollar has become almighty to them. It seems to them the best and the biggest thing in all the world. Whenever the second best seems to a man to be the best, he is on the downward road; and nothing in this world can save him unless his blind eyes can be opened to the truth.

A religious awakening takes place when a man begins to see as first those things which by nature are of chief importance.

Because of what he is in himself and because of his matchless moral achievements in the past, Jesus has come to be the ideal of goodness for all mankind. There is something awesome in the high place He holds in the love and esteem of the people who count for most in every civilized land today. To countless millions He has become the perennial source of light, inspiration to noble achievement and comfort. They feel themselves bound to Him by the strongest, tenderest ties of loyalty. In His moral courage, unerring spiritual insight, compassion for the suffering, forgiveness toward His enemies and His will to sacrifice He reached the limit, and set the moral standards for all time. Beyond Him human imagination cannot go. Does this supreme expression of goodness arouse in you feelings of reverence and admiration? If so, there is hope for you. But I know not what can be done to help him to whom good seems evil and evil seems good.

Let no man lose heart because the fair ideals of his youth have long since faded from his vision, nor because he has grievously sinned. There still remains life in any man who knows goodness when he sees it and who believes that it is possible for him.

What a man really admires, that he is already becoming. Unfortunately, there is in many men a yellow streak of fatalism that leads them to the fixed conclusion that the best things in life are not for them.

If you admire a clean, unselfish life and hate yourself for being impure and self-centered, you have in you this moment the germs of the higher goodness awaiting expression in fitting speech and conduct.

But admiration alone cannot save a man. He that would achieve goodness must believe that Jesus is the way to that goodness, and must choose that way for himself. Let us try to disinfect this most vital subject of pious cant, formalism and sectarianism and look at it in the dry, clear light of reason and common sense. Let us approach this matter of salvation with the simplicity and open-mindedness of the child that is seeking to know the best way of living.

If history teaches anything it teaches that vastly more lost men have been vitalized and made new by faith in Jesus than by secular education, philosophy and all other means combined.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS INCREASE

Imports and Exports Here Show Remarkable Growth During September

A new record in receipts of the customs service for the month of September was made last month, when nearly twice as much money was taken in as during the same month last year.

Collector Schwaebe of the customs service announced Saturday night that receipts for September amounted to $210,128.84, as compared with $112,773.75, or an increase of almost 100 per cent over September last year. The imports were $1,475,037 for last month, and but $944,014 in September a year ago.

Exports mounted up to $1,868,000, while those of September, 1921, were but $1,184,013.

The shipments to Hawaii were $589,599; to Alaska, $40,282, and Porto Rico $1128.

A remarkable expansion of business is mirrored in the September collections of Internal Revenue Collector Goodcell, the figures being a grand total of $7,657,391.02, of which $6,419,514.33 was for income taxes, and the balance on account of miscellaneous taxes.

The September collections alone were 300 per cent greater than the total receipts for the entire year 1916.

They were larger than the combined total receipts of New Mexico, Nevada and Arizona for the whole fiscal year 1922, ending June 30, last.

The September receipts of the Los Angeles postoffice marked the upward trend of business in Federal circles. The receipts for the month that closed yesterday amounted to $444,681.53, as compared with $373,076.81 for the corresponding month of 1921. The increase was $74,604.71, or 19.19 per cent over September of last year, which was an increase of 16.75 over September, 1920.

There has been a constant increase in the receipts every month of the present year, as compared with the corresponding periods of last year. There is no doubt that the total for the calendar year closing December 31, will be far in excess of $5,000,000.

New Pay Scale for Naval Men Received Here

Changes in the pay allowances of enlisted men of the Navy were announced in a new Bureau of Navigation circular received on the flagship California yesterday. Men serving on submarines still retain their allowances for actual underwater work. All other transient additions to pay, however, are abolished by the new manual circular.

Sailors in the submarine crews of the Pacific Fleet will receive $1.30 per hour additional pay for diving, based on actual time so employed under water; qualified submarine men will receive bonuses of $1 per day for any part of which they have been submerged; while all enlisted men serving on submarines will receive an additional $5 per month.

Gun pointers and gun captains, under the new scale, will receive additional pay allowances of from $3 to $5 per month, according to their proficiency, while expert riflemen and sharpshooters will also receive additional pay.

Under the old pay allowance bill enlisted men also received additional compensation for good conduct medals, seaman gunners certificates of qualification and petty officers certificates. Under the new ruling, however, they will receive the $1 per month for medals of honor, distinguished service medals and Navy crosses only.

Santa Monica Men Jailed as Booze Makers

Arrested on a charge of violating the liquor laws, Carl Forry and C. H. McClain were taken into custody yesterday at 3109 Main street, Santa Monica, three gallons of liquor being found in their possession, the officers said. In the room also were discovered two copper tanks of ten-gallons capacity, the tanks being so constructed that they would fit nicely into a large suitcase. A small quantity of liquor was also found at the headquarters of McClain at the Metropole Hotel.

Bail was fixed at $500 each, failing to produce which the men were lodged in the Santa Monica Jail. The arrests were made by Sergts. William Sandlin and Ben Carrillo and Detective Larry Belger.

The Handkerchief's History

The pocket handkerchief was first known as "kerchief"—couvre-chef—a covering for the head; then it became handkerchief, a covering for the head carried in the hand; and at last pocket handkerchief, a covering for the head held in the hand and kept in the pocket.

Baking Powder—
that's the big thing in successful baking

It determines failure or success in baking, more than any other ingredient.

It is pure: containing only such ingredients as have been officially approved by U. S. Food Authorities.

Within the Calumet factories — the largest and most sanitary on earth—hundreds of skilled workers clad in white are busily engaged in producing the baking powder that is used by millions. Human hands never touch it. Its sale is 2½ times as much as that of any other brand. Pure in the making—pure in the baking.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 ounces. Some baking powders come in 12 ounces instead of 16 ounce cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

SERMONS OF SENSE SEEM WASTED ON WORLDLINGS

Ministers Explain Uselessness of Present-Day Materialistic Selfishness

Socrates, walking leisurely through a market place in a city of Greece, observing the excitement and feverish activities of the buyers and sellers, turned to his companion, smiled and remarked: "There are so many things in the world that I do not need!" Judging by the speech and actions of the majority of men and women of today, one forms the impression that the heart of humanity is attached altogether to material wealth and the so-called pleasures of the senses.

"All the labor of man is for his mouth, yet the appetite is not filled," said Solomon. A wise man of a later day declared: "There is no permanence nor peace in sensation," and the last words of a sage who lived 2500 years ago were: "Beware the illusion of matter—all compounds are perishable."

Yet men continue to seek the riches that take wings, to strive for things and conditions that change and pass, to pluck from the garden of materialism those blossoms that bloom only for a day and leave the soul hungry for the intangible beauty of the spirit.

From pulpits of Los Angeles churches yesterday pastors pointed to the fact that men cling to the fleeting things of life only because they have not yet found the higher truth. The one great need of the world, it was pointed out, is the effort on the part of men to reach the consciousness of God's eternal presence. Excerpts from some of the sermons preached yesterday are printed below:

TELLS CURE FOR WORLD'S UNREST

"The Need of God" was the subject of a sermon by Rev. Edgar Fay Daugherty at the First Christian Church last night. Mr. Daugherty's discourse, in part, was as follows:

"If the need of God in human lives can be persistently and adequately met, all of life's other needs will be minor. The wealth and health and strength, contentment and hope of souls is not in possessions, nor labors nor pleasures, but in the bonds and bands that link them up with God. The world's unrest, unhappiness, moral ills and spiritual sloth, no less than its intellectual chaos, all have one secret, and that is the simple secret of alienation from God. Ignorance of His truth and will, indifference to His claims and plans, the absence of stalwart conviction on His nearness to and sympathy with human need and aspiration, explain our upheaved, cross-purposed world of the passing hour.

"Bring society around to where it can look at things as they are through the eyes of Jesus Christ. Who was God in human flesh, and the doubts, the despairs, throttling perplexing, baffling humanity will ease in their strain on human strength; a world of more faith, love and home, a world where the strength of hate and bitterness would wane, where the might of gentleness and kindness in service and constructive loyalties would increasingly mount.

"The need of God may be met by quietude. The sick room must have it or the patient fares like—and the world is a sick room. The obvious thing of our times is not freak modes of dancing, diaphanous gowns, or slit trousers, but the multitudinous and incessant variety of superfluous, clamorous noises, the din of which tempts many to despair. Though the violin be a Stradivarius, its strings must be occasionally relaxed or its music will fail; and, any human life fails to reach its highest ministry if strain and stress are persistent.

"By right and proper action a better acquaintance with God may be had. 'If any man will do His will, he shall know'—is Christianity's supreme challenge and pragmatic test."

PRIEST DENOUNCES KU KLUX KLAN

A scathing arraignment against the so-called K.K.K., which he said is sworn to exterminate all Catholics, was made by Rev. James S. O'Neill, pastor of the Holy Family Church at Glendale, in a sermon at that church yesterday. Speaking on "The Modern Character-Assassin," Fr. O'Neill said in part:

"The ancient Coliseum, with the wild and savage beasts tearing human beings to pieces was not half so cruel as the modern character assassin. The man or woman who, through envy, hatred or malice, slays the devil to creep into his heart and tries to tear down and belittle the good work that others more worthy are striving to accomplish—if we have such in our midst—please God they are very few.

"Now, there is only one way to put an end to the ravages of this monster, one way for decent, self-respecting people to draw the teeth of this dragon, called slander. And the way is explained in the one magic word, 'Columbianism.' Do your hear me? 'Columbianism.' I refer to that body of men, 600,000 strong, who have taken the oath of allegiance to the church and State; the brave knights, who are not afraid to declare their Catholicity. The men who have promised to bear no malice and fight all slander; to protect the Catholic home and all Catholic women and children; to try and live in peace and unity with all their neighbors and who are bound in duty to love and honor the church.

"There is only one fault with true Columbianism. It is the fault of modesty. Its principles are not cried out from the housetops. But they should be, for then the world at large would better understand what Columbianism stands for. Take a look at the war record of the Order. Everybody made happy. Everything free! A 100 per cent record. A clean record. Then again glance at the big brother movement. Do you know that in Los Angeles alone last year 275 young Catholic boys, who were convicted of temperamental crimes, stood ready to be sentenced before the judge, and be incarcerated in prison for long terms, were saved by the Big Brothers of the Knights of Columbus?

"Take again the invidious attempt to throttle and exterminate the parochial schools through legislation. Columbianism has taken up the fight; has accepted the challenge and already put a stop to this invidious movement against the Catholic childhood of America.

"And now another danger threatens, the so-called K.K.K. Let me ask you men of this parish, how you would feel right here and now, if you did not have the comforting knowledge that for every sworn enemy of Catholicism in this secret order, that swears to exterminate all Catholics, we have ten Knights of Columbus, staunch and true, ever ready to fight for you, your homes, and your dear ones, and the privilege of worshiping God in your own way? Would you sleep as easily at night? I say you would not. And I say also it is the bounden duty of every practical Catholic gentleman to join the Knights of Columbus, and hence become an active protector of the faith."

TRUNDLE SCORES ARMENIA'S FOES

Rev. Dan Amos Trundle, executive secretary of the National Justice to Armenia Society, discussed America's duty in the Near East, in a sermon last night at the Calvary Presbyterian Church of South Pasadena. Mr. Trundle spoke in part, as follows:

"Evidently there are Americans who have become so involved in Turkish interests as to prove double traitors, for they have not only betrayed the Armenians and other persecuted peoples in the Ottoman Empire, but they have shamelessly betrayed American ideals. Many of them, not satisfied with this villainy, have even tried to put over Turkish propaganda through the American press. Could you imagine descendants of the worthy sires of Yorktown, Gettysburg or San Juan Hill, so far losing the imperishable honor of these heroes as to attempt a defense of the human mad dog known as the Turk? The dark background of their scoundrelism is relieved, however, by the matchless heroism of scores of Americans who have laid down their lives in martyrdom with these persecuted people who are strangers to treachery or disloyalty.

"Never in all our history has the United States had such a glorious opportunity to assume the moral, constructive leadership of the world. We have no option but to choose between England, in her magnificent courage, and the beastly Turk. Senator Williams said a few days ago in the Senate, 'The only thing that is not rotten and cannot rot, is human sentiment!' True, brave words, but for America to insist upon being neutral is to confess that even human sentiment has rotted in the United States.

"All honor to Secretary Hughes for words of great encouragement in this crisis. To fail now is not only to basely betray Allies who were true to us, but to reveal the sad fact that we have lost the soul of honor. We must and will be true to the high ideals of the past. We cannot be content to allow civilization to fight with her back to the wall, while we, like craven cowards and arrant knaves, not only shirk our responsibility, but acquiesce in the cold-blooded program of profiteering upon the struggle, as hundreds of our citizens will, if we remain inactive. Shall we roam the world in search of gold and be indifferent to the good of the world? 'You may roll the stone to the mouth of the sepulcher, but you cannot entomb righteousness.' Truth will conquer. We must act now or be branded with the infamy of heartlessness, greed, cowardice and criminal indifference. May God give us the inspiration of a heavenly task!"

DR. HELMS PRAISES MOZART'S GENIUS

"An eloquent sermon on the life, genius and character of Mozart was preached yesterday by Dr. E. E. Helms at the First Methodist Church. Excerpts from the sermon follow:

"When you have read the Life of Mozart you are going to have many things borne into your soul. He was poor. Many a night he and the wife and five babies cried themselves to sleep without a crust. Genius and gold go not together oft. Greatness is ever poor. The Master had nowhere to lay His head. He borrowed a boat from which to preach, a coin to pay his tax, a cross on which to die, a tomb in which to lie.

"Also, he was very pure. Poverty and purity are not always handmaidens. He was incapable of an impure thought. His was a transparent soul, a white soul. He was among those that ascended into the hill of the Lord, for he had clean hands and a pure heart. He was prayerful. His greatest works are religious. He wrote much on his knees. His tears often blotted his note sheets. He declares that often when composing he saw the Heavens opened. All things are possible to him who prays and perseveres.

"Mozart was persevering. Through poverty, through weakness, through a dozen handicaps he persevered. All his life he was a sick man. At the end, so sick and slowly dying, he persevered at his great Requiem and literally finished it on his coffin cover. His feet never faltered and his faith never failed."

PASTOR SAYS FAITH MAKES FOR HEALTH

Dr. Herbert Booth Smith of Immanuel Presbyterian Church preached yesterday on the theme "Healing." The discourse in part was as follows:

"Jesus of Nazareth did not work in defiance of all laws and system and method, but worked in accordance with law—higher laws, perhaps, than we can fully understand, but laws just the same.

"Bishop Brent has pointed out that prayer, which is an appeal to the great Source of Life to release His saving health in our direction, is at the same time the opening up of our very being for the reception of the divine aid and the whole procedure is a higher form of psychic effort than suggestion or auto-suggestion on which the mental healer dwells. Prayer does not look to an impersonal ideal such as the 'Omnipresent Wisdom' but to a healthful, forceful Personality; and God can do His best to the object of His love when the latter adopts a responsive and co-operative attitude. We know that fear and anxiety are toxic agents, actually poisoning the system by their reactions; while love and faith and trust in a heavenly Father's care are conducive to health."

SIN IS CALLED MORBID INVENTION

"I challenge the very conception of 'sin.' The word itself is poisonous. It starts thought and faith off in the wrong direction. It assumes an evil, objective entity, which torments the mind, dazes the heart, and puts God in a dilemma from which no apology can extricate him. It creates 'mystery,' where there is clarity and simplicity. The case is this: Man, free to choose his way, but ignorant, unbalanced, highly suggestible and plastic, blunders and 'gets off on the wrong foot.' The common assumption is that he is perverse, loves evil, deliberately violates his conscience. This may sometimes happen, but usually he acts from motives of self-interest, which are themselves not evil, and just misses his aim. The habit or practice of such mistakes, no doubt, produces a certain momentum in that direction, which may be called a tendency to do wrong; and this drift may be strong enough to make its way against the protest of wisdom and the moral sense. But he never becomes a 'sinner,' that is, a determined seeker after false and vicious courses. At the worst, he still maintains a degree of loyalty to better impulses; his character is mixed, and this, with comparatively slight variations, describes the best as well as the worst of mankind.

"These bad choices seem to have been inevitable, or at least entirely natural, under the given circumstances. The alternative was to make man a mere automaton, a register of outside and compulsory impressions. The Creator thought it would pay in the long run to give man rein and let him find out by experience and education that nothing but right doing fits his nature. Thus we are at school, or in the crucible, trying every way, stumbling painfully along, but certain at last to find equilibrium and peace in the free election of the 'narrow way,' the one fit way of life."

POINTS TO HOME AS BEST SCHOOL

Rabbi E. F. Magnin spoke on "The Needs of the Child," in his address before the congregation of Temple B'nai B'rith Friday evening. Dr. Magnin said in part:

"A child is neither a novelty nor a play toy. It is a living, breathing, pulsating, impressionable bit of humanity, living in a mental domain all its own and storing away impressions that will make it worth while or ruin its career in years to come. For 'the child is father of the man' and the civilization of tomorrow will be determined by the children of today. The greatest problem of a democracy is the education of its children, yet we make very few inducements for the teaching profession to receive the best talent.

"Provision must be made for the religious and moral influence of the child. The religious school and church or synagogue may accomplish this in part but it can do nothing without the co-operation of the home. A child will not believe anything to be wrong that it sees its parents do and will naturally repeat what they say and accept their interpretation and philosophy of life. Moral education, like charity, should begin at home."

CHURCHES AS SAFETY VALVES FOR SOCIETY

"Churches and Preachers" was the subject of a sermon preached last night by Dr. Bruce Brown at the South Park Christian Church. In part, Dr. Brown said: "It is evident that somebody must be in the church or there would be no church. If you have a right to stay out we all have.

"A mighty lot of people talk about the church having no influence who never have the courage to move out of the sight of one.

"In Anaheim's soggiest and groggiest days all her advertising matter boasted of her churches and schools, never of the number of her saloons.

"There are lots of places where there are no churches. Why don't some of the infidels go there to live? They're scared to, that's the reason.

"The only ones who gladly go to make their homes where there are no churches are the missionaries.

"It is mighty mean and stingy of a man to let the church stand between his home and every danger and then never pay a cent for its support.

"Here is a rule that holds good in every large city in America. The more preachers a city has in proportion to its population the fewer policemen it has.

"Which is cheaper, one preacher to keep your boy out of jail or five policemen to put him in?

"Let 100 Protestant churches be closed in Los Angeles and you would need more than 500 new policemen to keep the equilibrium."

LOVE OF GOD BUILT ON SELF-RESPECT

Dr. W. E. Tilroe preached at the Pico Heights Methodist Church yesterday on "A Personal Religion." He said in part:

"The last thing men forget is the personal. The crusade against selfishness is often overdone. Selfishness is usually but a proper self-respect. We must love ourselves to love our neighbors. We love God by the measure of our own mind, soul and strength.

"The family is built around the amazing provision that the neighbors are all dead. There are only two people on earth that really count. Three-fourths of human reading is the literature of the soul.

"There is little more doubtful under the sun than the fashion in which men make religion a matter of ritual service, or performance. Religion is a matter of folks. God and the neighbors are the things worth while. That they get on together is religion. The Bible is the book of God for men. The heavens and the earth are built of God for men, so far as we know. Sunday is the Lord's Day for the good of men. The Church is building of the Lord and the gates of hell will therefore not prevail."

PASTOR DISCUSSES GREATEST MIRACLE

Dr. W. E. McCulloch, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church, preached yesterday from the text, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ." He said in part: "When Paul wrote to a little company of people in the mighty world capital of Rome, he declared that he was not ashamed of the Gospel. No man need be ashamed of the mightiest regenerating spiritual force ever experienced by the sons of men. Henry Drummond said, 'I believe in miracles because I have seen them.' There are indeed innumerable modern miracles of grace. There are transformations of heart and life more marvelous than any boasted achievements of science. There are reformations and reconstructions of character over which the angels surely rejoice. Still the Gospel is the dynamic of God to every human soul that yields trustfully and lovingly to the Savior and follows Him."

SKY BLUE MONDAY

Letters

Sky-Blue Monday
October 2, 1922

Good Morning, Mr. Barnes:—

Anything new this morning?

Of course there's always something "new."

But the question---what prompts it? Interest or curiosity? Let's be kind and credit it to interest.

"Interest and fear are the two levers by which men are moved," said Napoleon.

Interest is the big lever in advertising and publicity.

If you'd stop and think a moment you'd realize that it would take but very little effort to stir up even more interest in your business and your methods with some systematic, direct-by-mail advertising.

The interest is already there---all you've got to do is to stir it up.

We have a staff most competent to help you. We write, plan, design, illustrate, print, bind---do everything that a modern printing plant should do---and do these things well.

Expense? No! Investment? Yes! A very good investment, bringing back principal and interest by aroused interest and increased business.

Sunt Crabbill

THRIFTY ELEPHANT

Pachyderm in London Zoo Saves Pennies Given by Children

Indarini, the big Indian elephant which carries children at the London Zoological Gardens, is improving in grace and wisdom under the tuition of her new mahout—Syed Ali.

First, Syed Ali taught her to be docile and obey orders. She had been on strike for a year, during which time she ate her head off and idled because she did not approve the new steel mounting ladder.

Next Syed Ali taught her to be industrious and work for her living. (She can earn $1500 a year plying for hire in the gardens.)

Nearly every child in the zoo clasps one or two round, flat brown things (pennies) in a fat little fist. These coins are not good to eat, but they help to protect a deserving elephant against the hardships of old age. Indarini delicately accepts these if offered, or picks them up from the ground when they are dropped.

Buns and biscuits are not Indarini's immediate needs are never passed over to the hout.—[London Correspondence New York World.

Greasing the Trolley Wire

A number of substantial advantages have been derived from greasing the trolley wire. In the first place, it prevents sparking, which is severe on the eyes of those who happen to be in the vicinity. It also prevents much wear and tear on the wire. The idea of greasing the wire is particularly applicable when applied to electric haulage. One greasing of the wire serves for five or six months.

FRENCH BOY IS WINNER

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOUTH PASADENA, Oct. 1.—Leon Dostert, aged 16, who four years ago was a pathetic French war orphan, befriended and brought to America by an American officer, today stands as the elected cheer leader of an American high school.

America's status as a "Melting Pot" receives additional indorsement through this incident. Four short years and "Frenchy," as he is called, has become so Americanized and popular as to win the votes of his American-born fellow-student of South Pasadena High School.

Dostert, a bedraggled refugee, was found in the war zone of Northern France and brought to South Pasadena by Lieut. Henri St. Pierre, a graduate of South Pasadena High School, but now vice-principal of Venice High School. Dostert is practically a community orphan, as the money to bring him to America was provided by the subscriptions of scores of local citizens who became very much interested in St. Pierre's tales of the bright French boy, the mascot of his outfit overseas.

The newly elected cheer leader has all the enthusiasm of his Gallic blood, it is said, but he still is a bit uncertain in his English and he got a big laugh from the student body recently when in the height of a football rally he earnestly exhorted them to "hell their yeads off."

"Dostert's example has been a wonderful one for our entire personnel," states Superintendent of Schools George C. Bush. "He is putting himself through school by working afternoons and nights, and will finish in three years instead of four, despite the necessity of learning English in addition to his other studies. It's a a splendid case of persistence, pluck and personality."

FATHER IS AWARDED CHILDREN

Court Rules in Man's Favor and Also Grants Divorce

A sobbing child and her mother crying: "She has always been with me," were the concluding feature of the bitter fight of Frances A. Garn and her husband, C. N. Garn of Long Beach, for the custody of their three children in Presiding Judge Willis's court Saturday.

The court gave the children to their father after judging between husband and wife, and believing the story of the father. The eldest child, Maria, clung to her mother, sobbing.

Mr. and Mrs. Garn signed a property settlement in which it was agreed that the father should have the children. His testimony was to the effect that later his wife complained to the Welfare Society that the father was not properly caring for the children. An officer from the society investigated the case and found they were well cared for.

Then the mother is charged with kidnaping two of the children. The father declared that subsequently the wife notified him that if he did not take the children away she would charge him with their board.

Mrs. Garn sued for separate maintenance, Mr. Garn answered with a cross-complaint charging cruelty. One of his charges was that his wife photographed Kathleen, 9 years old, and Harold, 4 years old, in the back yard while they were naked. She admitted it. The pictures were shown in evidence. He also said she was jealous of him and everybody, and that she was quarrelsome. She made charges against his mother, who, she said, was not fit to have the children.

After they separated she notified her husband to take the furniture away, declaring if he did not she would charge storage.

Judge Willis granted Mr. Garn a divorce on his cross-complaint. Attorney Chris Willis, representing Mrs. Garn, says he will take an appeal. Mr. Garn was represented by Attorney R. A. Newell.

YOUTH INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY MACHINE

Aurelo Martinez, aged 19 years, of 407 Ramires street was seriously injured in an accident that occurred on Long Beach Boulevard, near Walnut Park, yesterday afternoon when the motorcycle on which he was riding was struck by an automobile driven by a Japanese whose name was not learned.

According to those who saw the accident, the Japanese chaffeur had swerved his car to one side in order to avoid striking another machine and in doing so ran into the motorcycle. The Japanese was thrown out of his car but was not injured. Martinez sustained a compound fracture of the right leg, several broken ribs and a slight concussion of the brain. He was taken to the Huntington Park Hospital.

WATTS VOTES BONDS FOR GRAMMAR SCHOOL

WATTS, Oct. 1.—The little city of Watts is to spend $48,500 for additional grammar school facilities. The proposition was decided yesterday at an election when 496 voted in favor of a bond issue and only twenty-five opposed it.

The securities will bear 5 per cent interest and will run from one to thirty years.

A new building will be erected in the Tweedy tract from the proceeds of the sale of bonds and the rest of the money will be used to enlarge schools now overcrowded.

MONTEBELLO VOTES BONDS

MONTEBELLO, Sept. 30.—A bond issue in the sum of $200,000 for school purposes met favor at an election held here today. Decision in favor of the issue was practically unanimous as 282 voted for the issue and five opposed it.

Plan Research Work to Kill Plant Enemies

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, Oct. 1.—D. G. Milbraith, Plant Pathologist of the State Department of Agriculture, with headquarters at Sacramento, and Dr. I. C. Jagger, occupying a similar position with the United States Department of Agriculture, are in the valley to take up special problems of plant pathology. "Nematodes" are the special objects of Mr. Milbraith's wrath and he has vowed destruction for them, death by starvation being the peculiar cruelty which he has decided upon. The Nematode is the germ of root diseases which attacks a number of plants.

The State Department of Agriculture has developed a number of legumes which are immune to the pest. Mr. Milbraith urges that these legumes be planted here, thereby accomplishing the twofold purpose of building up the soil fertility and starving out the Nematode.

Dr. Jagger is here to inaugurate a number of experiments to discover the nature and habits of "foot rot," a sort of hoof and mouth disease which affects lettuce. Almost nothing is known of this pest, which manifests itself as a brown affection in the lettuce head.

Dr. Jagger's headquarters are at Chula Vista, and he will endeavor to conduct his experiments here in connection with the work of the Chula Vista station.

GERMAN WOMEN WISH CITIZENSHIP OF OWN

PREPARING TO PETITION REICHSTAG FOR A LAW LIKE AMERICA'S

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—German women plan to ask the Reichstag for legislation similar to the Cable Bill passed recently by Congress, giving American married women independent citizenship.

Frau D. Von Valpau, manager of the German Union of Women's Organizations, a body similar to the American General Federation of Women's Clubs, informed the National Woman's Party in a letter received here today the movement in her country had reached preparation of a petition to the Reichstag.

"As we have learned," the letter said, "your organization possess the bill of the House of Representatives concerning the married women's nationality, we would be grateful to you if you would send us a copy, and are ready on our part to send you a petition to the German Reichstag on the same matter."

FRESNO GROWING

New Telephone Directory Reads For Newest Estimate

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FRESNO, Oct. 1.—Greater Fresno's population jumped 6000 during the last six months, from 67,500 to 73,000, according to estimates based on the semiannual issue of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company's directory. The percentage of increase indicates that Fresno is growing at a rate never before attained, its population doubling every six years. Previous census returns have shown a doubling every ten years.

This increase means the addition of thirty-three persons each day.

NEW Y.M.C.A. FOR SOUTH PASADENA

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOUTH PASADENA, Oct. 1. — After several years of "makeshift," South Pasadena's community Young Men's Christian Association will open permanent and specially equipped quarters Tuesday evening.

The new "Y" supplements the work of the electrically lighted outdoor athletic field which has been a project of the organization for some time. The building taken for "Y" purposes is at 1026 Mission street and is of two stories. A large game room and a reading room are the features of the first floor, while on the second there is a gymnasium, kitchen, clubrooms and dining-room.

The "Hi Y" club, composed of members of high school age, will stage a "housewarming" on Tuesday evening, with a varied program of sports and stunts. Secretary Henderson is in charge of the new structure.

ADJUDGED INSANE

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FRESNO, Oct. 1.—Following the dismissal of a statutory charge, Gust Papitinou was yesterday committed to the State hospital for the insane by Judge S. L. Strother.

Papitinou was found to be insane by a commission of physicians recently, but Judge Strother refused to sign the commitment papers until after a felony charge had been dismissed. During his trial, Papitinou conducted his own defense. He was acquitted on a charge of murderous assault.

GREET FATHER NEPTUNE

Every Member of Liner Apus Crew, Now at Harbor, in "Royal Order of Shellbacks"

Since the days when American clipper ships formed the world's greatest merchant marine the ancient custom of introducing landlubbers to Father Neptune upon the occasion of their first crossing the equator has been one of the romantic touches in a sailorman's life.

But ask six members of the crew of the Struthers & Barry liner Apus, in port from Hongkong and Singapore, just where the romantic side of joining the "Royal Order of Shellbacks" comes in. Now, with the initiation services held on board the Apus while she crossed the equator in the Java Sea recently, every member of the Apus's crew, from Capt. Werner Torarroth down to the galley roustabout, has formally met old Neptune.

SEEK HIDING PLACES

The Apus was en route from Zamboanga, Philippines, to Soerabala, Java, at the time. As she neared the equator news of the approaching festivities reached the ears of those members of the crew who had not previously crossed the line, and, of course, were scheduled to be the victims of the ceremonies. A wild scramble for hiding places in all parts of the 9000-ton vessel followed.

Some of the unfortunates stowed away in lifeboats, in the bilges, the shaft alley, crow's nest, in the forepeak, and even hung to the inside of ventilators in an effort to escape. But they all were rounded up and the service began. The cast of actors in the ceremony was:

Father Neptune—Harry Buckley, chief officer.

Mrs. Neptune—James Maude, able seaman.

Barber—"Chips" Brandt, carpenter.

Policeman — George Boehme, boatswain.

CEREMONY BEGUN

The innocent victims were first given a massage, shampoo, mouth, ear and eye wash in an appetizing mixture of Stockholm tar, fish oil, graphite, Albany grease, bilge water and crude oil. Then they were shaved with a wooden razor. Next the initiates were stripped to the waist, given the regulation coat of war paint in green, red and buff, after which they were placed, blindfolded on a trip chair, then dumped into a canvas tank of sea water.

Father Neptune then dragged each of the victims from where they floundered, blinded and choking and forced them to crawl through a small ventilator against a full stream of salt water shot into the upper end from a fire hose. Those who sought to hide were given a double dose. Second Officer Lawrence A. Peterson was painted from head to foot with a beautiful coat of tar for being a ship's officer without being a member of the Royal Order of Shellbacks.

Capt. Tornroth reported upon reaching Los Angeles Harbor that the ship's supply of kerosene, soap, gasoline, turpentine, sand and other cleansing agencies was entirely exhausted in the three weeks' clean-up campaign which followed among the new members of the royal order.

Naval Reserve Officers Will Train on Ships

Naval Reserve officers of Southern California will have fifteen days of training on board the dreadnaughts of the Pacific Fleet, under instructions just received by the commandants of the Eleventh and Twelfth Naval Districts. Commander A. H. Woodbine, in charge of Naval Reserve activities for the Los Angeles District, will select the officers from the Southland who will be assigned to this new duty.

The men will go aboard the battleships in time to participate in the battle practice of the Pacific Fleet, which begins on the drill grounds of the Channel Islands on the 16th inst. Dreadnaughts on which the Reserve officers will serve during their fortnight's training include the Pennsylvania, New York, Arizona, Mississippi and Oklahoma.

The same policy for the training which was inaugurated for the Atlantic Fleet this fall will be followed in the Pacific Fleet. East Coast Reserve officers served on board Atlantic Fleet battleships throughout the entire program of target practice and maneuvers just completed off the Delaware Capes.

Naval Officers and Wives Will Present Comedy

Booth Tarkington's "Clarence" is to be presented by the officers of the Los Angeles Harbor Submarine Base and their wives on the afternoons and evenings of the 13th and 14th inst. The production, directed by Clarke Grenaille, is for the benefit of the San Pedro chapter of the Navy Relief and will be staged in the auditorium of the San Pedro High School.

Rehearsals and preparations are already under way. The cast of characters will include Mrs. Eric L. Barr, Mrs. Carlyle Craig, Mrs. L. F. Small, Mrs. B. S. Brown, Lieut. Bertram J. Rodgers, Lieut. Carlyle Craig, Lieut. B. P. Flood, Lieut. W. M. Percifield, Ensign B. S. Brown, Lieut. L. F. Small.

LEGION TO ENTERTAIN

The Hollywood Post, American Legion, will have an open meeting tonight at it's clubhouse. All the members of the American Legion in Los Angeles and their women relatives and friends are invited. There will be vaudeville entertainment including singing, dancing and other stunts. The program will be under the direction of Ernie Shields of the Paramount Productions.

Mines, former Police Commissioner, as chairman of the citizens' executive committee which will work to secure support for the amendment.

The advisory committee will be announced within a few days. A general committee of firemen and policemen who will work with the citizens' committee includes the following:

Assistant Fire Chief F. C. McDermott, chairman; Lieut. L. L. McClary, police department, secretary; George Danbala, treasurer, together with Lieut. C. J. O'Neill, fire department; Sergt. J. A. Phillips, Sergt. J. A. McCaleb and Sergt. Peter McGann, representing the police department. Capt. R. L. Heath, as chairman, and G. A. Lynch, a former member of the California Assembly, will direct the speakers' committee.

EXTRA WORK THIS WEEK FOR BLEDSOE

Judge Trippet's Ill Health Floods Former's Department With Work

The proceedings in the local Federal court this week will be confined to Judge Bledsoe's department, as Judge Trippet's health is not such as will permit him to hold court now. He may return to the Loma Linda Sanatorium for further treatment. Both calendars will be called by Judge Bledsoe today.

As Judge Bledsoe has been engaged the past three weeks trying liquor cases, he has arranged to take up the civil docket this week, when litigants who have been awaiting the disposition of asserted violations of the liquor laws may be heard.

The disposition of prohibition cases has not been satisfactory from the government point of view recently. Under the law, the Federal court is allowed to comment on the testimony, which Judge Bledsoe has failed to do. The result has been either a disagreement of the jury, or acquittals.

TANKS ERECTED TO HOLD SURPLUS OIL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KOSSE (Tex.) Oct. 1.—Besides the regular pipe line run from the discovery well of the Humphreys Oil Company at Kosse, steel tankage is being erected to care for an enormous quantity of surplus production.

In the test of the well's possible output a few days ago, an actual showing of 9000 barrels in twenty-four hours was made. This record is regarded as all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the flow was throttled down to one-fourth of the full capacity during the entire period of the test.

The secure position in which the company is placed in regard to future production is due to the fact that the discovery well is situated in the center of its 6200 acres of leases.

It is authoritatively stated that the company is in no hurry to develop the new pool. Wells will be drilled only as the oil may be needed and as conditions may best warrant production.

COUNTY TO CELEBRATE

Legion Posts of Orange Plan Big Event at Fullerton

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FULLERTON, Oct. 1. — All of the cities of Orange county will join in the celebration of Armistice Day, November 11, in this city. The plan eliminates rivalry and it is believed will have the effect of producing a mammoth celebration.

Former Secretary of the Treasury, William Gibbs McAdoo will be the principal speaker of the day. The first of a long series of events planned for the celebration will be a parade in the morning in which all of the cities of the county will join with the religious, civic and fraternal organizations in a line of march that, it is announced, will extend over a distance of five miles.

An elaborate evening program has been planned which will be participated in by some of the leading operatic stars of the country. The events of the day have been arranged to combine gaiety in the celebration of the victory at arms and one in solemn observance by the American Legion men for their comrades who fell in France.

Items on Oil, Mining and Business News.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY

You are politely requested to submit samples carefully wrapped and taped, with letter accompanying, stating what tests are desired, and leave attach the letter to the samples. Make sample of small size. There is no necessity for big chunks. Correspondents offering matter for analysis with card, or scrap of paper, intended to show that the stuff is from Jim Jones, for instance, with no marks of identification on samples, will hereafter receive no attention. Analyses are made free of charge.

Three Samples

NEEDLES, Sept. 10.—Question: I am sending you three samples; please analyze them for me. They come from the Turtle Mountains and thirty-five miles from Needles. The regular ore of the district is extremely rich in gold, but the samples enclosed have set us guessing as they are different. No. 1 was picked up in placer form on a mesa. Some say it is meteoric iron; others, that it is Hubnerite. Nos. 2 and 3 have us all going! You mentioned in a recent issue of The Times that there was good prospecting south of Needles. Let me say that the locality is a prospector's paradise, but strangely it is practically undeveloped. In the eastern end very rich gold is found and it seems that there is a ledge on every little knoll. In the west end copper and silver ores appear together with such as sample No. 1. I am interested in the samples sent you and desire to find out what they are; their uses and their value—if any. I find your department very interesting to read.

H.

Answer: The samples are representative of the iron ores at the locality referred to. No. 1 is not of meteoric origin, and it is not Hubnerite. It is on the order of the iron ores, in part, of the old Iberg mines at Klinefelter's switch, where hematite (iron peroxide) ores often yield over $100 per ton gold. The sample is altered magnetite now, in part hematite, and a color of free gold was obtained therefrom. No. 2 is composed of biotite (black mica) and Ripidolite. Iron present with aluminum silicate. No. 3 is a mixture of red and yellow iron oxides; lead sparingly present.

Not Radioactive

FLAGSTAFF (Ariz.) Sept. 11.—Q.: I am mailing you under separate cover two samples (a black and a yellow) of a material which I find together in a sedimentary formation on the painted desert. Please tell me what they are and if they carry any value.

M.

A.: The black coating on the quartzitic sample shows traces of cobalt. It is a variety of wad (bog-iron and manganese.) A slight sulphur reaction noted in analysis. The yellowish concentrates; mixed with black, are not of carnotite. The sample is not radioactive. Silica (sand) is present with iron oxides and iron sulphate; traces of chromite, and ilmenite. The prospect should be looked over carefully for ores of uranium.

Eight Samples

BISHOP, Sept. 12.—Q.: Kindly tell me the nature of the samples I am sending you. No. 1 is the upper outcrop of a vein. No. 2 is the same ledge with outcrop 100 feet lower down than No. 1. No. 3—a, b, c, d and e, are from an open cut in a branch of the same vein over 200 feet down the hill from No. 1. What manner of solutions might have made them, and is there manganese present? No ledge appears to be in a contact between lime and a schist; part of the outcrop is from No. 1; some of it in the other. No. 4 is gangue of a gold-milling ore; is it iron carbonates or what? does it contain any manganese? No. 5 is a mottled sample from just under the surface. I shall appreciate any information given.

"PROSPECTOR."

A.: Sample No. 1 is silicious limonite. No. 2 silicious hematite. No. 3-c limonitic scoria. No. 3-a is limonitic and calcareous scoria. No. 3 is chalcedony (quartz) containing vuggs holding manganese-iron amygdaloids; limonite and hematite present. No. 4 is limonite and hematite with iron carbonate and calcite; manganese absent. No. 5 is calcite with many contents of No. 3, and 3-d is botryoidal calcite with limonite and silica. No. 4 carries more or less Jasper.

The manner of solutions referred to by you were probably red-hot and commingling with old-time calcite.

Correspondent will oblige this department of The Times by not sending more than four samples at one time.

Uranium Absent

ENCINITAS, Sept. 13.—Q.: The samples carry uranium phosphate slightly radioactive. Locality, Imperial county, California. It is different than the uranium ores of Colorado and New Mexico, and it acts like a beauxite. If pulverized and placed in water there is a salty taste developed. Is the saltish taste a radium ore? T.

A.: The samples are far from any ores of uranium. They are silicious, and contain hydrous magnesium silicate; aluminum silicate and a little pinkish halloysite. The saltish taste is that of common salt (sodium chloride,) and there is no beauxite in any of the specimens.

Salines in Part

BEATTY (Nev.) Sept. 14.—Q.: I am sending you three samples, and will be much pleased to know contents of each.

B.

A.: No. 1 is altered silicious rock; aluminum silicate present with potash traces; a little gypsum; sodium sulphate, and chloride. Boron indicated. No. 2 appears to be a whitish altered rhyolite, in part kaolinised. No. 3 carries quite a per cent of aluminum silicate; kaolin present. Magnesia found, and microscopic black mica in the mass. Traces of salt, and boron indicated.

A Mixture

MONOLITH, Sept. 14.—Q.: I am sending small sample of silver and lead ore from mine near Lone Pine. Kindly let me know if it contains any values. Thanking you, I am cordially.

J.

A.: Darned doubtful silver ore! The sample reacts for quartz. Zinc-lead more or less present. Hematite (micaceous iron) noted, with scale and other ilmenite (titaniferous iron.)

Concentrating Ore

CHINO, Sept. 15.—Q.: Will you please advise me as to whether or not the accompanying rock contains a mineral of commercial value—or just what does the thing contain anyway? The color and weight and the presence of iron (pyrite) made me think the rock might be of some value.

W.

A.: The quartzitic rock carries more or less iron, manganese and chromite. A fairly good sized pyrite is scattered, sparingly, throughout the rock. This pyrite is slightly auriferous and if you can find a higher per cent of pyrite in further finds you will then have a concentrating ore of good commercial value for acid manufacture, sulphur, and so forth.

Salines and Clay

PASADENA, Sept. 15.—Q.: I think samples contain aluminasilica. Test for potter's clay. There are three samples accompanying this letter.

G.

A.: The two samples tied together "From Kern county" react for aluminum silicate and more or less hydrous magnesium silicate. In both specimens there is a low per cent of potter's clay. Fuller's earth sparingly present.

The third specimen somewhat resembles one of the samples above described in texture and appearance, but not in fineness of substance. It is a mixture of feathery gypsum; a trace of "cotton ball" (Ulexite,) and sodium sulphate with carbonate. The samples were not numbered or tagged.

Some Mixture

DARWIN, Sept. 15.—Q.: Being an old subscriber to The Times will you please let me know what the samples contain. Thanking you for the favor and the big help of your paper.

A.

Mixed Minerals

ALBUQUERQUE (N. M.) Sept. 1.—Q.: I am sending you two samples; had both assayed for gold and silver with negative results. No. 1 is quite heavy and I would like to know if there is any metal in it and what to have it assayed for. No. 2 comes from the same claim. When pulverized and washed shows some white metal—what can it be?

K.

A.: The samples represent substances of doubtful commercial value. No. 1 reacts for lime carbonate with manganese and iron oxides in low percentage. No. 2 is on the same order of No. 1, but on one side there is a natural polish on the surface caused by rock movements in the earth; this polished rock is known to the mining boys in the hills as "slickensides" and is of that variety carrying a little graphite. The metal-bearing crystals you refer to are micorscopic pyrite. In low percentage throughout the rock.

Gems Probably Near

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 16.—Q.: I send you today under separate cover sample of ore from a fissure vein in the granite in the eastern part of San Diego county. Would you consider it of sufficient value to warrant the spending of a reasonable sum of money in development work? The vein is about three feet wide.

G.

A.: The sample is of interest to mineralogists for collections of specimens. It is chiefly hornblende with some pyroxene. Uniaxial mica (Lepidomelane) present with low values in lime and silica. Knowing nothing whatever of the ledge, other than the one sample, it is not well to give advice on development, etc.

Mexican Firm Making Effort to Revive Well

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MINATITLAN (Mex.) Oct. 1. — An effort is being made to revive the 20,000-barrel well of the Mexican Aguila (Eagle) Oil Company near here. It was brought in on Dec. 8, 1921. It flowed four hours at a rate of 5000 barrels an hour, and then sanded up.

The fact that this big production was obtained at a depth of 2006 feet after the company had drilled and abandoned seventeen wells in the same field at depths ranging from 500 to 1100 feet, makes it practically assured that an oil pool lay at the greater depth.

An offset well to the 20,000-barrel well was brought in a few days ago with a flow of 2500 barrels of 37 gravity oil a day. This well is 2005 feet deep and it is to be drilled deeper in the belief that larger production may be obtained. The Mexican Aguila (Eagle) Oil Company owns outright a tract of several hundred thousand acres of land upon the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, embracing the new field and a vast scope of adjacent territory.

The first oil wells to be drilled in Mexico were near the location of the present exploitation activities. It was during the reconstruction of the National Tehuantepec Railroad, about thirty years ago, that engineers discovered indications of petroleum. Shallow wells were drilled and each yielded a few barrels of oil.

ORDER REPORTED FOR HUGE CONCENTRATOR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AJO (Ariz.) Oct. 1.—New Cornelia is reported to have finally completed its plans for a 5000-ton concentrator and to have awarded a contract for the erection of the necessary structure. The company still has several years' supply of carbonate ores for treatment by the electrolytic process. It has a tremendous tonnage at a greater depth of sulphide, for which a process has been evolved that will give very close extraction. Much of this sulphide is on land purchased several years ago from the Ajo Consolidated Company. It now is being developed and by the time the mill is completed, mining arrangements will have been perfected for extraction at low cost and carriage directly to the mill bins.

COAL PRICES DROP

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ARKON, Sept. 30.—It was reported yesterday that the coal price in Akron had taken another small drop. One reason ascribed was that thousands of employees in industrial plants were being supplied with coal by their employers at fair prices.

Seek Valuable Ore Deposits in Strange Butte

Phenomena Presented by Hole Have Long Puzzled

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FLAGSTAFF (Ariz.) Sept. 20.—It is now denied that Meteor Mountain, otherwise known as Crater Butte, Coon Butte and Franklin's Hole, was created by the impact of a solid body from the heavens. This adverse view is expressed by N. H. Darton, of the United States Geological Survey, who has been mapping that section of the state for the University of Arizona.

He states his opinion that the crater was formed by an explosion of steam through the Coconino sandstone and not by a meteoric smash, and in support especially refers to the failure of efforts to locate any large mass of iron by means of magnetized deflection instruments. Man similar blow holes are said to have been found in parts of the world.

This crater is about 4000 feet wide and 600 feet deep, with a lip that rises 150 feet above the surrounding plain, in all presenting phenomena similar to that which would be known were a heavy rock to be thrown into mud. The bottom of the crater is filled with what appears to be a quicksand, composed of minute particles of silica that has been changed into glass by enormous heat and pressure. The rim rock is cracked and shattered for a mile from the crater's edge, as well as upheaved.

Efforts to locate a meteoric mass in the center of the crater have failed, and exploration now is being conducted by an eastern corporation by drilling through the rim rock, as a new theory gives the meteor a slant when it hit the earth. Small pieces of meteoric iron are said to have been encountered in drilling, these of the same kind found scattered for miles around on the plain, but there has been denial of reports that any considerable iron mass had been reached.

The exploration now in progress, while of large scientific value, is a very businesslike speculation for the mass, if found, will contain about 8 per cent nickel, together with a number of other very valuable minerals, while the iron, as shown by the samples already found, is of the very highest quality.

OIL MEN AWAITING ELECTION

Revival of Drilling Held Probable After November Contest Ends

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 1.—Despite the low price of oil at the present time, petroleum operators in the Central California fields look for a revival of drilling activities after the November election. Just what effect the election will have to bring about the predicted revival has not been revealed, but many oil field workers who have been laid off during the past three months are still clinging to the hope that the fields will again open up and their hope is said to be backed up by word from official sources.

During the past week but two new wells were started in Kern County, these being in the old reliable fields, the Midway and Sunset.

In the Midway the North American Oil Consolidated spudded in its No. 1 well on section 32, 31-24 and it is said this well will be followed by several others.

The Lakeview No. 2 Oil Company has started drilling its No. 6 in the Sunset on section 4, 11-23 where its recent success has prompted the concern to forge ahead with its development program.

The Pacific Oil Company is redrilling its No. 61 well in the Elk Hills on section 25, 30-24.

In the Coalinga field the York Coalinga Oil Company has started to deepen its No. 4 well on section 6, 20-15, while in the same field the American Petroleum Company is carrying on similar work in its No. 13 well on section 30, 20-15.

Tests of water shutoff in the Kern county fields during the past week numbered two, the work being done by C. J. Berry on section 34, 12-24 and the McCutcheon Oil Company on section 2, 11-24, both being located in the Sunset district.

GALENA LEDGE FOUND IN ARIZONA MINE

In the Sunshine mine, sixty miles southwest of Tucson, at sixty feet depth, has been developed a strong 12-inch ledge of galena. At another point a 3-foot face shows values of over $100 in silver, gold, lead and copper. The mine is owned by S. W. and E. M. Purcell of Tucson and is being operated by Asa Permar.

Cuts the World's Whiskers

The American safety razor is given the credit of having conquered the Spanish beard. On account of the heaviness of their beard, the Spanish men generally shave much less than those of other countries and the result was they presented a rather unshorn appearance. The visit to the barber was a serious matter and the Spaniard selected his barber as other men would select a dentist, the one that was least painful. But the American safety razor is said to have overcome this and the men are not only enabled to shave themselves, but to shave more frequently.

NEW BRANCH OF BANK TO OPEN TODAY

Institution Ready to Give Complete Service in Second Pasadena Location

Today marks the opening of the second branch of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank in Pasadena. It will be known as the Oak Knoll Branch. It is located at Colorado street and Oak Knoll avenue. The branch will offer complete banking facilities, and upon completion of its new vault will conduct an up-to-date safe deposit department. Work is progressing rapidly and it is expected that the vault will be ready for use shortly.

The Oak Knoll branch will be managed by Edwin M. Walbeck, who is well-known in Pasadena, having been connected with the Union National Bank, now the Pasadena Branch of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, for some time. Although having enjoyed varied business experience, Mr. Walbeck has been in the banking business at intervals ever since his graduation from school. Prior to coming to Pasadena he was manager of the new business department of the Fourth Street Bank in Louisville.

R. W. Caspers, also a former employee of the Pasadena branch of the bank, will be the assistant manager. Mr. Caspers has been employed by the Anglo & London, Paris National Bank in San Francisco, the First National Bank of Fresno, the Fidelity Trust and Savings Bank of the same city, now the Fidelity Branch of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, and the Union Trust and Savings Bank, now the Pasadena Branch of the same institution.

COURSE NOT FEARING WAR

Oscillations Are Traced to Reparations

Electric Stocks Untouched by Bear Movement

War Loans Aided by Drop in Interest Rates

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Uncertainty in the course of external developments was the keynote of the oscillating tendencies on the bourse during the last week, the movement on each day showing contradictions. There was some selling after the rumors of a Turkish advance toward Chanak, but subsequent information may have induced simultaneous buying in Paris and London. These collective movements reflect less the fear of eventual difficulties than the perpetuation of present complexities. The psychological atmosphere of France is not yet adapted to the peace of even a small war in the east. Sentiment here, as well as in Italy, favors making such an eventuality impossible, and the problem consequently is not the fear of going too far, but rather of not going far enough to avoid a conflict.

REPARATIONS FIRST

The underlying economic question for the moment remains the reparations problem; and the extension of the industrial entente between the firms of France and Germany to replace cash payments. This would largely reduce borrowing requirements for 1923 and act as a stimulus on French exporters, who will gradually learn to seek markets abroad instead of in the devastated regions.

It is an encouraging feature of the bourse that the stable securities, such as the electrical stocks and railroad and government securities, have been generally unaffected by the adverse influences.

ELECTRICS HIGH

The prospective electrification of railroads and other industries compensates for the coal-shortage to sufficiently to account for the popularity of the electrical stocks.

BOURSE NOT FEARING WAR

REPARATIONS FIRST

ELECTRICS HIGH

The prospective electrification of the railroads and other industries is responsible for the coal-shortage factor sufficiently to account for the popularity of the electrical shares.

The war loans have been favorably affected by the prospect of a drop in interest rates, which are still high in France, Belgium and Holland. The expected issue in October of 5,000,000,000 francs of 6 per cent of five-year treasury notes has also had a favorable influence, because the only large direct loan of the year will be short-termed and will not compete with the perpetuals.

ARIZONA TESTING SOIL ACID

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Sept. 30.—There is probability of agricultural extension of the market for sulphuric acid manufactured here by the Calumet and Arizona Mining Company. Manager John C. Greenway has donated 100 pounds of acid for delivery at Casa Grande to representatives of the agricultural department of the University of Arizona, for use on ten tracts of ten acres each, in the treatment of hardpan and alkaline soils.

Soil Chemist Vinson will analyze the soils. The acid will be applied by Irrigation Engineer G. E. P. Smith, and Assistant Agronomist Stanley P. Clark will have charge of the crops grown during the experiments. There will be careful study of the problems whether sulphuric acid will correct the alkalinity and whether its application will be profitable.

President Walter Douglas of New York is making an inspection of the Phelps-Dodge mines and works of the Southwest. He is accompanied on the trip by three of his daughters, the party lately returning to their Coast residence at Santa Barbara from a vacation trip through the Yellowstone National Park.

More ore is being shipped from Tombstone to Douglas than at any time during the past two years, nearly all of it is from leases on the Bunker Hill properties, owned by the Phelps-Dodge corporation.

The well-known Morning Glory mine, near Mowry, is shipping ore to the Copper Queen smelter, and is installing new and heavy machinery, with the expectation of shipping a carload a day. The Morning Glory ore is of a character sought by the smelter.

STERLING HURT BY TURK CRISIS

Near East Reports Dominate All Exchanges

British Defense Preparations Keep Taxes Up

Speculation Active Despite Ominous News

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Near East crisis has completely dominated the stock markets and exchanges during the last week, each closely following the latest reports bearing on the situation. The net result of the week was to hammer the exchanges, including sterling, still lower, and to leave the most barometric stocks weaker.

Quite aside from the apprehension as to Britain's position should a new war break out in the Near East, there is uneasiness over the cost of military and naval preparations already undertaken, which early in the week were reported as £20,000,000 already. Whether or not this number is accurate, military measures of preparedness have cost enough to make sure that even with the strictest economy in budgeting there will be no further reduction in the income tax next spring.

Private advices from Moscow have curbed some of the optimism felt regarding the Russo-Asiatic deal with the soviets for the restoration of its properties, as it now seems probable that the Russian ratification of the Urquhart contracts will be attended by a sharp political struggle. It has also been confirmed that following several meetings, representatives of the Royal Dutch, Standard and Shell oil companies have agreed to act together in dealing with Russian oil concessions and in negotiations with the soviets.

OIL DEALS IN AIR

The question of Russian oil has not been in the foreground recently, but it is learned that following denials that agreements had been reached with the soviets at Genoa, the oil companies have not attempted to renew negotiations with Moscow.

The underwriting of property at Constantinople and other parts of the Near East has continued briskly throughout the week, although by Friday the demand seemed somewhat abated. The fact that war-risk insurance costs 10 per cent monthly may have some connection with the slackening demand.

A matter which deserves more than cursory attention is the effect the report of the Indian fiscal commission, just issued, has had upon the Lancashire cotton interests. Basing their optimism on expert knowledge and the enormous difficulties facing Ghandi's home-weaving disciples, British cotton manufacturers were not much exercised over the spread of the Nwaraj sentiment.

MILLS AIDED

Now that India is able to impose tariffs, however, it becomes a matter of dealing with Bombay mill owners rather than a few scattered peasants, and these manufacturers obviously are exerting influence to exclude foreign competition. Several representative journals of the Midlands are beginning to ask whether Indian home rule means the exclusion of British products, but the manufacturers themselves rely upon the financial and labor difficulties which would attend any large-scale attempt to extend the local Indian mills, as they estimate that it would take at least twenty years before India could produce enough cotton goods for home requirements.

RICH VEINS DISCOVERED IN OATMAN

Arizona Mine Develops Good Gold Ore on Two Levels; Seams Thick

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Sept. 30.—There is report from Oatman that the Tom Reed Mine has struck wonderful gold ore on the Telluride vein, while the assays now being secured from the Aztec section are notably high. On the 400 level ore is found running up to $400 a ton, in a drift now about 125 feet from the Telluride sideline. This same good ore has been encountered on the 500-level to the width of about fifteen inches and its depth is assured by the fact that in the Telluride the seam has been found 150 feet still deeper. This Aztec section of the Tom Reed is considered its very best at the present time.

Oatman Gold is very close to a high grade vein in a crosscut that has been driven about forty feet through mineralized rhyolite, carrying values running from nothing up to about $20. The vein approached, the Hammond, is expected to have an average value of at least $40.

The Highland mill has shipped its first carload of concentrates. The plant is reported to be working well, with a large percentage of extraction. The property embraces the famous old Golconda, once one of the heaviest shippers of zinc in the State.

Placer mining is being prosecuted in Gold Gulch, near the old Silver Creek camp. At one point an incline shaft has been driven to bedrock at seventy feet and drifts have been carried through gravel, wherein heavy gold has been found running something better than $1 a yard. Plans are being made for more economical development and for the working of the bedrock pay dirt by more modern methods.

SHOVELS AT LOW GRADE ORE LEVEL

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

JEROME (Ariz.) Oct. 1.—United Verde steam shovels have entered low-grade converter ore on the 300-foot level and now have about 400 feet more before the glory hole will be entered. This will tak the larger part of the winter with the present removal of 2500 yards a day, it is said.

Shea, at seventy-five feet below the 800-foot level, has found sulphides sampling $40 value per ton across four feet at the bottom of the shaft. The mineral showing is so good that a station will be cut out 900 feet and drifting will be started.

From Copper Chief comes the report that exploration to the southwest is opening a new and very valuable ore body.

The Corporation Commission has authorized the sale to A. K. Gallaudet, Phoenix broker, of 500,000 shares of Verde Jerome stock at $1, this to provide money for development work. In addition, 375,000 shares will be exchanged for mining properties and for promotions. Gallaudet gets 110,029 shares for services and for the transfer of options, 50,000 shares go to Thomas Smart and 75,000 to R. L. Wright for claims transferred and 193,301 shares to the United Verde South Extension Mining Company for eleven unpatented claims.

There has been record of transfer by Louis S. Cates to the United Verde Extension Mining Company of seven mining claims, a part of the Hull property, of which a major portion went to the United Verde.

The Arizona Power Company has sued the Big Ledge Copper Company for power delivered to the Henrietta mine at Huron. W. W. Lytzen, for the past three years superintendent of the Big Ledge, has been appointed receiver.

In the Bannie mine near Prescott there is report of the finding of a streak of ore assaying up to $500 a ton.

The Surprise Gold Mining Company of Prescott has made declaration of trust for sale of units to a possible amount of $1,500,000. A. M. Notton, Harry Bell and L. J. Rinehart have been named as trustees.

WAR MENACE HITS MARKET

Imaginations Paint Dismal Pictures

Prolonged Advance in Prices Also Factor

"Boom in Trade" Fails to Materialize

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—It is probable that the real character of the financial situation and of the financial markets as reflecting that situation will not be clearly defined until in one way or another the curious political episode in Southeastern Europe shall itself have disappeared as the main unsettling influence.

The effect which that diplomatic and military clash has exerted on financial markets has resulted plainly enough from the wide field which the news gave for the play of uneasy imagination. Even unpleasant facts perhaps would have been less disturbing to the markets than absolute uncertainties.

How much of the past week's decline on the stock exchange was actually due to the Turkish affair, how much to disappointment over the slowness of trade revival and how much to reaction which was to be expected after the year's prolonged advance in prices, it might be difficult to say.

In the case of the stock market, the position before the recent decline began was to be measured not merely by the rise in prices from the low point of the year, but by the rise since the end of June, when the railway shopmen's strike was about to begin and when the continuance of the coal strike beyond all previous expectation was to alter the aspect of that question. The common statement is that prices held firm in the face of these disturbing influences but the actual fact is that they had risen 5 or 10 per cent above these mid-year figures almost before the strikes were over.

Evidently this must have been in anticipation of something more than settlement of the strikes; for business conditions, even if no worse than they had been before the labor situation became acute, were at all events no better. The advance in the stock market during the late summer was probably based on expectation of still easier money and of an autumn "boom in trade."

Easy money is still present as an influence but the question of early and vigorous trade expansion has become at least more debatable. To this aspect of the situation the reaction on the stock exchange must be at least partly ascribed; it would naturally be accentuated by the "European war talk."

The bond market presents an interesting problem. Investment demand and investment values are always tested by the changing conditions of an autumn season, and it was well understood that the course of the market this season would be determined by three special influences—the action of money rates, the revival or absence of revival, in business activity and the supply of new investment securities. Experience of the past half dozen years has shown that the last-named consideration exerts less of an immediate influence on prices of existing bonds than might possibly be imagined.

For instance, the decline which occurred in the bond market during the war, when a wholly unexampled amount of new government loans were being placed, was trifling when compared with the same market's decline in the two years after the armistice, when war financing had come to an end.

The reason was that in war time the general rate for money was kept down—artificially, no doubt, but none the less effective—and that the interest yield on the newly issued war loans was lower as a rule than on outstanding high-grade bonds, whereas in the immediate after-war period, open market money rates were abnormally high and the new securities put out by governments and corporations offered the highest interest yield which investors had obtained in more than a generation.

So, too, in the bond market of the first half of this present year, the amount of new securities put out was far greater than those placed a year before. But the offerings came on a rapidly falling money market, and at a time when prolonged reaction in general trade had released in immense sums for their ordinary channels the private capital of business men and the resources of the banks. This capital was a bidder for both new and old securities. Despite the magnitude of new investment offerings, the demand was greater than the supply.

Mexico Issues Many Permits for Oil Wells

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—The Mexican government has issued thirty-two oil well drilling permits to the Mexican Petroleum Company since September 1. It is stated that the locations for the proposed wells are for the most part in wildcat territory. It is also indicated by permits which have been recently issued to other companies that wildcat drilling campaigns will soon be under way in many widely separated parts of the country.

All of the larger companies, including the Mexican Aguila (Eagle) Oil Company, the Mexican Gulf Oil Company, the Transcontinental Oil Company and the International Petroleum Company, have acquired lease holdings in the States of Tabasco, Campeche and Chiapas, in far Southeastern Mexico, and have been issued permits by the government to drill wells thereon.

Explorations for oil are to be made on a large scale all the way from the Rio Grande border to the Guatemala line, following the Gulf coast, according to information received by government authorities here.

STORAGE EGGS PLENTIFUL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

OMAHA, Oct. 1.—Low prices for butter and eggs during the coming winter is indicated in the Bureau of Markets report which states that a survey of the storage surplus shows an increase of 1,560,704 pounds of creamery butter, 93,903 cases of eggs and 880,463 pounds of broken eggs over the figures last year at this time.

WALL STREET NEWS

BY MONITOR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—So far as the reactionary tendency of the market in the last week is concerned, there is a disposition here to attribute the hesitancy and occasional sinking spells primarily to the overbought position of the market itself. Although the Near Eastern crisis, with its lurking potentialities of gravest import, may have provided excuse or momentum and the rise in the call money rate may have furnished its contribution to the sum of uneasiness, it is felt that any other adverse element in the situation might just as easily have been seized upon to give the development a satisfactory explanation.

Individual tactics, according to gossip, have played their part in producing the recessions. Here and there, in various quarters of the market, stories have been current to the effect that insiders were not pleased over the character of their following in certain issues, and that a shakeout would be acceptable.

These phases of the situation concern only the mechanics of the market and bear only a passing relation to the fundamentals that furnish the mainsprings of big movements. In an underlying sense, the attitude toward the future of the market abounds with optimism. It is conceded that Europe is struggling in the ruck of disorganized finances and economic dislocation. There is no disposition to ignore the magnitude of this handicap. Nevertheless, it is believed that the domestic situation contains so much of economic and industrial strength that for a time at least the working out of our own problems will be accompanied by little hindrance through the slow recovery of Europe. This does not necessarily mean that American financial and industrial policy has embarked on a career of isolation, but it does mean that for the time being our own rehabilitation will keep us busy and to our own advantage.

The basis for this assumption is the immense amount of postponed constructive work that must engage the nation's energies. Our building program is by no means completed; a vast amount of railroad equipment must be provided, and other industrial enterprises of the first magnitude have ambitious programs mapped out. Meantime, with labor more fully employed, with crops abundant and prices fairly remunerative, domestic trade is experiencing the pulse of increased purchasing power. Retailers are becoming more active in anticipating their requirements.

It seems pertinent at this time also to reconsider the possibilities of governmental financing and its effect upon the national economy. The settling of the soldiers' bonus question and the passage of the tariff bill have cleared the ground and possibly laid the corner-stone for a market that would provide the background for governmental financing operations.

Government notes outstanding June 22, 1922, amounted to $6,738,122,180, exclusive of Pittman certificates and special certificates. The total of Victory notes (4¾s) to be paid off on December 15 is about $1,000,000,000. An issue of $150,000,000 matures October 15, and in addition to the Victorys there is a maturity of $143,000,000 in certificates on December 15. Including these issues, the total which must be retired before July, 1923, is around $3,500,000,000. This includes $625,000,000 of War Savings certificates called for early in 1923.

An example which may be used as a guide to the probable Treasury policy is found in the August offering of Treasury 4 1-4 per cent notes. This issue was oversubscribed four times, and after being traded in advanced to a yield basis of 4.14 per cent. The ready success of this offering, which was to run for four years, may influence the Treasury in favor of comparatively long-term financing.

One item worthy of special emphasis is the turn in the tide of demand for commercial loans as reflected in the charts of the monthly review of the New York Federal Reserve Bank. The August chart shows the continuation of the long decline starting in 1921 and carrying the total of commercial loans from above $3,000,000,000 down to $2,000,000,000, as of the end of July, 1922. In August the turn came, and the volume of commercial loans suddenly increased, and after dropping slightly below the $2,000,000,000 mark, the trend shifted upward. It is fair to assume that September has registered a still greater expansion, as some markets centering here, notably textiles, have broadened out considerably since the ending of the coal and rail strikes, and industry is demanding more working funds, expressed in terms of confmercial credit.

This may account partly for the easing in the Liberty group in the past week, as banks naturally would prefer to sell these bonds on which they have a substantial profit and where the yield is not large, rather than dispose of recently purchased railway and industrial securities where the prospects for further appreciation are more pronounced. In some quarters, it is believed that Libertys above par may have registered the apex of the present movement.

It is believed here that fears of an acute car shortage are not warranted, despite the fact that a slowing down in the operations in some of the steel mills already has been reported. The possibility of further curtailment is based on the belief that railroad equipments will not be adequate to the demands placed upon it, particularly for the movement of coal and heavy freight.

Roughly speaking, the total of coal cars of all types is about 1,000,000. Of these approximately 840,000 are in good condition. Making the most liberal allowance for the present coal movement, we have probably 650,000 cars in current use for coal. This is an apparent surplus, but the discrepancy is explained by the fact that many of these cars, chiefly of the twelve-inch sideboard type, were in use by the steel industry and for lumber, building materials and heavy machinery, and they have not yet been returned. As these cars are released they will drift back into the coal trade and with a relaxation of some of the priority regulations the situation will be much easier.

This is merely another instance of the manner in which troublesome obstacles are being overcome through the necessity of solving our problems in a common-sense manner.

You Tell 'Em "Wells Fargo"

It's Hard to "EXPRESS"

Just how very confident I am that I will pay bigger on my two wells on my six-acre lease at Santa Fe Springs than was ever paid before on any oil investment in California.

Folks, you know sometimes they do pay big—

Four years ago last month I was walking down the main street of a small town adjacent to one of our big oil fields, of this Great United States, when my attention was attracted to a man with a blackboard on the sidewalk, offering for sale shares in a well that was then drilling nearby. I listened to his story. The territory looked fair for a well—the capitalization was reasonable, but what really sold me was the fact that I knew, personally, the contractor that was doing the drilling, and I knew if the grease was down there this "BIRD" would put it in the tanks. I had just $700 even, in the world. I decided to shoot $400 of it, so walked over to the bank and drew out that amount, but on my way back I weakened, and ended up by only shooting $100. 18 days later this well blew in flowing 3600 barrels a day! 4 days later again the well and property was sold to one of the Big Companies. I drew out $3172 for my bit, so you see, "you never can tell."

I honestly believe the opportunity that I am offering you today, to place a bet on me is much more favorable for big returns on a very small investment, than any other oil offer I have ever seen submitted, and I want you to know that I believe this so strong that I am betting my bankroll, this time, right down to the oil sand, dollar for dollar with you. Think it over. I'll promise you the squarest run for your money you ever have had or ever will have.

Mail your check to me today or run in and meet me personally.

Barrington Says:

Whoever heard of a successful business man joining with mushroom promoters and handing his money over to be spent and prospected with?

If the successful man wants to prospect with his money he will do the prospecting himself, if he wants to try out any new scheme he will either do it himself or associate with others of his kind and do it with concerted action. The successful man will always put his money in well-known enterprises, especially financial enterprises, where his money is not spent, but loaned. He wants to and always will associate himself with successful men. He will not associate himself in business deals with failures, has-beens and the never-was-man. By always tying up with success he meets with success and thus avoids failure. Nothing succeeds like success. Financial institutions succeed. This one will, anyhow. The men managing it have succeeded, they stand well, and if you will associate some of your dollars with their dollars, they will use their knowledge and efforts to make the combination succeed, which means money for all.

Names Painted on Rocks Mar Scenic Beauty

The defacement of natural scenery in the Angeles Reserve by the painting of names on cliffs and boulders, has been brought to the attention of R. H. Charlton, forest supervisor. In three cases, notices have been sent to the parties whose names so appear, that they must remove the writing within ten days or suffer the consequences.

The regulations of the Federal forestry department prohibit the defacing of the forests by painting, scratching or otherwise marring the surface of boulders, cliffs, trees, etc.

In Bear Valley alone, commercial signs, sufficient to fill two motor trucks, were torn down by the forestry officers and given to the campers and lot owners for firewood.
